

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

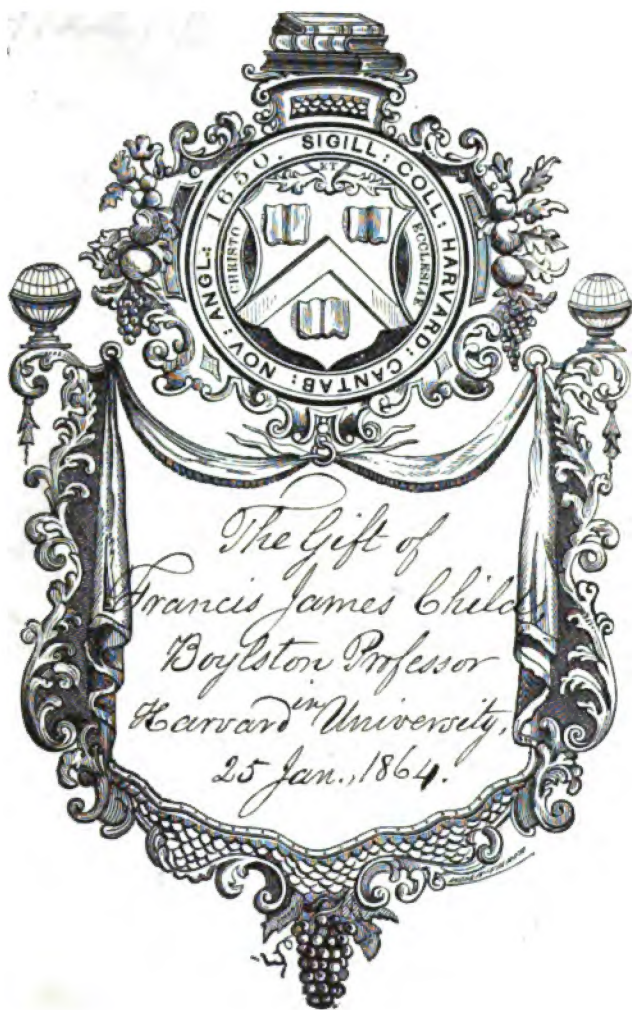

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

P R E F A C E .

THE preparation of a text-book for the study of the Latin, similar to that edited by me, some twelve years ago, on the German, has since that time been repeatedly suggested to me by various persons interested in the progress of education. Years however elapsed before I could even think of entering on such a task, partly on account of other time-absorbing occupations, partly because I felt, in common with many others, some hesitation to undertake the somewhat delicate part of treating a so-called dead language like a living organism, yet in vogue as an element of national existence. It was not until after I had completed what I considered myself bound to render, as professor of a modern language in the city of New York, that I could give the question a serious consideration; and in the winter of 1854, after my secession from the University of that city, some of my leisure hours were devoted to the collection and construction of exercises similar to those contained in my edition of Ollendorff's German Method.

These tentatives, which were commenced for recreation merely, and without any direct reference to publication, were some months after again suspended and postponed indefinitely. I had, however, proceeded far enough to convince myself perfectly of the feasibility of the plan, and felt assured, that, if the student in this practical pursuit of a new language would find a pleasure at all commensurate with the satisfaction I myself experienced in my attempts to explore and point out the road to him, my task would prove a promising and successful one.

It was under this conviction, that, in the spring of 1856, I again took up my papers, and resolved to begin the work in earnest. I accordingly revised and enlarged upon what I had already collected, until my materials amounted to ten fascicles of phrases and exercises, of about the extent of those contained in my edition of Ollendorff's German Method. Soon after, I concluded an arrangement for the publication of a complete practical Grammar of the Latin upon the basis of these preliminary studies, and after many months of new researches both into the theory and practice of the language, the final result has been the volume now offered to the inspection of the public.

But although it was intended that the book should upon the whole pursue the course indicated by the methods on modern languages now almost exclusively in vogue, and to make constant repetition and the perpetual construction of connected sentences and phrases from English into the language to be acquired the chief exercise of the student, yet I could not make up my mind to surrender system to mere empirical practice to the extent to which this is done by Mr. Ollendorff. My aim was rather to sacrifice nothing of the theory, to leave no point of grammar unexplained or unconnected, but to make the student advance with equal pace from practice to theory, and from theory to practice, until he makes himself the master and conscious possessor of the entire structure of the language, as far at least as this can be effected by a Grammar.

I have therefore commenced with the simplest elements, and with exercises which a child even could comprehend and learn from repetition or dictation. As the course advances, and the rules of construction come gradually more and more into requisition, the syntax commences, of which I have prefixed connected portions to each lesson, to be committed either entirely or in part, as the student progresses with his exercises. I have thus succeeded in incorporating by degrees a complete syntax of the language, to the rules of which perpetual reference is made in subsequent parts of the book, and with which the student must become familiar before he can reach the end of the volume. In regard to the etymology, I have naturally treated the declension of substantives, adjectives, and pronouns in the first lessons. These, with the practice given, are soon completely in the power of the learner. But the doctrine of the gender of substantives, the declension of Greek nouns, the derivation of adjectives and adverbs, &c., which would only have embarrassed and retarded the student in the beginning, are deferred until nearly the close of the book. With the verbs I have proceeded in a similar manner. I first give only the present tense active, then in another lesson the passive, and in a third the present of deponent verbs. A general outline of the formation of tenses follows, in Lesson XXVIII., from which the student is referred to the paradigms of conjugation on pages 664-665, which may be read and committed, as in ordinary Grammars; but in the regular order of the book, he learns and applies only one tense at a time, on which he practises until he is fit for another, and so on to the end.

I have retained the division into Lessons, as the most suitable arrangement for a book of this description. A strict separation of the etymology and syntax, and a connected scientific treatment of the principles of grammar, however desirable in themselves, would have destroyed the characteristic feature of the method, which begins with sentences instead of isolated vocables, and thus applies the simpler principles of construction at the very outset. It is however by no means intended that those divisions called Lessons should be the task invariably assigned to the student. The judgment of the teacher must in all cases determine the proper pensum of the learner, according to the capacity or proficiency of the latter, and that may sometimes be more, and perhaps oftener less, than the pensum of the book, which is not unfrequently considerably longer than the average lessons in similar manuals on modern languages.

In the use of the book care should be taken to keep the main design steadily in view, which is the writing and memorizing of the exercises appended to each lesson. In these the student applies directly the principles already acquired, and undergoes as it were a daily self-examination on what has gone before. Hence it is much more important that he should properly attend to those, than that he should be kept too long upon the mere mechanical committing of barren lists of words, or of rules which, without application, always remain a dead letter in the memory.

Much benefit can be derived from the guidance of the instructor, whose aid in reading over the advance lesson, in explaining and removing difficulties, in separating the essential points from those of minor importance, will not fail to contribute greatly to the encouragement and rapid progress of his studiosi. As in many lessons of the book the principles advanced are far from being exhausted in the exercises at the end, the teacher or scholar can easily expand them by adding others similar to those given, — a practice which cannot be too strongly recommended.

To insure a correct pronunciation, I give directions at the very beginning for the accentuation of Latin words, and in the examples preceding the exercises, as well as in those given under the principal rules, the use of the accent is practically exhibited. To enable the student to accent according to the rules set forth in the first lesson, the quantity of all the words given in the vocabularies, as well as of those declined or conjugated, is indicated with almost lexicographical minuteness. In this respect I have rendered what I think is found in no other Grammar of the Latin, and am persuaded that this system, without which we can scarcely conceive of a correct pronunciation, will commend itself to the approbation of all competent to judge upon the subject.

As many of the exercises relate to the familiar talk of daily intercourse, it has sometimes become necessary to designate objects either entirely unknown to the Ancients, or known under a different form. The words employed for this purpose are either modern, as coffea, tabacum, bibliopegus (bookbinder), or else genuine Latin terms, but employed in a sense somewhat different from that in which they occur in classical Latinity, as, for example, calceus for our "shoe," pileus for our "hat," speculum for our "looking-glass," &c. To prevent misunderstanding or confusion on this subject, all the words of this description are marked, as modern or applied to objects of modern life, with an asterisk before them; e. g. coffea*, pileus*, &c.

I have one word to add with reference to the syntax. This important part of grammar has been treated much more comprehensively than one might suppose from its somewhat disjointed appearance. The subject of agreement, the syntax of the oblique cases, the use of the infinitive, the somewhat complicated doctrine of the subjunctive, and other equally important topics, are developed as fully as in many Grammars of larger size or greater pretensions, and it is hoped that on this point nothing of any moment will be found omitted. All the rules and remarks are illustrated by numerous examples carefully selected from the classical authors of antiquity. The examples under the rules are separated from the rest of the book by a different arrangement, the Latin on the right and the English on the left, while in the general oral exercises this order is inverted. The book is thus expected to carry its own authority in itself, and to justify the imitative combinations and constructions adopted in the exercises. The doctrine of questions is fully developed and elucidated in Lesson LXXXV.; the order or arrangement of words and sentences, in Lesson XCVII. Both these lessons the teacher will do well to consult before he sets his students to work.

In the elaboration of this volume, I have availed myself of the best authorities which a long acquaintance with the philology of modern Germany had made familiar to me. On the etymology I have freely used Zumpt; on the syntax, the somewhat larger and completer manuals of Ramshorn and Krüger. On the orthography of words, and on the subject of quantity, I am chiefly indebted to the last edition of Dr. Georges' Lateinisch-Deutsches Hand-Wörterbuch (Leipsic, 1855). On the use of the particles I have, besides the authorities already mentioned, examined a number of other sources, especially the original treatise of Tursellinus. For correct Latin equivalents for the English terms and constructions employed in the book, I have diligently consulted the German-Latin Lexicons of Scheller, Kraft, and especially the more recent work of Georges. On doubtful or difficult points I have also had an opportunity to consult the more comprehensive works of Freund, Facciolati and Forcellini, and several others. From these authorities I have, however, adopted nothing but what I could justify by classical examples and analogies, and I have given no Latin equivalents for English terms or phrases, without testing them by comparing all the connections in which they are recorded as occurring in the classical writers. The subject of questions and answers I myself examined by a careful reading of the comedies of Terence, from which I had made numerous extracts before I was in possession of the sources from which I afterwards derived what I have advanced upon this point in Lesson LXXXV.

I have thus had rather a redundancy than a lack of materials on the majority of topics connected with the theory of grammar, while on the practical application of many principles, I was more than once forced to the reading of my Terence or my Cicero in order to obtain the desired light. — In this connection I have publicly to express my obligations to several gentlemen of Cambridge for their politeness in extending to me the privileges of their valuable University Library, to which I am indebted for several of my authorities.

I submit now the result of my somewhat protracted and by no means trivial labors to the candor and enlightened judgment of the classical scholars of America. As to the plan I have pursued, although it aims at nothing short of a radical change in the teaching of the language, I scarcely feel as if it needed an apology. The plan of learning a language by writing it, is not only the surest, but the only, road to its complete acquisition. Methods analogous to this, though unrecorded, must have been employed by those who have used, and who to some extent still use, the Latin as a medium of written communication, and not unfrequently with an elegance that reminds us of the Ancients. Let the reader think of an Erasmus, of Ficinus, of the learned family Stephanus, of Calvin, and other luminaries of the age of the revival of letters and of the Reformation, of others who have since reflected light and strength from the manly literature of ancient Rome. I think experience will prove, that the labor of acquisition, if not easier, will at any rate be more attractive and remunerative, with the method here proposed, which makes the student assist as it were in the production of his Latin, instead of forcing him to lay up barren lists of words or unproductive rules.

I have in conclusion to add, however, that the course here pointed out does not by any means pretend to be the ultimate goal of the journey to be pursued. No method in the shape of grammar, or manual of any kind, can teach completely any language, ancient or modern. It can only be acquired by familiarity with those written monuments, which are at once the flowers and conservatories of the idioms, in which they breathe a life immortal. Of these the Romans have left us many of imperishable excellence, to which we must ever point as the most perfect exponents of their language, as the armories of the Roman mind. And these are yet to add wholesome vigor to the intellect of youth, and consolation to the failing strength of age.

ADLER'S

NEW LATIN METHOD.

Lesson I. — PENSUM PRIMUM.

INTRODUCTION.

A. LATIN GRAMMAR, considered as a science, has for its object the investigation of the laws which govern the forms and the construction of the language. When destined for the practical purposes of instruction, it becomes the art of learning to read, write, and speak the Latin language with correctness.

OF THE ALPHABET.

B. The letters of the Latin alphabet are twenty-five:— A, a; B, b; C, c; D, d; E, e; F, f; G, g; H, h; I, i; J, j; K, k; L, l; M, m; N, n; O, o; P, p; Q, q; R, r; S, s; T, t; U, u; V, v; X, x; Y, y; Z, z.

Letters are divided into vowels (litterae vocales) and consonants (litterae consonantes).

The sound of vowels is complete in itself, whereas that of consonants becomes distinct only in conjunction with a vowel.

OF VOWELS AND DIPHTHONGS.

C. The simple vowels of the Latin alphabet are six: a, e, i, o, u, y. To these may be added the double vowels or diphthongs ae (æ), ai, au, ei, eu, oe (œ), oi, and ui.

1. The vowel y (ypsilon) is only found in words adopted from the Greek, as Cyrus, tyrannus, syngraphus.

2. The diphthongs ei, oi, and ui occur only in a few interjections, such as hei, eia, vici, hui, and in dein, proin, huic, and cui, when these words are contracted into one syllable.

3. The diphthong eu is found in words originally Greek, and in the Latin ceu, seu, heu, heus, neu, and neuter.

4. Respecting the proper sounds of these vowels, there is at present no uniformity of usage, the common custom in vogue among the different nations of Europe being that of following the analogy of their respective vernacular idioms. This has given rise to a diversity of pronunciations, among which the English and the Continental are the most conspicuous. The following table exhibits the difference between the English and the German sounds of each of the vowels, both long (—) and short (˘) :—

ENGLISH SOUND.		GERMAN SOUND.
a	māter, mannā*	ā always āh, ă as in am .
e	dēlēo, fessus	ē like a in fate , ě as in fre
i, y,	finis, mirābilis	ī like ee in keen , ĩ as in fin .
o	corōnā, dōmīnus	ō as in bōne , ȳ as in shone .
u	ūsūs, dūmīvir	ū like oo in moon , ũ the same sound short.
ae	Caesar, caestus†	like ā in fate .
ai	Māia,‡ aio	broaden, with the sound of both vowels.
au	aurum, causa	like ou in house .
ei	eia, omneis	like i in shine .
eu	Orpheus,§ neuter	nearly like oi in foil .
oo	poena, foedus	like the French eu in feu .
ui	huic, cui	like ooi rapidly sounded.

REMARK. — In the above examples, the learner is expected to sound the vowels as he would under similar circumstances in English words.

OF THE CONSONANTS.

D. The consonants are divided into liquids, mutes, and double consonants.

The liquids are l, m, n, r.

The mutes comprise the remaining simple consonants of the alphabet, with the exception of the sibilant s.

The mutes are again subdivided, with reference to the organ by which they are pronounced, into labials (v, b, p, f), gutturals (g, c, k, qu), and linguals (d, t).

* A final is generally sounded broad, like ah; but this is not prolonged unless the vowel is long, as Musa = Musāh, but Musā = Musāh.

† In the diphthongs ae and oe (which are also printed æ, œ) the sound of e (long) only is heard.

‡ But ai is also written aj, as Achaja, Maja, &c.

§ This may become, by diæresis, Orphēus, gen. Orphēi. The same is true of other vowels usually treated as diphthongs, as Laius, Laërtes, &c.

|| Pronounced in English hike, ki.

The double consonants are x and z (called zeta). The former combines the sounds cs, the latter ds.

E. The power of these consonants is upon the whole the same as that of the corresponding English letters. Nor are there as many international discrepancies of pronunciation as in the vowels. The following remarks will illustrate their force more particularly:—

1. C before a, o, u, or a consonant has the hard sound of k, as caput, cultus, clavis; and before e, i, y, ae, ei, eu, and oe the soft sound of s, as Ceres, civis, caelebs, coelum.*

2. Ch has the force of k, as pulcher, machina.

3. G before a, o, u, or another consonant is likewise hard, as in English, e. g. garrulus, guttus, gleba; but it is soft before e, i, y, or another g, e. g. gener, gingiva, gypsum, agger.†

4. H is a mere aspiration, and not regarded as a consonant. In some words it is either expressed or omitted, e. g. have or ave, ahenum or aënum, mihi or mi.

5. The ancient Romans made no distinction of form between the consonants j, v and the vowels i, u; but the same characters I and V had sometimes the power of vowels and sometimes of consonants.

6. K has now become a superfluous letter, and is only used in certain abbreviations, as K. for Kaeso; Kal. for Calendae.

7. M at the beginning or in the middle of a word is sounded as in English. But m final, when preceded by a vowel, was not so distinctly pronounced by the Ancients. Hence, when the following word commenced with a vowel, the m final was either entirely silent (in poetry always so) or regarded as a mere connecting link between the vowels.

8. Q occurs only in connection with u followed by another vowel, as quum, qui, coquus.

9. S has upon the whole the same power as in English. Among the older Latin writers, however, it seems to have had the stronger sound of ss, as they wrote cassus, caussa, accusso, &c., instead of the later casus, causa, accuso.

10. Ti and ci short, when followed by another vowel, are generally sounded like shee, as in Horatius, nuntius, justitia; Fabricius, novicius, &c. But ti retains its proper sound, a) when the i is long, as in istius, totius; b) when the t is preceded by an s, x, or another t, as in ostium, mixtio, Bruttii; c) in words originally Greek, as Miltiades, Aegyptius; d) before the er of the infinitive passive, as nütier, flectier, &c.; e) at the beginning of a word, as in tiara.

* It is, however, probable that the Romans once sounded the letter c always like k, as the Greeks did. But the above distinction is too old and general to be disregarded.

† But in words of Greek origin it retains the hard sound of the original γ, as gigas, gigno, &c.

OF THE HIATUS.

F. The concurrence of two vowels, either in the middle of a word or at the close of one and the beginning of another, gives rise to what is called an hiatus.^{*} This the Romans avoided, especially in poetry, a) by the contraction of the two vowels into one long one, as in audisti for audiisti, deprēdo for deprehen-do,^{*} &c.; b) by Synæresis, i. e. by pronouncing the two vowels rapidly like a diphthong, as dēinde, huic, omniā; and c), when the hiatus occurred between two words, by the elision (i. e. by the suppression in reading) of the final vowel of the first word, as in atque ego, sapere aude, which as thus elided read atqu' ego, saper' aude.

OF SYLLABLES.

G. A syllable may consist either of a single vowel or diphthong, or of the union of a vowel or diphthong with one or more consonants, e. g. o-vum, du-o, i-ste, con-stans.

1. The Latin language generally tolerates no more than two consonants at the end of a syllable or word; when there are three, the last is always an s, as in stirps.

2. Nor does a syllable commonly commence with more than two consonants, except where at the beginning of a word sc, sp, and st are followed by an r, or where in the middle of a word one of the letters c, p, or s is followed by a mute and liquid, as scri-ptor, spre-tus, stri-ctim; do-ctrina, clau-strum, i-sthmus, magi-stri, corru-ptrix.

3. The division of words into syllables may be regulated by the following laws:—

a) A consonant between two vowels belongs to the last, as e-go, pa-ter, so-ror.

b) The consonants which may begin a Greek or Latin word (according to Remark 2) belong together in the division of a word into its component syllables, as pa-tris, i-gnis, a-ctus, o-mnis, i-psi, pa-stor, po-sco, fau-stus, sce-ptum, ca-strum, &c.

c) Combinations of consonants which never occur at the beginning of a word are treated according to the analogy of the rest, e. g. Daphne, rhy-thinus, smara-gilus, &c.

^{*} The h, not being regarded as a consonant, does not prevent the hiatus. In verse this is equally true of m final, so that multum ille et is pronounced mult' il' et, &c. In a similar manner the older Latin poets elided the final s of the terminations us and is, but only before consonants, as nuntius' mortis for nuntius mortis, &c.

d) Compounds are usually divided according to the parts of which they are composed, as ab-est, abs-condo, inter-sum, ob-tuli, red-eo, &c. But where the composition is uncertain or obscure, or when the first component has lost a part of its original termination, the division is effected as in simple words, e. g. am-bages, ani-madverto (contracted for animus adverto), long-aevus, po-tes (for potis + es), &c.

4. Words consisting of one syllable are called monosyllables; those of two, dissyllables; and those of more than two, polysyllables.

OF THE QUANTITY OF SYLLABLES.

H. The quantity of a syllable is the relative time occupied in its pronunciation. It is upon this principle that the entire fabric of Latin versification depends.

Every syllable is either long (—), or short (—),* or common (=), i. e. sometimes long and sometimes short, as amāvi, lēgērē, volūcris.

1. A syllable is long by nature, when its vowel is naturally long, as causa, concido; it is long by position, when its vowel is followed by two consonants or a double consonant, as stirpis, sermo, discessit.

2. All diphthongs and such simple vowels as have originated in a contraction are by nature long, as caedo, proelium, audax; cūgo (from coāgo), būbus (for bovibus).

3. A vowel before another vowel is commonly short, as mēus, dēa, pīus, vēho.

4. A vowel before a mute and liquid is common, as lūcrum, tenēbra, tonitrus.

5. The quantity of the simple vowels under other circumstances can only be determined by the authority of the poets, and is commonly given in the Lexicon. The rules respecting the quantity of final syllables, &c. belong to Prosody.

OF THE ACCENT.

I. Accent is the peculiar tone or emphasis with which a particular syllable of a word is uttered.

Every Latin word has one principal or leading accent, and only one.

The leading accent is either the circumflex (^) or the acute (').

* The short syllable being taken as the unit of measure, the pronunciation of a long syllable would occupy double the time of a short one.

There is also a subordinate accent called the grave ('). But this denotes rather the absence of the principal accent, and is scarcely used. In words of several syllables, the last syllable but one is called the penult or penúltima (sc. syllāba), and the last but two, the antepenult or antepenúltima.

The place of the accent is determined by the following laws:—

1. Monosyllables have the circumflex, when their vowel is long by nature, and the acute, when their vowel is short by nature or long by position, as flōs, spēs, mōns, fōns, but ārs, dūx, fāx, pārs.

2. In words of two syllables the accent is always on the penult, and it is a) circumflex, when the penult is long by nature and the last syllable short, as jūris, lūcē, mūsā, spinā; but b) acute under all other circumstances,* as fōcūs, hómō, villā, āxis, dēus, mūsā.

3. Words of three or more syllables are accented either on the penult or on the antepenult:—

a) When the penult is short, the antepenult has invariably the acute, as accēdēre, caēdēre, hómīnēs.

b) When the penult is long by nature and the last syllable short, the former has the circumflex, as humānūs, amāssē, audiſse.

c) When the penult is long by position, or when the last syllable is likewise long, it has the acute, as modéstūs, edúctus, humánūs.

4. The antepenult is the limit of the accent, and polysyllables are all treated like words of three, e. g. poēmátibus, Constantinópolis, solicitudínibus.

5. Some words are entirely unaccented, as ne, que, ve, ce. But these never appear alone, being always appended to other words, of which they often change the place of the accent,† e. g. musáque, musáque, habēsne, pleráque, &c.

6. The quantity of a word being given (as it commonly is in Lexicons), its accent can be easily determined according to one of the above rules. — The beginner should carefully distinguish between quantity and accent, which in Latin are not only distinct, but often apparently at variance. The former is the principle of versification, the latter the indispensable condition of a correct pronunciation and the very soul of living discourse.

OF THE PARTS OF SPEECH.

J. The words of the Latin language, arranged according to their signification, may be reduced to nine classes, usually called parts of speech, of which five are inflected, and four invariable.

* That is, 1) when both syllables are short (fōcūs, hómō); 2) when the first is short and the second long (dēus, mūsā); 3) when the first is long by position only (āxis, villā); 4) when both are long (mūsā).

† This is generally thrown back upon the next syllable preceding them.

1. The declinable parts of speech are : Substantives or Nouns, Adjectives, Pronouns, Verbs, and Participles.
2. The indeclinable are : Adverbs, Prepositions, Conjunctions, and Interjections. All these are termed Particulae or Particles.
3. To these classes may be added the Gerunds and Supines, two forms of verbal substantives peculiar to the Latin.

OF DECLENSION.

K. Nouns and adjectives are said to be declined, and their inflection is called Declension. Verbs are said to be conjugated, and their inflection is called Conjugation.

In the declension of substantives and adjectives, the relations of Gender, Number, and Case are indicated by certain changes of termination.

Latin nouns have three genders, the Masculine, Feminine, and Neuter ; and two numbers, the Singular and the Plural.

They have six cases : the Nominative, Genitive, Dative, Accusative, Vocative, and Ablative.

The Nominative is, as in English, employed as the subject of a finite verb.

The Accusative corresponds upon the whole to the English Objective.

The remaining cases serve to express various relations, which in English are usually denoted by such prepositions as of, to, for, with, by, &c.

There are five different modes of inflecting substantives, called the first, second, third, fourth, and fifth declensions. These are distinguished from each other by the termination of the genitive singular, which in the first declension is ae, in the second i, in the third is, in the fourth ūs, and in the fifth ēi.

Lesson II. — PENSUM ALTĒRUM.

OF THE FIRST DECLENSION.

A. The first declension comprises all substantives and adjectives which form their genitive in ae. The nominative of such of these words as are of purely Roman origin ends in ā, that of a few Greek words in ē, ēs, and ās. Those in ā and ē are mostly feminine, the rest are masculine. The singular of a noun in ā in connection with mĕa, "my," and tŭa, "thy" or "your," is thus inflected:—

NOM. my paper	mĕā chartā
GEN. of my paper	mĕae chartae
DAT. to or for my paper	mĕae chartae
ACC. my paper	mĕām chartām
VOC. O my paper	mĕā chartā
ABL. with or by my paper	mĕā chartā.
NOM. your table	tŭā mensā
GEN. of your table	tŭae mensae
DAT. to or for your table	tŭae mensae
ACC. your table	tŭām mensām
VOC. O your table	tŭā mensā
ABL. with, from, or by your table	tŭā mensā.

So decline taenā, fasciā, hōra, penna.

REMARK.—The a of the ablative of the first declension is always long, and sometimes printed ā.—But in all other cases of words declined, the final a is generally short, as chartā (Nom.); candelabrā, candlesticks; templā, temples.

N. B.—In the vocabularies of this Grammar the quantity of every Latin word will be given, and the paradigms of inflection will show the quantity of the different case-terminations. From these data the student will accent according to the Rules of Lesson I., page 6. Examples of the application of these principles of accentuation are furnished in the phrases of each Lesson.

Have you?

{ Habēsne ? * Num habēs ?
{ Ēstne tibi ? An habēs ?

Yes, Sir, I have.

{ Ita est, † dōmīne, habēo.
{ Sanē quidem, dōmīne, est.

Have you the hat?

{ Habēsne (tū) pilēum ? †
{ Ēstne tibi pilēus ?

* In asking questions, the Romans usually employed certain signs of interrogation, of which the most common are the enclitic ne (always affixed either to the verb or to some other word of the sentence), the particles nūm, an, ecquid, numquid, utrum, nonnē, &c.—The enclitic ne and ecquid can be used in questions of every description, whether the expected answer be affirmative or negative; num and numquid, only when it is expected to be "no"; nonnē, only when it is to be "yes"; an and utrum chiefly in double questions.

† The most current Latin adverbs corresponding to our English "yes" are: etiam (= even, even so), vērō (indeed), rectē (you are right), certē (certainly), itā, itā est, sic est (it is so), sanē or sanē quidem (indeed, surely), immo or immo vērō (yes, yes). But the Romans frequently reply by a simple repetition of the verb or of the emphatic word of the inquiry, e. g. here with a simple Habēo and Est.—The ceremonious use of a word like our "Sir" was unknown to the ancients. To dōmīne, however, the vocative of dominus (master, lord), there can be no objection.

‡ The Romans have no article. Its place is in certain cases supplied by a Yes, Sir, I have the hat.

{ Sic ést, dómíne, hábeo pílĕum.
Étíam, dómíne, ést míhi pílĕus.

B. Obs. The verb hábeo, being transitive, is followed by the accusative of the object, and the neuter verb ést by the nominative.

The pen.	*Penna, ae, f.
The ribbon.	Taenia, ae, f. ; fascia, ae, f.
The table.	Mensa, ae, f.

The salt.	{ Sāl,* gen. sālís, m., acc. sálem.
	{ Sāl, gen. sālís, n., acc. sāl.

C. Obs. Words of the neuter gender have the nominative, accusative, and vocative, singular and plural, always alike.

		Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
My.	{	NOM. mĕŭs	mĕā	mĕŭm.
	{	ACC. mĕŭm	mĕām	mĕŭm.
		Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
Thy (your).	{	NOM. tŭŭs	tŭā	tŭŭm.
	{	ACC. tŭŭm	tŭām	tŭŭm.

D. RULE. Adjectives and adjective pronouns agree with their substantives in gender, number, and case. Thus:—

My sugar.	Méum sácchārum (Nom. & Acc.).
My hat.	{ NOM. pílĕus méus (m.), pílĕum méum (n.).
	{ ACC. pílĕum méum, or méum pílĕum.
My pen.	{ NOM. méa pénna, or pénna méa.
	{ ACC. méam pénnam, or pénnam méam.
Your salt.	{ NOM. sāl tŭum (or m. tŭus).
	{ ACC. sāl tŭum, or tŭum sāl.

Have you my hat?

Have you my ribbon?

Habésne taéniam méam?

I have your ribbon.

Hábeo tŭam taéniam.

demonstrative pronoun, by unus, one, aliquis, some one, &c. But ordinarily the distinctions expressed by our articles must be mentally supplied from the context. — The learner will also notice the omission of the pronouns égô, tŭ, which the Latin language employs only for the sake of emphasis or contrast.

* The substantives pílĕus and sāl have two forms, i. e. the masculine and neuter, without any difference of signification.

Have you the pen ?	{ Ěstne tibi pěnnā ?
	{ Habēsne pěnnam ?
I have the pen.	{ Ěst mihl pěnnā.
	{ Háběo pěnnam.

EXERCISE 1.

Have you the table? — Yes, Sir, I have the table. — Have you my table? — I have your table. — Have you your pen? — I have my pen. — Have you the sugar? — I have the sugar. — Have you my sugar? — I have your sugar. — Have you the paper? — I have the paper. — Have you your paper? — I have my paper. — Have you the salt? — I have the salt. — Have you my salt? — I have your salt.

Lesson III. — PENSUM TERTIUM.

OF THE SECOND DECLENSION.

A. The second declension comprises all substantives and adjectives which form their genitive in i. The terminations of the nominative are ūs (generally masculine, sometimes feminine), ēr, ir (masculine),* and um (neuter). Examples: —

Měus dōmínus, m. , my master .		Liber tŭus, m. , your book .
NOM. my master	měūs dōmínūs	your book	libēr tŭūs
GEN. of my master	měi dōmínī	of your book	librī tŭī
DAT. to my master	měō dōmínō	to your book	librō tŭō
ACC. my master	měum dōmínum	your book	librūm tŭum
VOC. O my master	mī † dōmíně	O your book	libēr tŭe
ABL. with my master	měō dōmínō.	with your book	librō tŭō.

Sacchārum bōnum, n., good sugar.

NOM. the good sugar	sacchārum bōnum
GEN. of the good sugar	sacchārī bōnī
DAT. to the good sugar	sacchārō bōnō
ACC. the good sugar	sacchārum bōnum
VOC. O good sugar	sacchārum bōnum
ABL. with the good sugar	sacchārō bōnō.

* To these must be added one adjective in ur, viz. satŭr, satŭra, satŭrum, sated, satisfied.

† This vocative is sometimes měus and sometimes mī, after the analogy of proper names in ius, which have always i, as, Virgilius, Virgili; Horātius, Horāti; so also filius, fili; genius, gēni.

Like dominus decline pīlūs, pannus, ēquus, calcēus, and all nouns and adjectives of this declension which end in ūs. After the manner of liber, decline āger, culler, fāber, māgister, &c.; * like sacchārum, all neuters in ūm, as aurum, cōrium, lignum, plumbum, &c. (Cf. Lesson IV.)

REMARK 1. The final i of the genitive of this declension, and of Latin words generally, is long; except in mīhi, tibi, sibi, where it is common (i).

2. The final o of the dative and ablative singular of this declension is always long. But in Latin words generally it is common, as sermō, amō, hābēō.

		Masc.	Fem.	Neut.

Which sugar?	{	Quōd sācchārum? (Nom. & Acc.)
	{	Quīd sācchāri? (Nom. & Acc.)

* Some nouns (and adjectives) in er retain the e in the genitive, and have ēri instead of ri, as gēner, gēnēri, a son-in-law; pūer, -ēri, a boy; liber, -ēri, free, &c. — Vir, a man, has vīri, and so its compounds, as decemvīr, -vīri; kōtr, -vīri.

† Mālus is said of persons, and is morally bad; vilis chiefly of things worthless; nēquam of persons and things both.

‡ Diphthongs receive the accent upon the second vowel.

B. Obs. The interrogative quod is always used adjectively, and agrees with its noun in gender, number, and case; quid is more like the English what? and is either used independently or has its noun in the genitive. — The masculine which? is more commonly qui than quis when a substantive is expressed with it.

Have you good sugar?	Estne tibi sacccharum bonum?
Yes, Sir, I have good sugar.	{ Sane, domine, est mihi sacccharum bonum.
Have you the fine ribbon?	Habesne taeniam pulchrum?
I have the fine ribbon.	Habeo taeniam pulchram.
Which hat have you?	{ Qui est tibi pileus?
I have my ugly hat.	{ Quem pileum habes?
Which ribbon have you?	Pileum meum turpem habeo.
I have your fine ribbon.	{ Quae est tibi taenia?

EXERCISE 2.

Have you the fine hat? — Yes, Sir, I have the fine hat. — Have you my bad hat? — I have your bad hat. — Have you the bad salt? — I have the bad salt. — Have you your good salt? — I have my good salt. — Which salt have you? — I have your good salt. — Which sugar have you? — I have my good sugar. — Have you my good sugar? — I have your good sugar. — Which table have you? — I have the fine table. — Have you my fine table? — I have your fine table. — Which paper have you? — I have the bad paper. — Have you my ugly paper? — I have your ugly paper. — Which bad hat have you? — I have my bad hat. — Which fine ribbon have you? — I have your fine ribbon. — Have you my fine pen? — I have your fine pen.

Lesson IV. — PENSUM QUARTUM.

OF THE THIRD DECLENSION.

A. Substantives and adjectives of the third declension have their genitive in is. The terminations of the nominative are numerous, some ending in one of the vowels a, e, i, o, y, and others in one of the consonants c, (d), l, n, r, s, t, x. This declension comprises nouns of every gender.

* In writing his exercises, the learner should be careful to select the proper case and gender of the adjectives, which must always correspond with that of the nouns with which they are to be connected. In this and the following lessons, the nominative and accusative are the only cases used.

Nouns ending in *a, e, i, y, c, l, and t are neuter.

Nouns in o, or, os, and eus are generally masculine, but sometimes of other genders.

Those in as, aus, es, is, ys, bs, ns, and ps are generally feminine, sometimes masculine.

Those in er and n are masculine and neuter.

Lāpis, m., a stone.			Vestis, f., a garment.
NOM.	a stone	lāpis	the garment	vestis
GEN.	of a stone	lāpīdis	of the garment	vestis

ABL.	with the tailor	sartōrē.	with the head	cāpūtē.

Frāter, m., the brother.			Sāl, m. & n., the salt.
NOM.	the brother	frāter	the salt	sāl	neut.
GEN.	of the brother	frātrīs	of the salt	sālīs
DAT.	to the brother	frātrī	to the salt	sālī
ACC.	the brother	frātrēm	the salt	sālēm, sāl
VOC.	O brother	frāter	O salt	sāl
ABL.	with the brother	frātrē.	with the salt	sālē or -ī

* Nouns in l are generally neuter, but sometimes masculine.

† Nouns which are sometimes masculine and sometimes feminine, according to the context, are said to be of the common gender. So adolescens and juvenis, m. & f., a young man or woman; conjug, m. & f., a husband or a wife; infans, m. & f., an infant; and a number of others. Nouns of which the gender is unsettled are said to be of the doubtful gender; as dies, m. & f., a day; penus, m., f., & n., provisions.

‡ Neuters ending in ē, al, and ar have i in the ablative instead of ē; as REMARK. The final e of the ablative of the third declension is always short, and the final i long.

		Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
	{ NOM.	Is	Ēa	Id.
It.	{ ACC.	Eūn	Ēm	Id.

B. Obs. The pronoun is, ea, id must be put in the same case and gender as the substantive for which it stands.

Not; no.	Nūn; nōn vērō, mīnīmē.
I have not.	Nōn hābēo.
No, Sir.	Nōn (mīnīme) vēro, dōmīne.
Have you the table?	Habēsne mēnsam?
No, Sir, I have it not.	{ Mīnīme, dōmīne; (ēam) nōn hābēo.
	Nōn hābēo, dōmīne, nōn.
Have you the hat?	An hābēs pīlēum?
No, Sir, I have it not.	Mīnīme, dōmīne; (ēum) nōn hābēo.
Have you the sugar?	Num hābēs saccārum?
I have it not.	Nōn hābēo.

D. Obs. The English idiom requires here id non habeo. In Latin, however, the pronoun is, ea, id is frequently omitted, when it would have to stand in the same case as the noun to which it relates.

The coat.	* Tōga, ae, f.
The cloth.	Pannus, i, m.
The horse.	Equus, i, m.
The shoe.	* Calcēus, i, m.
The thread.	Filum, i, n.
The candlestick.	Candelābrum, i, n.
The wood.	Lignum, i, n.
The leather.	Cōrium, i, n.
The lead.	Plumbum, i, n.
The gold.	Aurum, i, n.
Of.	E, ex.

E. Obs. The preposition e or ex is followed by the ablative. E can be put before consonants only, ex before vowels and consonants both.

Of gold.	Ex aurō, aurēus, a, um.
Of cloth.	E pānnō.

māre, mārī; animāl, animālī; calcār, calcārī. Except sāl, fūr, baccār, jūdār, hīpār, and nectār, which retain the ē.

F. Obs. The material of which anything is made may either be expressed by the ablative of a substantive with e or ex, or by means of an adjective in ĕus. Thus:—

Wooden — of wood.	Lignĕus, a, um.
Paper — of paper.	Chartĕcĕus, a, um.
Leather — of leather.	Scortĕus, a, um, or e cōrio .
Leaden — of lead.	Plumbĕus, a, um, or e plumbo .
Linen — of linen.	Lintĕus, a, um.
Stone — of stone.	{ Lapidĕus, a, um.

Have you the stone table?	An hábĕs mĕnsam lapidĕam?
I have it not.	(Éam) nōn hábĕo.

OF THE GENITIVE OF THE THIRD DECLENSION.

G. From the paradigms of this lesson it will be perceived, that substantives of this declension vary considerably as to the manner, in which they assume the characteristic termination of the genitive. The following rules are intended to give the learner some insight into the extent of this variation.†

1. Nouns in a change a into ĕis, as pōĕma, pōĕmĕtis, n., a poem.
2. Nouns in e change e into ĕis, as cūbīlĕ, cūbīlis, n., a couch.

* Prepositions before their cases are not accented.

† These rules, though not directly connected with the exercises of this lesson, are yet recommended to the careful attention of the student.

3. Those in *i are generally indeclinable, but sometimes have uos, as hydromēli, hydromēlitos, n., mead.

4. Those in y add ōs, as mīsŷ, mīsŷos, n., vitriol.

5. O commonly becomes ōnis, as sermo, sermōnis, m., speech. But do and go become dīnis and gīnis, as grando, grandīnis, f., hail; origo, originis, f., origin.†

6. Nouns in c, d, l, n simply add is, as hālēc, hālēcis, n. & f., a sort of pickle; David, Davidis, m., a man's name; cūbūal, cūbūālis, n., a cushion; ren, rēnis, m., the reins.‡

7. Those in ar, er, or, and ur commonly add likewise is, as nectar, nectāris, n., nectar; ansēr, ansēris, m., a goose; lector, lectōris, m., a reader; sulphūr, sulphūris, n., sulphur.§

8. Those in as generally change as into ālis, as vēritas, vēritālis, f., truth.||

9. The only nouns in aes are aes, n., brass, and praes, m., bondsman, which have aeris and praedis.

10. Nouns in aus have audis, as laus, laudis, f., praise; fraus, fraudis, f., fraud.

11. Those in es generally change es into is, as fūmes, fūnīs, f., hunger; rūpes, rūpis, f., a rock; but sometimes into ēlis, ūlis, or eris, as haeres, haerēdis, m., an heir; miles, millis, m., a soldier; Cēres, Cērēris, f., the goddess Ceres.

12. Nouns in is have commonly is, as apis, is, f., a bee; ovis, is, f., a sheep; but sometimes also ēris, inis, ūis, or ūlis, as pulvis, pulvēris, m., dust; sanguis, sanguinis, m., blood; lapis, lāpidis, m., a stone; Quiris, Quiritis, m., a Roman. — Sēmis, m., one half, has sēmissis.

13. Those in os change os into ōtis, as sācerdos, -ōtis, m., a priest; nēpos, -ōtis, m., a grandson; but also into ōdis, ōis, and ōris, as custos, -ōdis, m., a keeper; hēros, -ōis, m., a hero; rūs, rūris, m., dew.¶

14. The termination us becomes ōris, ēris, ūris, ūdis (ūlis), or ōdis, as corpus, -ōris, n., a body; opus, -ēris, n., a work; crūs, crūris, n.,

* Nouns in i and y are Greek, and so are their genitives itos and yos.

† A number of other nouns in o have likewise inis, as hōmo, a man; nēmo, nobody; Apollo, &c. — Cūro, flesh, f., has carnis, and Anio, m., the name of a river, Aniēnis.

‡ But lac, n., milk, has lactis, and those in men have mintis, as nūmēn, nūmīnis, n., the deity. Greek nouns in on have ontis and onitis, as icōn, icōnis, f., an image; Achērōn, -ontis, m., name of a river.

§ But those in ber and ter have bris and tris, as Octōber, Octōbōris; pātr, pātris, m., a father. Some in ur have ōris, as ebur, ebōris, n., ivory, &c. — Jēcur, n., the liver, has jēcūris or jēcīnōris, and hēpar, n., the liver, hēpātis or hēpātōs; cōr, n., the heart, has cordis; iter, n., a journey, itinēris, and Jūptēr, m., Jōvis.

|| Greek nouns in as have antis and adis (or ados), as gigas, gigantis, m., a giant; lampas, lampadis or lampados, f., a lamp. Other exceptions are: ās, assis, m., a coin; mās, māris, m., a male; vās, vadis, m., a surety, and vās, vasis, m., a vessel.

¶ Ūs, n., the mouth, has ōris, but ōs, n., a bone, has ossis. The genitive of bōs, m. & f., an ox or cow, is bōris.

the leg; incus, -ūdis, f., an anvil; sālus, -ūtis, f., safety; trīpūs, -ōdis, m., a tripod.

15. Greek nouns in eus have ēos, as Orpheus, Orphēos, &c

16. Nouns in ls, ns, and rs change s into tis or dis, as puls, -tis, f., a sort of pap; pars, -tis, f., a part; glans, -dis, f., any kernel-fruit; serpens, -tis, f., a serpent

17. Those in bs, ps, and ms have bis, pis, and mis, as urbs, -bis, f., a city; stirps, -pis, m. & f., offspring; hiems, hiēmis, f., winter.*

18. The only nouns in t are cāput, cāpitis, m., the head, and its compounds, occiput, -itis, &c.

19. Nouns in x change this letter into cis or gis, as vox, vōcis, f., the voice; cālix, cālicis, m., a cup; rex, rēgis, m., a king; codex, codicis, m., a book.— But nix, f., snow, has nivis; nox, f., night, noctis; sēnex, adj., old, sēnis or sēnīcis; and sūpelles, f., furniture, sūpellectilis.

EXERCISE 3.

Have you the wooden table? — No, Sir, I have it not. — Which table have you? — I have the stone table. — Have you my golden candlestick? — I have it not. — Which stocking have you? — I have the thread stocking. — Have you my thread stocking? — I have not your thread stocking. — Which coat have you? — I have my cloth coat. — Which horse have you? — I have the wooden horse. — Have you my leathern shoe? — I have it not. — Have you the leaden horse? — I have it not. — Have you your good wooden horse? — I have it not. — Which wood have you? — I have your good wood. — Have you my good gold? — I have it not. — Which gold have you? — I have the good gold. — Which stone have you? — I have your fine stone. — Which ribbon have you? — I have your golden ribbon. — Have you my fine dog? — I have it. — Have you my ugly horse? — I have it not.

Lesson V. — PENSUM QUINTUM.

OF THE DECLENSION OF ADJECTIVES.

A. Adjectives are inflected like substantives of the first, second, and third declensions. Those in ūs, ā, ūm and ēr, ā, ūm belong to the first and second declension; those in ēr, īs, ē, those in īs, īs, ē, and all the adjectives of one termination, to the third.

* But the adjective caelebs, single, has caelibis, and the compounds of ceps have ipas, as princeps, -ipis, the foremost. The genitive of anceps, doubtful, is ancipitis.

B. Some adjectives have a special termination for each of the three genders (e. g. bōnūs, ā, ūm, ācēr, ācrīs, ācrē), some have one common form for the masculine and feminine (e. g. vīlīs, m. & f., vīlē, n.), and others have but one ending (in the nominative singular) for every gender (e. g. fēlīx, divēs, &c.). The following paradigms exhibit the declension of bonus, pulcher, and turpis, in the singular.

Bōnus, bōnā, bōnūm, good.

		Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
NOM.	the good	bōnūs	bōnā	bōnūm
GEN.	of the good	bōnī	bōnae	bōnī

VOC.	O the beautiful	pulchēr	pulchrā	pulchrūm
ABL.	by the beautiful	pulchrō	pulchrā	pulchrō.

Turpīs, turpīs, turpē, ugly.

		Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
NOM.	the ugly	turpīs	turpīs	turpē
GEN.	of the ugly	turpīs	turpīs	turpīs

ACC.	the ugly	turpēm	turpēm	turpē
VOC.	O the ugly	turpīs	turpīs	turpē
ABL.	with the ugly.	turpī †	turpī	turpī.

Like bōnūs decline mālūs, ā, ūm; mēūs, ā, ūm; formōsūs, ā, ūm, &c.
 — Like pulchēr: aegēr, sick; intēgēr, entire; nīgēr, black; pīgēr, slow, &c. — Like turpīs: brēvis, short; dēformīs, deformed; dulcīs, sweet; omnīs, all; ūtilīs, useful, &c.

* Some adjectives of this declension retain the e of the root-termination, e. g. tēnēr, tēnēra, tēnērūm; miser, miserā, miserūm. But the majority reject it.

† Adjectives of the third declension have e or i in the ablative singular, but those whose neuter ends in e have i only.

C. Rule. When a substantive expresses the relation of property or possession, it is put in the genitive; as,

* Quidquam is generally put, when the sentence contains a negation (either expressed or implied), a condition, comparison, &c., and also in connection with the particles vix, scarcely, and sine, without. (Compare Lesson VI. C.)

† Esuriens and sitiens, properly the present participles of the verbs ēsurio, I am hungry, and sitio, I am thirsty. When hungry and thirsty are in the predicate of the sentence, it is necessary to use the verbs, and not the participles.

The dog of the baker.	Cánis pistôris (Nom.).
The baker's dog.	Pistôris cánem (Acc.)*.
The coat of the tailor.	Tógam sartôris (Acc.).
The tailor's coat.	Sartôris tóga (Nom.).
My brother's paper.	{ Chárta méi frâtris† (Nom.).
	{ Frâtris méi chártam (Acc.).
My neighbor's good salt.	{ Méi vicíni sál bónum.
	{ Sál bónum vicíni méi.
The old bread.	{ NOM. Pânis vétûlus.
	{ ACC. Pânem vétûlum.
The pretty dog.	Cánem béllum (venústum).
The silver ribbon.	Taéniam argéntëam (Acc.).

D. Rule. Adjectives (and the adjective pronouns meus, tuus, &c.) may stand either before or after their substantives; but when the substantive is a monosyllable, the adjective comes always last.

Have you the neighbor's good salt?	Núm hábēs sál bónum vicíni?
I have it not.	Nôn hábéo.
Have you my brother's silver candlestick?	Án hábēs frâtris méi candēlábrium argéntëum?

EXERCISE 4.

Have you the leathern trunk? — I have not the leathern trunk?
 — Have you my pretty trunk? — I have not your pretty trunk.
 — Which trunk have you? — I have the wooden trunk. — Have you my old button? — I have it not. — Which money have you? — I have the good money. — Which cheese have you? — I have the old cheese. — Have you anything? — I have something. — Have you my large dog? — I have it not. — Have you your good gold? — I have it. — Which dog have you? — I have the tailor's dog? — Have you the neighbor's large dog? — I have it not. — Have you the dog's golden ribbon? — No, Sir, I have it not. — Which coat have you? — I have the tailor's good coat. — Have you the neighbor's good bread? — I have it not. — Have you my tailor's golden ribbon? — I have it. — Have you my pretty dog's ribbon? — I have it not. — Have you the good baker's good horse? — I have it. — Have you the good tailor's horse? — I have it not. — Are you hungry? — I am hungry. — Are you sleepy? — I am not sleepy. — Which candlestick have you? — I have the golden candlestick of my good baker.

* The common rule is that the genitive (and in general every word governed) should be put before the word governing it. This, however, is by no means invariable, and the learner may safely use either of the formulas in the sense of their English equivalents.

† Instead of the possessive genitive, the Romans sometimes employ an adjective; as, dómus patrëna for dómus patris, the father's house; hómo ingéniús for hómo ingéni, a man of talent, &c.

Lesson VI. — PENSUM SEXTUM

A. The adjectives in ěr, is, ě are but few in number. The nominative masculine has sometimes is instead of ěr.

Ācěr or ācris, ācris, ācrě, sharp.

	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
NOM.	ācěr or ācris	ācris	ācrě
GEN.	ācris	ācris	ācris

ACC.	ācrēm	ācrēm	ācrě
VOC.	ācěr or ācris	ācris	ācrě
ABL.	ācrī	ācrī	ācrī

So decline alācěr or alacris, cheerful; cělēber or cělēbrīs, famous; cělēr or cělērīs, swift; sālūbēr or sālūbrīs, wholesome.

ADJECTIVES OF ONE TERMINATION.

B. Adjectives of one termination do not differ essentially from other words of the third declension, except that they may have either ě or ī in the ablative. The present participle in ns is included in this class. Examples:—

Divēs , - vītīs , rich .			Větūs , - těrīs , old .			Sitīens , - ntīs , thirsty .
	Masc. & Fem.	Neut.	Masc. & Fem.	Neut.		Masc. & Fem.	Neut.
NOM.	divēs		větūs			sitīens
GEN.	divītīs		větěrīs			sitīentīs
DAT.	divītī		větěrī			sitīentī
ACC.	divītēm	divēs	větěrēm	větūs		sitīentēm	sitīens
VOC.	divēs		větūs			sitīens
ABL.	divītě .*		větěrě or ī			sitīentě or ī

So decline fēliz, felicis, happy; paupěr, paupěrīs, poor; anceps, ancipītīs, doubtful; sollers, sollertīs, clever; prūdēns, prūdēntīs, wise; āmāns, āmāntīs, loving, &c.

REMARKS ON THE ABLATIVE.

1. Participles in ans or ens have always ě in the ablative, when they are used as participles proper or as substantives; as, sole oriente, when the sun rises; infāns, abl. infantě, the infant. But when used as adjectives, they have rather ī than ě.

* See Remark 5.

2. Comparatives have rather ē than i, as mājōr, mājōrē, greater, &c.
 3. Praesens, present, when said of things, has i; when said of persons, ē.
 4. Proper names derived from adjectives have always ē, as Clēmens, Clēmētē.
 5. Those that have ē exclusively are paupēr, sēnex, princeps, and the majority of those in es, as dives, sospes, dēses, pūbēs, impūbēs, and superstes.

Anything or something good.	{ Āliquid (quidquā m, nonnihil) bōnū m.
	{ Aliquid (quidquā m, nonnihil) bōnī .

Something bad (worthless).	Āliquid vilē (nēquā m).
Nothing bad (worthless).	Nihil vilē (nēquā m).

C. Obs. The partitive genitive of neuter adjectives after āliquid, nihil, &c. can only be used when the adjective is of the second declension. . Thus we can only say āliquid vilē, turpē, &c., and not āliquid turpīs; but indifferently either *āliquid bōnū*m or āliquid bōnī.

Have you anything good?	{ Ēstne tibi āliquid bōnī ?

	{ An hābēs āliquid turpē ?
I have nothing ugly.	{ Nōn ēst mihī quidquam turpē .

D. Obs. The English that, or the one, is, among the later Latin authors, expressed by the demonstrative illē, illā, *illū*d. By the earlier classical writers, however, the noun is either itself repeated or to be supplied from the context.

Which book have you ?

EXERCISE 5.

Have you my book ? — I have it not. — Which book have you ? — I have my good book. — Have you anything ugly ? — I have nothing ugly ? — I have something pretty. — Which table have you ? — I have the baker's. — Have you the baker's dog or the neighbor's ? — I have the neighbor's. — What have you ? — I have nothing. — Have you the good or bad sugar ? — I have the good. — Have you the neighbor's good or bad horse ? — I have the good (one).* — Have you the golden or the silver candlestick ? — I have the silver candlestick. — Have you my neighbor's paper, or that of my tailor ? — I have that of your tailor. — Are you hungry or thirsty ? — I am hungry. — Are you sleepy or tired ? — I am tired. — What have you pretty ? — I have nothing pretty. — Have you anything ugly ? — I have nothing ugly. — Have you the leather shoe ? — I have it not. — What have you good ? — I have the good sugar.

* The words included in parentheses are not to be translated in these exercises.

LESSON VII. — PENSUM SEPTIMUM.

OF THE FOURTH DECLENSION.

A. The fourth declension comprises all substantives which form their genitive in ūs. The nominative singular has two terminations, viz. ūs for masculine and feminine nouns, and ū for neuters. Examples: —

Fructūs, m., the fruit.	Cornū, n., the horn.	Dōmūs, f., the house.
NOM. fructūs	cornū	dōmūs
GEN. fructūs	cornūs	dōmūs or domī *
DAT. fructūi	cornū (cornūi)	dōmūi or domō
ACC. fructūm	cornū	dōmūm
VOC. fructūs	cornū	dōmūs
ABL. fructū.	cornū.	dōmō.

Like fructus decline adūs, access; cantūs, a song; currūs, a chariot; ictūs, a stroke; mōtūs, motion; risus, laughter; sēnātūs, the senate; sumptūs, expense; victūs, living. Also the feminines ācūs, a needle; mānūs, a hand; tribūs, a tribe, &c. — Like cornū decline gēlū, ice; gēnū, the knee; vērū, a spear; tōnitrū, thunder.

REMARK. — The final u of Latin words generally is long.

Have you my coat or the tailor's? { Ēstne tibi tōga mēa an sartōris?
Ūtrum habēs tōgam mēam an (illam) sartōris?
 I have yours. { Ēst mihī tuā.
Tuam habēo.

	{ ACC.	mēūm	mēdm	mēūm.
Yours.	{ NOM.	tūūs	tūū	tūūm.
	{ ACC.	tūūm	tūdm	tūūm.

B. Obs. The possessive pronouns mēus, tūus, sūus, &c. may either be joined to nouns in the sense of the conjunctive my, your (thy), his, &c., or they may stand absolutely, like the English mine, yours (thine), his, &c. They are inflected like bōnus, a, um. (Cf. Lesson V.)

		Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
This.	{ NOM.	hīc	hēc	hēc.
	{ ACC.	hunc	hanc	hēc.

* The genitive domi is only used in the sense of at home. The dative domi is the more usual form; but the ablative of this irregular noun is always domo.

Is this your hat ?	Ēstne híc plēus túus ?
No, Sir, it is not mine, but yours.	Mínime, dómīne, nōn ést méus, séd túus.
Is this my ribbon ?	Núm haéc ést taénia méa ?
No, it is not yours, but mine.	Nōn ést túa, séd méa.
Is this your sugar ?	Ān hóc ést sáčhārum túum ?
It is not mine, but that of my brother.	Nōn ést méum, séd méi frātris.

The man.	{ Vir,* gen. víri, m.

The friend.	{ Fāmilīāris, is, m.
	{ Nēc — nēc.
Neiher — nor.	{ Nēque — nēque.
	{ Nēque — nēc.

C. Obs. The disjunctive conjunctions nec and nēque are used in the same sense, except that the former more frequently stands before consonants and the latter before vowels.

Have you the merchant's stick or yours ?	Tēnēsne† bācūlum mercātōris án túum ?
I have neither the merchant's stick nor yours.	Nēc mercātōris bācūlum nēc túum tēnēo.
Are you hungry or thirsty ?	{ Ūtrum ésūris án sítis ?
	{ Esūrisne án sítis ?
I am neither hungry nor thirsty.	Ēgo nēque ésūrto nēc sítlo.

EXERCISE 6.

Have you your cloth or mine ? — I have neither yours nor mine. — I have neither my bread nor the tailor's. — Have you my stick or yours ? — I have mine. — Have you the shoemaker's shoe or the merchant's ? — I have neither the shoemaker's nor the merchant's. — Have you my brother's coat ? — I have it not. — Which paper have you ? — I have your friend's. — Have you my dog or my friend's ? — I have your friend's. — Have you my thread stocking or

* Vir is used with reference to the sex, and homo with reference to the species.

† Tēnēo is properly "I hold," and may be used in these exercises for variety, especially where "to have" may signify "to hold in one's hand," or "to retain, keep."

my brother's? — I have neither yours nor your brother's. — Have you my good baker's good bread or that of my friend? — I have neither your good baker's nor that of your friend. — Which bread have you? — I have mine. — Which ribbon have you? — I have yours. — Have you the good or the bad cheese? — I have neither the good nor the bad. — Have you anything? — I have nothing. — Have you my pretty or my ugly dog? — I have neither your pretty nor your ugly dog. — Have you my friend's stick? — I have it not. — Are you sleepy or hungry? — I am neither sleepy nor hungry. — Have you the good or the bad salt? — I have neither the good nor the bad. — Have you my horse or the man's? — I have neither yours nor the man's. — What have you? — I have nothing fine. — Are you tired? — I am not tired.

Lesson VIII. — PENSUM OCTAVUM.

OF THE FIFTH DECLENSION.

A. Nouns of the fifth declension have their genitive in ei and the nominative in ēs. The fifth declension differs but slightly from the third, and is a mere modification of it. Dīēs, m. & f., the day, rēs, f., a thing, and spēcīēs, f., the appearance, are thus inflected: —

NOM.	dīēs	rēs	spēcīēs
GEN.	dīēi	rēi*	spēcīēi
DAT.	dīēi	rēi	spēcīēi
ACC.	dīēm	rēm	spēcīēm
VOC.	dīēs	rēs	spēcīēs
ABL.	dīē.	rē.	spēcīē.

So decline āctēs, f., the edge or point; fūciēs, f., the face; effigēs, f., the image, effigy; mēridiēs, m., midday, noon; spēs, f., hope; sēriēs, f., the series.

REMARK. — The e of the ablative of the fifth declension is always long.

B. Obs. Nouns of this declension are feminine, except dīēs, which in the singular is generally masculine and sometimes feminine,† but in the plural always masculine. Its compound, mēridiēs, is masculine, and used in the singular only.

* The e of the genitive and dative is long when a vowel precedes, but short after a consonant, e. g. aciēi, faciēi, &c., but spēi, rēi, fidēi, &c.

† It is feminine when it denotes, 1) duration of time, e. g. diem perexiguam, integram, (for) a very short day, an entire day; 2) an appointed day, e. g. certā (constitutā, dictā, &c.) diē, on the appointed day.

The cork.	*Embōlus, i, m.
The corkscrew.	Instrumentum (i, n.) embōlis extrahendis.
The umbrella.	*Mūnimentum (i, n.) capitis pluviale; umbrāculum, † i, n.
The boy.	Puer, eri, m.
The Frenchman.	*Francogallus, i, m.
The carpenter.	Fāber (ri, m.) tignārius.
The hammer.	Mālleus, i, m.
The iron.	Ferrum, i, n.
Of iron, iron.	Ferrēus, a, um.
The nail.	Clāvus, i, m.
The pencil.	*Stilus cerussātus, i, m.
The thimble.	*Mūnimentum (i, n.) digiti.
The coffee.	*Coffea, ae, f.
The honey.	Mel, gen. mellis, n.
The (sea) biscuit.	Pānis nauticus (castrensis).
The sweet biscuit.	{ Pānis dulciārius, m.
	{ Buccellātum, i, n.
Have I?	{ Habeōne? Ecquid ego habeo?
	{ An (ego) habeo? Estne mihi?
You have.	Hābēs. Tēnēs. Tibi est.
What have I?	{ Quid (ego) habeo (tēnēo)?
	{ Quid est mihi?
You have the carpenter's hammer.	{ Mālleum fābri tignārii habēs (tēnes).
	{ Est tibi malleus fābri tignārii.
Have I the nail?	{ Habeōne clāvum?
	{ Estne mihi clāvus?
You have it.	Hābes. Est.
Have I (the) biscuit?	{ An ego habeo pānem castrēsem
	{ (nauticum)?
	{ Estne mihi pānis (ille) castrēsis?
You have it.	Hābes. Tibi est.
I am right (correct).	Vērē (rectē) loquor.
I am wrong (incorrect).	Erro.
You are correct, wrong.	Recte loqueris, erras.
I am right (i. e. morally in doing so).	Est mihi fās.
I am wrong (morally in doing so).	Est mihi nefās. ‡

* The Ancients having no term for such an instrument, it must be expressed by circumlocution. On the dative embolis extrahendis, "for extracting corks," compare Lesson XXV., Obs. — The same remark applies to munimentum capitis pluviale (where pluviale is an adjective in e), to munimentum digiti, and to a host of other names of modern objects. In all the cases, we can only approximate by description.

† The word umbrāculum (from umbra, shade) was used by the Ancients in the sense of our "parasol."

‡ The expressions vērē or rectē loquor and erro have reference to language or opinions simply; whereas fās and nefās involve the moral distinction of right and wrong in action or in speech. The latter phrases are often followed by an infinitive, as, Estne mihi fās (or licetne mihi) hoc facere? Is it right for

Am I right (i. e. correct) or wrong ?	Rectène lóquor án érro ?
You are neither right nor wrong.	Néque réctē lóquēris, néque érras.
Am I right (correct) ?	Loquórne récte ?
You are correct.	Vérē (réctē) lóquēris.
Am I right (correct) ?	Núm lóquor vérē ?

It is wrong.	Ést tibi nefās.
Which biscuit have I ?	Quód buccellátum hábéo ?
You have that of my brother.	Frátris méi buccellátum hábés.

EXERCISE 7.

Which dog have you ? — I have neither the baker's dog nor that of my friend. — Are you sleepy ? — I am not sleepy. — I am hungry. — You are not hungry. — Am I thirsty ? — You are not thirsty. — Have I the cork ? — No, sir, you have it not. — Have I the carpenter's wood ? — You have it not. — Have I the Frenchman's good umbrella ? — You have it. — Have I the carpenter's iron nails or yours ? — You have mine. — You have neither the carpenter's nor mine. — Which pencil have I ? — You have that of the Frenchman. — Have I your thimble or that of the tailor ? — You have neither mine nor that of the tailor. — Which umbrella have I ? — You have my good umbrella. — Have I the Frenchman's good honey ? — You have it not. — Which biscuit have I ? — You have that of my good neighbor. — Have you my coffee or that of my boy ? — I have that of your good boy. — Have you your cork or mine ? — I have neither yours nor mine. — What have you ? — I have my good brother's good pencil. — Am I right (correct) ? — You are right (correct). — Am I wrong (morally) ? — You are wrong. — You are not wrong. — Am I right or wrong ? — You are neither right nor wrong. — Am I hungry ? — You are hungry. — You are not sleepy. — You are neither hungry nor thirsty. — What have I good ? — You have neither the good coffee nor the good sugar. — What have I ? — You have nothing. — What have you ? — I have something beautiful.

Lesson IX. — PENSUM NONUM.

OF PRONOUNS.

A. The pronouns of the Latin language are divided into the following classes : — 1. PERSONAL : egō, tū, me to do so ? Am I right in doing so ? Illud dicere tibi nefas est, It is wrong for you to say so, You are wrong in saying so. Fas and nefas are both indeclinable, like nihil.

* Immo vero corresponds to the English "nay, rather," "nay, on the contrary."

sui (and ipse). 2. DEMONSTRATIVES: hic, iste, ille, is. 3. RELATIVES: qui, quae, quod. 4. POSSESSIVES: meus, tuus, suus, noster, vester. 5. INTERROGATIVES: quis? quid? quā, quae, quod? 6. INDEFINITE: aliquis, quis, quisquam. 7. PATRIALS: nostrās, vestrās, cūjās.

B. The personal pronouns egō, I, tū, thou, sui, of himself, of herself, of itself, are thus inflected:—

NOM.	I	egō	thou	tū	—	—
GEN.	of me	mēi	of thee	tūi	of himself, &c.	sui
DAT.	to me	mihī or mi	to thee	tibi	to himself, &c.	sibi
ACC.	me	mē	thee	tē	himself, &c.	sē
VOC.	—	egō	O thou	tū	—	—
ABL.	with me	mē	with thee	tē	with himself, &c.	sē

REMARK.—The suffix tē is sometimes emphatically added to the nominative tu; as tūtē, thou thyself; and the suffix mēt in the same sense to all the cases of ego, tu, and sui; as egōmēt, tūtēmēt, suimēt, I myself, &c.—So also mēmē, tētē, sēsē, for me, te, se, in the accusative and ablative singular.

C. The Latin language has no pronoun of the third person corresponding in every respect to the English he, she, it, the termination of the verb being commonly deemed sufficient to indicate the relation of personality. But when perspicuity or emphasis requires a pronoun, one of the demonstratives hic, iste, ille (most commonly the latter) is used for the nominative, and the oblique cases of is, eā, id for the remaining cases. The pronoun of the third person would thus be something like the following:—

		Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
NOM.	he, she, it	illē	illā	illūd
GEN.	of him, of her, of it	ejūs	ejūs	ejūs (rei)*
DAT.	to him, to her, to it	ei	ei	ei (rei)
ACC.	him, her, it	ejūm	ejām	id (illūd)
VOC.	— — —	—	—	—
ABL.	with him, with her, with it	ejō	ejā	ejō (ejā re).

D. The pronoun ipsē, ipsā, ipsūm may be joined to

* The Romans are fond of employing the word res, "thing," instead of the neuter of adjectives and pronouns. This becomes necessary in cases where ambiguity as to gender would otherwise arise, as here in the genitive, dative, and ablative. So also cujus rei, cui rei, quā re, for cujus, &c.

every case of ego, tu, and sui, with the force of the English self (myself, thyself, himself, &c.). Its singular is thus declined:—

	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
NOM.	ipsē	ipsā	ipsū
GEN.		ipsius *
DAT.		ipsi
ACC.	ipsū	ipsā	ipsū
VOC.	ipsē	ipsā	ipsū
ABL.	ipsō	ipsā	ipsō.

Thus: ego ipse (ipsa), I myself; tu ipse (ipsa), thou thyself; (ille) ipse, he himself; mihi met ipsi, to myself; temet ipsum, thyself; sui ipsius, of himself.

Have I the iron or the golden nail? Ferreūmne clāvum habēo, an aūrēum?

You have neither the iron nor the golden nail. Néque ferrēum habēs clāvum, néque aūreum.

The sheep.	Ōvis, is, f.
The ram.	Vervēx, ēcis, m.
The hen.	Gallina, ae, f.
The chicken.	Pullus gallinācēus (gen. i), m.
The ship.	Nāvis, is, f.
The bag (sack).	Saccūs, i, m.
The painter.	Pictor, ōris, m.
The young man.	Jūvēnis, is, m.
The youth (lad).	{ Adōlescens, tis, m. Adōlescentūlus, i, m.

E. The substantives ōvis, nāvis, and jūvēnis are thus inflected:—

NOM. ōvis	nāvis	jūvēnis
GEN. ōvis	nāvis	jūvēnis
DAT. ōvi	nāvi	jūvēni
ACC. ōvēm	nāvēm or nāvim	jūvēnēm
VOC. ōvis	nāvis	jūvēnis
ABL. ōvē.	nāvi or nāvē.	jūvēnē.

F. Obs. The words navis, messis, and clavis have usually em in the accusative, sometimes im. The nouns febris, pelvis, puppis, vestis, securis, and turris have oftener im than em. Those which have regularly im are: a) the substantives amussis, ravis, suis, tussis, and vis;

* The genitive ipsius and the dative ipsi are here intended for all the genders. The same applies to all the subsequent paradigms.

b) a variety of nouns and proper names derived from the Greek, as basis, poësis, paraphrasis, Osiris, Zeuzis, Charybdis, &c.

Has the boy the carpenter's hammer ?	Tenetne puer malleum fabri tignarii ?
He has it.	Vero (eum) tenet.
Has the youth it ?	Eumne tenet adolescens ?
He has it not .	(Eum) nōn tenet.
Is he thirsty ?	Sititne ? An (ecquid) is sitit ?
He is thirsty.	Ita est, sitit.
Is he tired ?	{ Num (numquid) fessus est ? An est fessus ?
He is not tired ?	Nōn est fessus.
Is he right or wrong ?	{ Rectene loquitur, an errat ? Utrum vere loquitur, an errat ?
He is right (correct).	Vere loquitur.
He is not wrong.	Nōn errat.
Is he hungry ?	Euritne ? Num esurit ?
He is not hungry.	Nōn esurit.

EXERCISE 8.

Is he thirsty or hungry ? — He is neither thirsty nor hungry. —
Has the friend my hat ? — He has it. — He has it not. — Who has

* The pronoun of the third person, like that of the second and first, is commonly omitted, except where perspicuity requires it.

my sheep? — Your friend has it. — Who has my large sack? — The baker has it. — Has the youth my book? — He has it not. — What has he? — He has nothing. — Has he the hammer or the nail? — He has neither the hammer nor the nail. — Has he my umbrella or my stick? — He has neither your umbrella nor your stick. — Has he my coffee or my sugar? — He has neither your coffee nor your sugar; he has your honey. — Has he my brother's biscuit or that of the Frenchman? — He has neither your brother's nor that of the Frenchman; he has that of the good boy. — Which ship has he? — He has my good ship. — Has he the old sheep or the ram?

EXERCISE 9.

Has the young man my knife or that of the painter? — He has neither yours nor that of the painter. — Who has my brother's fine dog? — Your friend has it. — What has my friend? — He has the baker's good bread. — He has the good neighbor's good chicken. — What have you? — I have nothing. — Have you my bag or yours? — I have that of your friend. — Have I your good knife? — You have it. — You have it not. — Has the youth it? — He has it not. — What has he? — He has something good. — He has nothing bad. — Has he anything? — He has nothing. — Is he sleepy? — He is not sleepy. — He is hungry. — Who is hungry? — The young man is hungry. — Your friend is hungry. — Your brother's boy is hungry. — My shoemaker's brother is hungry. — My good tailor's boy is thirsty. — Which man has my book? — The big (procērus) man has it. — Which man has my horse? — Your friend has it. — He has your good cheese. — Has he it? — Yes, sir, he has it.

* Many nouns in Latin are never used in the singular, as angustiae, difficulties; diuitiae, riches; feriae, holidays; liberi, children, &c. Compare Lesson XVII. B.

His (conjunctive).

A. Obs. The possessive pronoun sūus is declined like mēus and tūus. It corresponds to the English "his" when, in the reflexive sense of "his own," the subject of the sentence is meant; but when another person is referred to, ējus (of him) or illūs (of that man) must be employed. As:—

Has he his (own) hat?

Tenétne plěum sūum?

Have you his (the other man's) hat?

Tenésne tū plěum ējus (illūs)?

Has the servant his broom?

Hábétne mínister scópas súas? (Cf. Lesson XIII. B.)

He has his broom.

{ Hábét scópas súas.
 { Scópas súas hábet.

Has the cook his (own) chicken or that of the rustic?

Hábétne cóquus gallinam súam, an (illam) rústici?

He has his own.

{ Súam hábet.
 { Hábét súam própřiam.

His or his own (absolute).

{ *Sūus, suū, suūm.
 { Ējus, illūs (ipsius).

B. Obs. The absolute possessive pronoun sūus is declined like the conjunctive. Instead of it, propřius is sometimes used. There is here the same distinction between sūus (propřius) and ējus (illūs) as in Obs. A.

Has the servant his (own) trunk, or mine?

{ Hábétne fámŭlus rĭscum sūum (própřium), an méum?
 { Suūmne rĭscum hábet fámŭlus, an méum?

He has his own.

{ Súum própřium hábet.

Have you your (own) shoe, or his (that man's)?

{ Útrum túum hábes calcěum, an ējus (illūs)?
 { Tuūmne hábes calceum, an ējus (illūs)?

* The suffix met is sometimes added to all the cases of sūus, in the sense of the English "own," and commonly in connection with ipse, himself; e. g. Suūmnet librum ipse tenet, He himself has his own book. To the ablative singular suo, sua (and also to meo, mea, tuo, tua, &c.) the syllable ptē may be annexed in the same sense; as suptē manu, with his own hand; meoptē ingenio, by my own genius; nostraptē culpā, by our own fault.

† Both these words are sometimes put together, in order to render the notion of possession still more prominent: sūus propřius, precisely like the English "his own." C

C. Obs. The indefinite pronouns ālĭquĭs, quĭs, and quĭspĭam are always positive, and differ but little from each other, except that quĭspĭam is more general (= "some one or another"). Quisquam (like quidquam of Lesson VI., q. v.) and nullus, on the other hand, are only used where the sentence contains a negation, either expressed or implied. Quis may stand for ālĭquĭs, but only after particles like si (if), nĭsi (unless), num (whether), and ne (lest). Ecquĭs ? and num quĭs ? are interrogative.

Have you the ox of the peasant or that of the cook ? — I have neither that of the peasant nor that of the cook. — Has the peasant his rice ? — He has it. — Have you it ? — I have it not. — Has his boy the servant's broom ? — He has it. — Who has the boy's pencil ? — Nobody has it. — Has your brother my stick or that of the painter ? — He has neither yours nor that of the painter ; he has his own. — Has he the good or bad money ? — He has neither the good nor the bad. — Has he the wooden or the leaden horse ? — He has neither the wooden nor the leaden horse. — What has he good ? — He has my good honey. — Has my neighbor's boy my book ? — He has it not. — Which book has he ? — He has his fine book. — Has he my book or his own ? — He has his own ? — Who has my gold button ? — Nobody has it. — Has anybody my thread stocking ? — Nobody has it.

numquam, instead of nemo, as in English we likewise say, "nor was there ever any one," instead of "no one ever was," &c.

* Ullus and nullus are properly adjectives in us, a, um. But they deviate from the inflection of adjectives by having their genitive in tus (instead of i, ae, i) for every gender, and their dative in i (instead of o, ae, o). Compare unus of Lesson XVIII.

EXERCISE 11.

Which ship has the merchant? — He has his own? — Which horse has my friend? — He has mine. — Has he his dog? — He has it not. — Who has his dog? — Nobody has it. — Who has my brother's umbrella? — Somebody has it. — Which (quas) broom has the servant? — He has his own. — Is anybody hungry? — Nobody is hungry. — Is anybody sleepy? — Nobody is sleepy. — Is any one tired? — No one is tired. — Who is right? — Nobody is right. — Have I his biscuit? — You have it not. — Have I his good brother's ox? — You have it not. — Which chicken have I? — You have his. — Is anybody wrong? — Nobody is wrong.

Lesson XI. — PENSUM UNDECIMUM.

OF DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS.

A. The Latin language has three demonstrative pronouns, with special reference to each of the three persons, viz.: hic, haec, hōc, this (of mine); istē, istā, istūd, that (of yours); illē, illā, illūd, that (of his). To these must be added the determinative is, ēa, id, which sometimes has the demonstrative force of this or that. These words are thus inflected:—

Hic, this (of mine).				Ille, that (of his).
	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
NOM.	hic	haec	hōc	illē	illā	illūd
GEN.		hūjus			illūus
DAT.		huic			illi

Iste, that (of yours).				Is, that, this .
	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.

GEN.		istūus			ējūs
DAT.		isti			ēi
ACC.	istūm	istām	istūd	ēūm	ēām	id
VOC.	istē	istā	istūd	is	ēā	id
ABL.	istō	istā	istō.	ēō	ēā	ēō.

REMARKS.

1. The demonstrative force of hic, &c. is often increased by the addition of the syllable ce, as hicce, haecce, hocce, hujusce, &c. — With the interrogative particle ne, the pronouns become hiccine (or with one c, hicine)? haeccine? hoccine? &c.

2. In composition with ecce and en (= lo! see! here!), these pronouns have given rise to the following forms, frequently used in common discourse: eccum, eccam (pl. eccos, eccas); eccillum or ellum, ellam (pl. ellos, ellas), and eccistam, "there he (she) is," "there they come," "see there," &c. — Ea, in connection with re and the affix pse, gives rise to reapse, "indeed."

3. Hic implies proximity, either of space or of time, to the person speaking. Ille, on the other hand, refers to something remote, and also to something well known, already mentioned, or distinguished. When directly opposed to each other, ille signifies "the former," and hic, "the latter."

4. Iste has always reference to the person spoken to, and is hence called the pronoun of the second person; as iste liber, istud saccharum, this book, that sugar (of yours or mentioned by you). It sometimes conveys the notion of disapprobation or contempt, as ille does that of honor; as iste homo, this fellow; ille Socrates, the well-known (illustrious) Socrates.

5. Is, when used as a demonstrative, points to a person or thing already mentioned, in the sense of the English "this man," "that thing" (of which I am speaking or have just spoken), or of an emphatic "he, she, it"; e.g. Is est, an non est? Is it he (is this the man) or not? In the oblique cases it is the pronoun of the third person (his, him, hers, her, &c.). See Lesson IX. C.

6. The pronoun hic, in connection with ille and iste, gives rise to the compounds istic (or isthic), istaec, istoc or istuc, and illic, illaec, illoc or illuc, both of which are declined like hic, haec, hoc.

B. Obs. The adversative conjunctions sed and *verum are nearly synonymous, and are always placed at the beginning of the clause introduced by them. Autem, like the English "however," generally stands after the first, second, or third word. Examples:—

Not I, but you.	Nōn ego, sēd (vērum) tū.
You are neither right nor wrong, but (however) your brother is wrong.	Tū nēque rectē loquēris, nēque er- ras, errat autēm frāter tuus.

Lesson XII. — PENSUM DUODECIMUM.

OF INTERROGATIVE PRONOUNS.

A. There are three interrogative pronouns in Latin, viz.: 1) the substantive quīs? (masc. & fem.) "who?" quīd? "what?" 2) the adjective quī, quae, quōd? "which?" and 3) ūter, utrā, utrūm? "which of the two?" They are thus inflected:—

Quis? quid? Who? what?

NOM.	who? what?	quis?	quid?
GEN.	whose? of what?	cujus?	cujus rei?*

Utēr, utrā, utrūm? Which of the two?

NOM.	ūt	utrā	utrūm?
GEN.		utrius?‡
DAT.		utri?
ACC.	utrūm	utrūm	utrūm?
VOC.	_____	_____	_____
ABL.	utrō	utrā	utrō?

REMARKS.

1. The emphatic nām affixed to either of these pronouns gives animation to the inquiry; as quisnām? who, pray? quidnām? what then? quinām, quāenām, quodnām? which, pray?

2. The general rule is that quis should stand substantively for both genders, and qui, quae adjectively; as, quis? who? qui vir? which (or what) man? quae femina? what woman? But this distinction is frequently disregarded, especially for the sake of euphony; e. g. qui (for quis) sis considera, consider who you are; quis (for qui) iste tantus casus? what is this great calamity of yours?

3. Instead of quod in the same case with its substantive, we may

* On this use of rei, see note, page 29.

† There is an obsolete ablative qui for every gender, yet in use in forms like quicum (= quocum or quicum, with whom, with which), and adverbially in the sense of how? e. g. Qui fit? How comes it? Qui tibi id facere licuit? How could that have been lawful for you?

‡ The following nine adjectives are pronominals, and their compounds form the genitive in ius, and the dative in i: unūs, solūs, totūs, ullūs; utrū, neutrū, alter, nullūs, and aliūs. Of these, alter alone has alterius, the rest have ius in prose and sometimes ius in poetry.

use quid partitively with the genitive; as quod saccharum? or quid sacchari?

4. Instead of the genitive cujus, “whose” (both interrogative and relative), the adjective cujus, a, um is sometimes employed; as cujus liber? cuja mensa? cujum foenum? whose book, &c. But this mode of expression is antiquated, and scarcely used except in law.

5. To quis? correspond in the answer the pronominal adjectives alius, another (one); ullus, any one; and nullus, no one. To uter? we reply with alter, the one of two, the other; neuter, neither of (the) two; alteruter, the one or the other; utervis and uterlibet, each of the two; and the compound relative utercunque, whichever of the two.

6. These pronouns are used precisely in the same manner when the question becomes indirect, in which case, however, the verb must be in the subjunctive; e. g. Quis est? who is it? nescio quis sit, I do not know who it is (may be); dic mihi, uter habeat, tell me who has; uter habeat, nescio, I know not who has (lit. may have). (Vide Lesson XXX. C.)

OF RELATIVE PRONOUNS.

B. The relative qui, quae, quod, “who,” “that or which,” is inflected like the interrogative of the same form. Relatives always agree with their antecedents in gender and number:—

The man, who, whose, to whom, Vir, qui, cujus, cui, quem, quod.
whom, by whom.

The woman, who, whose, to whom, whom, by whom. Femina, quae, cujus, cui, quam, quod.

The affair, which, of which, to which, which, with which. Negotium, quod, cujus, cui, quod, quod.

Have you the hat which my brother has? Habēsne tū pileum, quem frater meus habet?

I have not the hat which your brother has. { Nōn habeo pileum, quem frater tuus habet.
*Quem habet frater tuus pileum nōn habeo.

Have you the gold which I have? Ān habēs aurum, quod ego habeo?
Habeo aurum, quod tū habes.

I have the gold which you have. { *Quod tū aurum habes, id et ego habeo.

C. Obs. Of the relative qui, quae, quod there are two compounds, quicunque and quisquis, “whoever,” “every one who,” of which the former is declined like the simple pronoun (with the syllable cunque affixed to each case); as, quicunque, quaecunque, quodcunque, gen. cujuscunque, &c. — The latter has a double inflection: quisquis (masc. & fem.), quidquid or quicquid (neut.). E. g. Quisquis ille est, "whoever he is (may be)." Quicunque is est, ei me profiteor inimicum, "Whoever he may be, I profess myself an enemy to him."

* The general rule is that the Relative should be placed after its antecedent, and as near as possible to it. The clauses, however, are frequently inverted; as, Terra, quod accepit, (id) nunquam sine usurā reddit, The earth never returns without usury what it has received.

OF DETERMINATIVE PRONOUNS.

D. Determinative pronouns are such as serve to point out the antecedent of a relative. They are in Latin: is, ea, id, "he, she, or it," "that or the one"; the demonstrative ille, illa, illud, "the," "that or the one"; and the compound idem, eadem, idem, "the same." They are thus inflected:—

Lesson XIII. — PENSUM TERTIUM DECIMUM.

OF THE PLURAL OF SUBSTANTIVES AND ADJECTIVES.

A. The nominative plural of the five declensions is characterized by the following terminations:—

1. Substantives and adjectives of the first declension have the nominative in ae, and the genitive in arum; as mensae, mensarum; bōnae, bōnarum.

2. Masculines (and feminines) of the second declension form their plural in i, neuters in ā. The genitive of both is orum. E. g. dōminī, dōminorum; pūerī, pūerorum; filī, filiorum; bōnī, neut. bōnū, bōnorum.

3. Masculines and feminines of the third declension change the is of the genitive singular into ēs, neuters, into ā or iū. The genitive of this declension is um or iūm. E. g. līpīdīs, pl. līpīdēs, līpīdum; vestīs, pl. vestēs, vestiūm; pistōrīs, pl. pistōrēs, pistōrum; cāpītīs, pl. cāpītā, cāpītum; turpīs, pl. turpēs, neut. turpīā, gen. turpīum.

4. Masculines and feminines of the fourth declension retain the ūs of the genitive singular, and neuters (in ū) assume the termination ūa. The genitive plural of this declension is uniformly ūum. E. g. fructūs, fructūum; cornūa, cornūum.

5. Nouns of the fifth declension form their plural in ēs, and their genitive in ērūm; as rīs, rērūm; diēs, dierūm.

The following list exhibits the nominative and genitive plural of the majority of substantives thus far used in this book, according to their respective declensions:—

FOURTH DECLENSION.

The carriages.	Currus, ūm, m.
The houses.	Dōmus, ūm, f.

B. The following paradigms may serve as examples of the declension of the plural number.

1. PLURAL OF THE FIRST DECLENSION.

Mensae, tables; filiae, the daughters; nautae, sailors.

NOM.	mensae	filiae	nautae
GEN.	mensārum	filiarum	nautārum
DAT.	mensīs	filīabūs	nautīs
ACC.	mensās	filīās	nautās
VOC.	mensae	filiae	nautae
ABL.	mensīs.	filīabūs.†	nautīs.

* The plural of this noun is likewise partly Greek: N. lampādes, G. -ādum, D. -ādibus, Acc. -ādes or -ādas, V. -ādes, Abl. -ādibus.

† This form of the dative and ablative is the best for dea and filia, in order

REMARK. — In the plural of every declension the nominative and vocative, and the dative and ablative, end always alike.

2. PLURAL OF THE SECOND DECLENSION.

Equi, the horses ; libri, the books ; candelābrā, the candlesticks.

NOM.	equi	libri	candelābrā
GEN.	equorūn	librorūn	candelābrorūn
DAT.	equis	libris	candelābris
ACC.	equos	libros	candelābrā
VOC.	equi	libri	candelābrā
ABL.	equis.	libris.	candelābris.

The pl. libērī, children, and the plural of dēus, a god, are thus declined : —

NOM.	libērī	dēi, dñi or di
GEN.	liberōrum or liberum *	dēorum or dēum *
DAT.	libērīs	dēis, dñis or dis,
ACC.	libērōs	dēos
VOC.	libērī	dēi, dñi or di
ABL.	libērīs.	dēis, dñis or dis.

3. PLURAL OF THE THIRD DECLENSION.

Hōmīnēs, men ; pistōrēs, bakers ; vestēs, garments ; nāvēs, the ships.

NOM.	hōmīnēs	pistōrēs	vestēs	nāvēs
GEN.	hōmīnūn	pistōrum	vestīūn	nāvīūn
DAT.	hōmīnībūs	pistōribūs	vestībūs	nāvībūs
ACC.	hōmīnēs	pistōrēs	vestēs	nāvēs
VOC.	hōmīnēs	pistōrēs	vestēs	nāvēs
ABL.	hōmīnībūs.	pistōribūs.	vestībūs.	nāvībūs.

Lūmīnā, lights ; tībīālīā, stockings ; poēmāta, n., poems.

NOM.	lūmīnā	tībīālīā	poēmātā
GEN.	lūmīnūn	tībīālīūn	poēmātūn
DAT.	lūmīnībūs	tībīālībūs	poēmātīs
ACC.	lūmīnā	tībīālīā	poēmātā
VOC.	lūmīnā	tībīālīā	poēmātā to distinguish them from the same cases of dēus and filius of the second declension. So the words anima, the soul ; liberta, a freed-woman ; nīta, daughter ; mula, a she-mule ; equa, a mare ; asīna, a she-ass. — may have abus instead of is, and for the same reason. The numerals duō, two, and ambō, both, have duābus and ambābus regularly.

* So also fabrum, socium, decemvirum, instead of fabrorum, &c. This con-

Adolescentēs, young men ; cānēs, dogs ; bōvēs, oxen.

NOM.	ādōlescentēs	cānēs	bōvēs

DAT.	ādōlescentībūs	cānībūs	būbūs or bōbūs
ACC.	ādōlescentēs	cānēs	bōvēs
VOC.	ādōlescentēs	cānēs	bōvēs
ABL.	ādōlescentībūs.	cānībūs.	būbūs or bōbūs.

REMARKS.

1. The normal termination for the Nom., Acc., and Voc. pl. of neuters is ā. Some, however, have always īā. They are: 1.) Those ending in e, al, ar, as māria, sālīa, calcārīa, from māre, the sea, sāl, salt, and calcār, a spur; 2.) All participles in ns and such adjectives as have either i or else ē or i in the ablative singular, comparatives excepted, as āmantīa, ēsūrīentīa, pārīa, fācīlīa, turpīa, from āmans, ēsūrīens, pār, fācīle, turpe. But we say mājōra, doctōra, from the comp. mājor, greater, doctōr, more learned.

2. The general termination of the genitive plural is ūm; but the following have īum:—

a) All those which have īa in the nominative plural, as mārtium, calcārīum, āmantīum, fācīlīum, turpīum.

b) Words in ēs and īs which do not increase in the genitive singular (i. e. which receive no additional syllable), as nāvis, nārtium; vestis, vestīum; nūbēs, nūbtium; except vātēs, strīes, cānis, pānis, and jūvēnis, which have vātium, strīum, cānum, &c.

c) Of nouns in er some have īum, as imber, imbrīum; linter, līntrīum; venter, ventrīum; ūtēr, ūtīrīum; others again have ūm, as patrum, matrum, fratrum, accipitrum, from pāter, māter, &c. — Cāro has carnīum, and sēnex, sēnum.

d) Many monosyllables, especially those ending in s and x with a consonant preceding; as dens, dentīum; mons, montīum; merx, merctūm; lis, lītūm; ōs, ossūm; nox, noctūm; vīs, virīum, &c.

e) Dissyllables and polysyllables in ns and rs have generally īum and sometimes um; as cōhors, cōhortīum; clīens, clīentīum; ādōlescens, ādōlescentīum; sapīens, sapientīum; but parentes, parentum.

3. In the dative and ablative plural, Greek nouns in ma have usually īa, sometimes however ībūs; as poēma, poēmāīs or poēmātībūs; diploma, diplomāīs or diplomātībūs, &c.

4. The accusative plural of those words which have īum in the genitive is among some writers īs or eīs, instead of ēs; as artis, civīs, omnīs, instead of artēs, civēs, &c.

tracted genitive (commonly but incorrectly printed ām) is the common form of names of measures, weights, and coins, as nummum, sestertium, denarium, cadum, medimnum, modium, jugerum, talentum, the regular genitive plural of nummus, sestertius, &c. The poets extend this form to names of nations, and say Argicum, Danaum, &c., in lieu of Argicōrum, &c.

4. PLURAL OF THE FOURTH AND FIFTH DECLENSIONS.

Fructūs, m., fruits; cornū, n., horns; dōmūs, f., houses; diēs, m., days; rēs, f., things.

NOM.	fructūs	cornū	dōmūs	diēs	rēs

VOC.	fructū	cornū	dōmū	diē	rē

REM. 1. Some nouns of the fourth declension have ūs instead of us in the dat. and abl. pl.; as arcūs, arcū; vērū, verū, &c.

2. The plural of the fifth declension is regular throughout.

5. THE PLURAL OF ADJECTIVES.

The plural of adjectives is subject to the same laws as that of substantives. Those in us, a, um, and er, ra, rum, follow the inflection of the first and second declensions, and the rest that of the third. Examples:—

1. Bōnī, bōnae, bōnā, the good; pulchrī, pulchrae, pulchrā, the beautiful.

	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
NOM.	bōnī	bōnae	bōnā
GEN.	bōnōrum	bōnārū	bōnōrum
DAT.	bōnīs	bōnīs	bōnīs
ACC.	bōnōs	bōnās	bōnā
VOC.	bōnī	bōnae	bōnā
ABL.	bōnīs	bōnīs	bōnīs
NOM.	pulchrī	pulchrae	pulchrā
GEN.	pulchrōrum	pulchrārū	pulchrōrum
DAT.	pulchrīs	pulchrīs	pulchrīs
ACC.	pulchrōs	pulchrās	pulchrā
VOC.	pulchrī	pulchrae	pulchrā
ABL.	pulchrīs	pulchrīs	pulchrīs

Like bōnī, ae, a, decline mēī, mēae, mēā, my, mine; tūī, tūae, tūā, thy (your), thine (yours), &c. Like pulchrī, rae, ra: miserī, miserāe, miserā, the miserable, &c.

2. Dēformēs, dēformīa, the ugly; ācrēs, ācrīa, the fierce.

	Masc. & Fem.	Neut.	Masc. & Fem.	Neut.
NOM.	dēformēs	dēformīa	ācrēs	ācrīa
GEN.	dēformīum	dēformīum	ācrīum	ācrīum
DAT.	dēformībūs	dēformībūs	ācrībūs	ācrībūs

ACC.	deformēs	deformiā	ācrēs	ācriā
VOC.	deformēs	deformiā	ācrēs	ācriā
ABL.	deformībūs	deformībūs.	ācribūs	ācribūs.

REMARK. — The general rule is that all adjectives of the third declension have ta in the neuter plural and tum in the genitive. — Like deformes are inflected vīlēs, turpēs, and all adjectives in is, e; like ācrēs, all those ending in er, riā, re.

3. Fēlicēs, fēliciā, happy; vētērēs, vētērā, old; sapientēs, sapientia, wise.

NOM.	fēlicēs	fēliciā	vētērēs	vētērā	sapientēs	-tia
GEN.	fēliciūm	fēlicium	vētērūm	vētērūm	sapientīūm	or -um
DAT.	fēlicībūs	fēlicībūs	vētērībūs	vētērībūs	sapientībūs
ACC.	fēlicēs	fēliciā	vētērēs	vētērā	sapientēs	-tia
VOC.	fēlicēs	fēliciā	vētērēs	vētērā	sapientēs	-tia
ABL.	fēlicībūs	fēlicībūs.	vētērībūs	vētērībūs.	sapientībūs.

REMARK. — Adjectives of one termination, including participles in ns, generally have tā in the neuter plural and tum in the genitive. Some, however, have ā instead of tā in the nominative and accusative, as vētērā, plūra, and comparatives generally; e. g. fēliciōrā, majōrā, &c. — Exceptions to the genitive in ium are: 1) such as have e only in the abl. sing., as paup̄erum, superstūm; 2) compounds of facio and cipio, or of such nouns as have um in the gen. pl., as ancipitum, inopum, quadrup̄edum, &c.; 3) the following adjectives have likewise um: caelebs, cēlēr, cicūr, compōs, impōs, divēs, mēmōr, immēmōr, supplex, ubēr, vētūs, and vīgīl; 4) participles in ns sometimes have um among the poets.

C. The following table exhibits the terminations of the five declensions through all the cases, singular and plural.

1. TERMINATIONS OF THE SINGULAR.

	I.	II.	III.	IV.	V.
		Neut.		Neut.
NOM.	ā (ē, ās, ēs)*	ūs, ēr, ūm (os, on)	a, e, o, c, l, n, r, s, t, x	ūs, ū	ēs
GEN.	ae† (ēs)	ī	īs	ūs	ēī
DAT.	ae	ō	ī	ūī	ēī
ACC.	ām (ēn)	ūm	ēm, im	ūm, ū	ēm
VOC.	ā (ē)	ē, ēr, ūm	Like Nom.	ūs, ū	ēs
ABL.	ā (ē).*	ō.	ē (ī).	ū.	ē.

* Of the nouns in e, as, es of this declension no examples have as yet been given. They are mostly of Greek origin, and will be considered hereafter.

† Of this there is also an ancient form in āī, as aulāī, for aulae, from aula a hall. But this is not used except in poetry.

2. TERMINATIONS OF THE PLURAL.

	I.	II.	III.	IV.	V.
		Neut.	Neut.	Neut.
NOM. ae	ī,	ā	ēs,	ā (īā)	ūs, ūā	ēs
GEN. ārūm	ōrūm		ūm (iūm)	ūūrū	ērūm
DAT. īs (ābūs)	īs		ībūs	ībūs	ēbūs
ACC. ās	ōs,	ā	ēs,	ā (īā)	ūs, ūā	ēs
VOC. ae	ī,	ā	ēs,	ā (īā)	ūs, ūā	ēs
ABL. īs (ābūs).	īs.		ībūs.	ībūs.	ēbūs.

REMARK. — With respect to the quantity of the terminations of the plural number, the following rules may serve to guide the learner: —

1. I final is always long, and a final always short, as dóminī, librī, bonā, filiā.

2. The is of the dative and ablative plural of the first and second declensions is long, as taénīs, dómīnīs, candelábrīs.

3. The terminations es and os are long, as cánēs, lapídēs, dómīnōs, librēs.

4. The vowel before the m final in all Latin words is generally considered short, as lapídēm, cánēm, pánēm, dōmīnōrūm.

5. The us of the plural of the fourth declension is long, but in abus, ebūs, ibūs it is short; as fructūs, mánūs; fructībūs, diēbūs, homínībūs.

Lesson XIV. — PENSUM QUARTUM DECIMUM.

OF THE PLURAL OF PRONOUNS.

A. The plural of the personal pronouns ego and tu is nĩs, "we," and vĩs, "you." The remaining cases are : —

	Masc. & Fem.			Masc. & Fem.
NOM. we	nōs		ye or you	vōs
GEN. of us	nostrum or nostrī		of you	vestrum or vestrī
DAT. to us	nōbīs		to you	vōbīs
ACC. us	nōs		you	vōs
VOC. —	nōs		O ye or you	vōs
ABL. with us	nōbīs.		with you	vōbīs.

REMARK. — The difference between nostrī, vestrī and nostrum, vestrum consists in this: that the latter are chiefly used as partitive genitives after interrogatives, numerals, comparatives, and superlatives, and the former after other words; e. g. uter nostrum? which of us two? nemo vestrum, no one of you; vestrum primus, the first of you; but miserere nostrī, pity us; amor nostrī, love of (towards) us; vestrī similes, your like (those like you).

B. The pronoun of the third person is illī, illae, illā, "they," of which the remaining cases are: —

		Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
NOM.	they	illī	illae	illā
GEN.	of them	ēōrūm	ēārūm	ēōrūm
DAT.	to them		illis or illis
ACC.	them	ēōs	ēās	ēā
VOC.	—	illī	illae	illā
ABL.	by them.		illis or illis.

C. The reflexive sui is the same in the plural as in the singular. The intensive ipse has ipsī, ipsae, ipsā. Thus: —

Sui, of themselves.			Ipsī, ipsae, ipsā, ourselves, yourselves, themselves.
		For every gender.	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
NOM.	—	—	ipsī	ipsae	ipsā
GEN.	of themselves	sui	ipsōrūm	ipsārūm	ipsōrūm
DAT.	to themselves	sibi		ipsis
ACC.	themselves	sē	ipsōs	ipsās	ipsā
VOC.	—	—	ipsī	ipsae	ipsā
ABL.	by themselves	sē.		ipsis.

REMARK. — We thus say, as in the singular, nos ipsi (or fem. ipsae), we ourselves; vos ipsi (or fem. ipsae), you yourselves; and illi ipsi (or fem. illae ipsae) or simply ipsi, they themselves; ea ipsa, these things themselves, &c.

D. The plurals of the demonstrative pronouns hic, ille, iste, and is, are hī, illī, istī, and ī. The remaining genders and cases are as follows :—

Hī, hae, haec, these .				Illī, illae, illā, those (of his) .
	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.		Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
NOM.	hī	hae	haec	illī	illae	illā

ABL.		hīs.			illis.

Istī, istae, istā, these (of yours) .				Iī, ēae, ēā, these, those .
	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.		Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
NOM.	istī	istae	istā	īī (ēī)	ēae	ēā
GEN.	istōrūm,	istārūm,	istōrūm	ēōrum	ēārum	ēōrūm

VOC.	istī	istae	istā	īī (ēī)	ēae	ēā
ABL.		istīs.			īīs or ēīs.

E. The relative quī, quae, quōd (and also the interrogatives of the same form) makes its plural in quī, quae, quae, “who, which, or that,” or interrogatively “which? what?” Thus:—

Quī, quae, quae, which, that; which? what?

		Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
NOM.	which	quī	quae	quae
GEN.	of which	quōrūm	quārūm	quōrūm
DAT.	to which		quībūs
ACC.	which	quōs	quās	quae
VOC.	_____	_____	_____	_____
ABL.	by which.		quībūs.

REMARK.—For quībūs, in the relative sense, there is an antiquated form quīs or quēis, which is not unfrequently employed by prose-writers of a later period.

F. The plural of the determinative is, ea, id is the same as that of the demonstrative; that of idem is as follows:—

Iidem, caedem, eādem, the same.

		Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
NOM.	the same	īdēm	ēadēm	ēādēm
GEN.	of the same	ēōrundēm	ēārundēm	ēōrundēm
DAT.	to the same		īisdēm or ēisdēm
ACC.	the same	ēosdēm	ēasdēm	ēādēm
VOC.	O the same	īdēm	ēadēm	ēādēm
ABL.	by the same.		īisdēm or ēisdēm.

REMARK. — The form iisdēm is more common than eisdēm. The same is true of iis, ii, eis, and ei.

G. The plural of the relative in connection with the determinative is, ea, id (vide Lesson XII. D.) is as follows: —

Ii, eae, ea — qui, quae, quae, those which.

* From the diminutive libellus, í, m., a little book, a pamphlet. (Compare Lesson XX. E. 7.)

† The question, "Have you the books which the men have?" may thus be expressed in several ways: 1) Habēsne tu illos libros, quos homines habent? 2) Habēsne tu illos libros, quos libros homines habent? 3) Habēsne tu quos libros homines habent? The first of these is the most general. The antecedent is entirely suppressed in: 4) Sunt qui (or quos), for Sunt homines qui (or quos), "There are those who," "There are men whom."

H. RULE. Adjectives and pronouns of the neuter gender, both singular and plural, are frequently employed substantively, as hoc, "this (thing)," illud, "that (thing,)" haec, "these things," illa, "those things," triste, "a sad thing," multa, "many things," omnia, "all things," summum bonum, "the chief good."

He has them.	(Eōs) habet.
Have they their (own) house, their (own) houses ?	Habētne dōmum suā, dōmōs su- ās ?
They have them not.	(Eās) nōn habent.
Have you yourself their (i. e. those people's) good comb, good combs ?	Ān tū ipse habēs pectīnem eōrum bōnum, pectīnēs illōrum bōnōs ?
I have myself their good little combs.	Ēgo ipse pectūnculōs eōrum bōnōs habeo.
Which carriages have you ?	{ Quōs habēs cūrrus ? { Quae pilētā habēs ? { Habeo meōs propriōs, { Mēā propriā habeo.
I have my own.
They (those).	illi, illae, illā.

C. Obs. The pronoun they is in Latin commonly omitted with the verb. But when the verb sum is employed to denote possession, the dative iis or illis must be put. E. g. :—

They have.	{ Habent (with the Acc.). { Est iis (illis) (with the Nom. Sing.). { Sunt iis (illis) (with the Nom. Pl.).
Have they the good book ?	{ Habētne (illi) librum bōnum ? { Estne fīs (illis) liber bōnus ?
They have the good book.	{ Habent librum bōnum. { Est fīs liber bōnus.
Are they hungry ? thirsty ?	Esuriūtne ? Sitiūtne ?
They are not hungry (thirsty).	Nōn esuriunt (sitiunt).

when the subject of the sentence is in the singular, and to "their" when it is in the plural. E. g. Has he his book, his books ? Habetne librum suum, libros suos ?—Have they their book, their books ? Habentne librum suum, libros suos ?

Are they tired, sleepy?	Súntne féssi (fem. féssae), somni- cúlósi (fem. ae)?
They are sleepy.	Cúpidi (fem. ae) sómni súnt.
Are they right? wrong?	Loquuntúrne récte? Errántne?
They are neither right nor wrong.	Néque récte loquúntur néque érrant.
Are they right (morally)?	Éstne íis fás? Licétne íis?

OF COMPOUND SUBSTANTIVES.

D. The compound or double substantives of the Latin language are comparatively few,* and of these even, many are most commonly treated as separate words. With respect to their declension, they are divided into two classes.

1. Those of which the last component alone is inflected, as jurisdictio (= jūris + dictio), ōnis, f., the administration of justice; jūrisconsultus, or jūrēconsultus, i. m., a lawyer; plēbiscitum, i. n., a vote of the people; sēnātūsconsultum, i. n., a decree of the senate.

2. Those of which both components are inflected, either separately or combined. Such are:—

a) Jusjūrandūm, n., an oath.

In the same manner decline māter fāmiliās, f., the mistress of a family; filius fāmiliās, m., and filia fāmiliās, f., the son, the daughter, of a family or house.

* This remark applies only to such compounds as are formed by the union of a noun with another or with an adjective. Compounds with particles (i. e. prepositions and adverbs) are quite numerous.

† The Genitive, Dative, and Ablative plural do not occur.

OF IRREGULAR NOUNS.*

E. The irregular nouns of the Latin language may be divided into three general classes:— the Indeclinable, the Defective, and the Redundant.

Those which do not admit of any inflection, i. e. are altogether indeclinable, are:—

1. Greek and Latin names of the letters of the alphabet, as alphā, bētā, gammā, deliā, &c.

2. A number of substantives adopted from foreign languages, as mannā, paschā, gummi, &c.

3. Greek neuters in os and plurals in ē, as Argōs, chāōs, cētūs or cētē, a sea-monster, Tempē, &c.

4. Many Hebrew proper names, as Bethlehem, Gabriel, Jerusalem, Ruth, &c. — Jēsūs has Jēsum in the Acc. and Jēsū in the remaining cases.

5. The following Latin neuters: fūs, right; nēfūs, wrong; instar, likeness; mānē, morning; nihil, nothing; pārū, too little; pondū, a pound (or pounds); sēcūs, sex; sēmīs, half. These are generally used in the Nom. and Acc. only, except mānē, which occurs also in the ablative.

6. Infinitives, adverbs, and other particles, used substantively, as SCIRE tūum, your knowing (knowledge); ultimū VALE, the last farewell; hoc ipsum DIU, the very word “a long time”; istud CRAS, that to-morrow of yours, &c.

7 To these may be added the indeclinable adjectives: frūgi (the obsolete dative of frux, which is not used), useful, fit, honest; nēquām, bad; præstō, present, ready; pōtis or pōtē (obsolete, and only with esse, to be), able, capable; sēmīs, and a half; and damnus (only in law), guilty.

F. Nouns are defective in case or in number. Those defective in case are:—

1. Those which want the nominative, as dāpis, of food; diciōnis,

* This examination of the irregular nouns in this and the following lessons has no necessary connection with the exercises, but is nevertheless recommended to the attention of the learner.

of dominion; femīnā, of the thigh; frūgtis, of fruit; internēctōnis, of carnage; ōpis, of power; pollinis, of meal-dust; vīcis, of alternation; verberis, of a lash (stripe). Many of these genitives occur in the remaining cases of both numbers.

2. A number of monosyllables which want the genitive plural, as ōs, ōris, the mouth; vās, vādis, bail; glūs, glōris, the husband's sister; pax, pācis, a treaty, &c.

3. Those which occur in the Nom. and Acc. only, as the indeclinable fās, nēfūs, &c., to which may be added the plurals colla, the neck; flāmīna, breezes; grātēs, thanks; murmūra, murmurs, &c.

4. A number of substantives, which occur only in certain cases, as astūs, cunning, Abl. astū, Nom. & Acc. Pl. astūs; fors, chance, Abl. forte, by chance; lūēs, disease, Acc. lūēm, Abl. lūē; prēces, pl., prayers, Abl. Sing. prēce; sātīās for sātīelās, satiety, occurs only in the Nom. Sing. — Vīs, might, power, wants the dative; in the remaining cases it has G. vis, A. vim, V. vis, A. vi; Pl. N. vires, G. virium, &c.

5. A number of words used in certain connections are always in a particular case, as:—

a) The Genitives dicis and nauci in dicis causā, for form's sake; non nauci facere, not to value a straw.

b) Certain Datives with the verb esse, to be, as despicātui, dīrisui, ostentui, dūci esse, to be an object of contempt, to serve for display, for display, as a guide, &c.

c) The Accusatives infūtas with ire, to deny; suppēllas with ferre, to bring help; rēnum with ire (or dāre), to be offered for sale (to offer for sale).

d) The Ablatives nātū (by birth) in connection with māior, mīnor, maximus, &c., the elder, younger, oldest, &c. (by birth); sponte, with mēū, tūū, sūū, of my, thy, his own accord; in promptu and in procinctu with esse and stāre, to be ready, to stand prepared.

e) Verbal substantives in Abl. Sing. with one of the possessives mēū, tūū, sūū, &c., as admonitū, concessu or permissu, mandatū, jussu (and injussu, &c.) meo, tuo, suo, at my, thy, his own request, with my, thy, his own permission, command, order, &c.

f) The Abl. Pl. grātis (from grātus), without reward, gratis; in-grātis, against one's will; fōris, out of doors (to the question where?), which to the question whither? becomes fōrās, Acc.

6. Many nouns do not admit of the Vocative from the nature of their signification.

7. The adjectives defective in case are:—

a) Those which do not occur in the nominative; as (sons) sontis, "hurtful"; (sēminex) sēminicis, "half dead"; and a few other similar compounds. To these add (ceterus), a, um and ludicrus, a, um, of which the Nom. Masc. does not occur.

b) The genitive primōris, "the fore," "first," which wants the Nom. and neuter forms, and the plural plērique, "most," which borrows the genitive of plurimi.

c) Necesse and the obsolete necessum, "necessary," which are used only in the neuter and in connection with est, erat, or some other verb; and the obsolete volupe, "agreeable," likewise used only with est, &c.

d) The vocatives macte, pl. macti, which occur as the only forms of an obsolete mactus, a, um, and commonly with an imperative of esse, in the sense of "honored," "praised," "prosperous."

REMARKS.

1. The neuter aliquid is always used adjectively in agreement with its noun, whereas aliquid generally stands substantively; as aliquid detrimentum, some detriment; but aliquid, something; aliquid boni, something (of) good, &c. — Aliquis is both substantive and adjective, and is sometimes joined with unus; as (unus) aliquis, some one; liber aliquis, some book.

2. Quidam is said of individuals or objects, of the nature of which we are either ignorant, or which we do not wish to specify: "a certain (one)," "a sort of," "a certain degree of." E. g. Quidam de meis amicis, a certain one (some one) of my friends; quodam tempore, at a certain time; quoddam commune vinculum, a certain (a sort of) common bond; quiddam boni, (a certain) something good, a certain degree of good. — This pronoun may stand either substantively or adjectively, and quiddam differs from quoddam, like aliquid from aliquid. — The plural quidam, quaedam, quaedam is often used simply with the sense of aliquot or nonnulli, "some," "several."

3. Between the forms ecqui, ecquae and ecqua, there is no appreciable difference, ecquīs and ecquī being both used either independently in the sense of "any one," "some one," or adjectively in the sense of "any"; as Ecquīs (or ecquī) hic est? Is there any one here? Ecquīs (or ecquī) est tibi liber? Have you any book? The same may be said of the neuters ecquod and ecquid. The latter, however, (ecquid.) frequently loses all pronominal force, and serves merely to introduce a question.

4. Ullus is generally an adjective, and is only used in sentences involving a negation or uncertainty. Hence it is frequently preceded by nōn, nēc, sine, si, nūm or numquid; as sine ullā spē, without any hope; si tibi est ullus amicus, if you have any friend; negō tibi esse ullum amicum, I deny that you have any friend, &c. — Ullus, however, becomes positive by a double negation in nonnullus, a, um, "some," as does also nihil in nonnihil, "something."

5. Quis is commonly put instead of aliquis in all sentences involving a condition, a negation, or comparison. When thus employed in the sense of any or any one, it is preceded by si, nisi, ne, num, quo, quanto, or quum; as si quâ ratione, if in any way; si quid est tibi bonum, if you have anything good; ne quod periculum incidêret, lest (= that no) danger might occur; quanto quis est doctior, eo modestior, the more learned any one is, the more modest he will be. — Siquis and nēquis are declined exactly like ecquis, i. e. the fem. sing. is siqua or siquae, and the neut. siquod or siquid.

6. When the substantive denotes a quantity or mass in the singular, the English "some" or "any" may be expressed by aliquantum or aliquantulum (with the genitive), and when it denotes number in the plural, by the indeclinable aliquot (in the same case with the noun). E. g. aliquantum sacchari, some sugar; aliquot libri or libros, some books.

7. The English word "any" is often entirely suppressed in Latin. Thus:—

The wine.	Vinum, i, n. ; mērum, i, n. (pure wine).
Some (any) wine.	Vinum or aliquantum vīni.
Some (any) bread.	Pānem or aliquantum pānis.
Some (any) paper.	Chártam or aliquantum chártæ.
Some (any) books.	Libros or aliquot (nonnullos) lí-bros.
Some good cheese.	{ Cásœum bónum.
	{ Aliquantum cásœi bōni.
Have you any wine ?	{ Ecquid ést tibi vinum ?
	{ Habésne vinum (aliquantum vīni) ?
I have some.	{ Ést (mhi nonnillum) :
	{ (Aliquantum) hábeo.
Have you any water ?	{ Ecqua (écquid) ést tibi áqua ?
	{ Habésne áquam (or aliquantum áquæ) ?
I have some.	{ Ést (mhi nonnilla).
	{ (Aliquantum) hábeo.
Have you any good wine ?	{ Ecquid ést tibi vinum bónum ?
	{ Habésne aliquantum vīni bōni ?
I have some.	{ Ést (mhi aliquantum).
	{ (Nonnillum) hábeo.
Has he any good cloth ?	{ Ecqui(s) ést éi bónus pánnus ?
He has some.	{ Habétne bónum pánnum ?
	{ Ést. Hábet.
Have you any shoes ?	{ Ecqui súnt tibi calcei ?
	{ Habésne calceos aliquot (álquos) ?
I have some.	{ Súnt mhi aliquot (álqui).
	{ Nonnullos (quôsdam) hábeo.

Have you some good or bad horses ?	{ Écqui tibi sunt equi boni an nēquam ? Habēsne equos bonos an nēquam ? Sunt mihi (aliqui) boni.
I have some good ones.	{ Hābeo (nonnullos or quōsdam) bonos. Écquae est tibi aqua bona an nēquam ?
Have you good or bad water ?	{ Utrum aquam habes bonam an vīlem ? (Est mihi) bona.
I have some good.	{ Bonam habeo.
Have you good or bad wine ?	{ Éstne tibi vinum bonum an vilē ? Utrum vinum habes bonum an vilē ? (Est mihi) vilē.
I have some bad.	{ Vile (nēquam) habeo.

OF NOUNS DEFECTIVE IN NUMBER.

B. Words defective in number are either such as have no plural, or such as have no singular.

Those which do not admit of a plural are called singulārīa tantum. They are :—

1. Abstract nouns, or such as denote a quality or intellectual existence considered as general or indivisible; as justītia, piētās, tempērantia, sēnectus, fāmēs, sētis, &c., justice, piety, temperance, old age, hunger, thirst,* &c.

2. Names of materials or of a mass without subdivision; as aurum, gold; argentum, silver; argilla, white clay; coenum, mire, mud; sābulum, sand; sanguis, blood, &c.

3. Collectives, i. e. such as denote a totality or mass of individuals or things; as plebs and vulgus, the vulgar; pōpulus, the people; suppelles, furniture; victus, food, support; virūs, poison (of every kind). So also indolēs, natural parts; and scientia, the totality of a man's knowledge, &c.

4. Proper names, except when they are common to several individuals; as Virgilius, Cicēro, Plautus, &c. But Caesar, Caesāres.

5. The following words: justitium, suspension of business (in courts, &c.); lētum, death; mēridies, noon; spēcimen, example; vēr, spring; vespēr and vespēra, evening.

* Abstract terms, however, frequently do occur in the plural, a) when they denote different kinds of the same quality, as excellētia, quētes, iracundiā, fortitudinēs, mortes, mētūs, different kinds of excellence, rest, anger, bravery, death, fear, &c.; and b) to express a repetition of the same thing in different subjects, as adventūs, effusōnēs, arrivals, eruptions; inertitūs, exitūs, odiū, animi, destruction, exit, odium, courage, as experienced or incurred by different men. — To these may be added the idiomatic Latin plurals nivēs, grandinēs, imbres, pluīae, falls of snow, hail, rain, and soles, spells of sunshine.

6. To these may be added the peculiar use of names of vegetables and fruits, where in English we employ the plural; as fūbam, lentem, rāpum serere, to sow beans, lentils, turnips; ciceris cātinus, a bowl of peas; nux, ūva, the nut, grape, i. e. nuts, grapes, &c.

EXERCISE 18.

Have you any sugar? — I have some. — Have you any good coffee? — I have some. — Have you any salt? — I have some. — Have I any good salt? — You have some. — Have I any shoes? — You have some. — Have I any pretty dogs? — You have some. — Has the man any good honey? — He has some. — What has the man? — He has some good bread. — What has the shoemaker? — He has some pretty shoes. — Has the sailor any biscuits? — He has some. — Has your friend any good pencils? — He has some. — Have you good or bad coffee? — I have some good. — Have you good or bad wood? — I have some good. — Have I good or bad oxen? — You have some bad (ones). — Has your brother good or bad cheese? — He has neither good nor bad. — What has he good? — He has some good friends. — Who has some cloth? — My neighbor has some. — Who has some money? — The French have some. — Who has some gold? — The English have some. — Who has some good horses? — The Germans have some. — Who has some good hay? — This ass has some. — Who has some good bread? — That Spaniard has some. — Who has some good books? — These Frenchmen have some. — Who has some good ships? — Those Englishmen have some. — Has anybody wine? — Nobody has any. — Has the Italian fine or ugly horses? — He has some ugly (ones). — Have you wooden or stone tables? — I have neither wooden nor stone (ones). — Has your boy the fine books of mine? — He has not those of your boy, but his own. — Has he any good thread stockings? — He has some. — What has the Turk? — He has nothing. — He has (a certain) something bad (quiddam mali). — Who has something good? — A certain stranger has something good. — Has any one hay? — Certain husbandmen have some hay and (et) corn.

Lesson XVII. — PENSUM SEPTIMUM DECIMUM.

No, not any, none.

{ Nullūs, nullā, nullūm.
Nihil (with the gen.).
Numquīs, -quae, -quod or -quid?
 Sometimes simply Nōn.

A. Obs. The pronominal adjective nullus is declined like ullus. (Vide Lesson XVI.) Its masculine singular is also employed substantively in the place of nemo, "no one, nobody" (Lesson X. C.) Numquīs is declined like ecquīs, and is used in questions to which nullus is expected in the answer. Instead of the adjective nullus, nihil is frequently put partitively with the genitive, singular and plural. Sometimes the English "no," "none," is expressed by a simple non. Examples:—

Have you any book ?	{ Numquis est tibi liber ? Habésne librum aliquem ?
I have none.	{ Non est. Nullum habeo.
Have you any wine ?	{ Numquid est tibi vinum (vini) ? Num habes aliquantum vini ?
I have none.	{ Non (nullum) est. Nullum habeo.
Have you no bread ?	{ An est tibi nihil panis ? An nullum panem habes ?
I have none.	{ Nihil. Nullum (habeo).
Have I no paper ?	{ Numquid est mihi nihil chartae ? Num chartam nullam habeo ?
You have some.	{ Est tibi nonnihil. Nonnullam véro habes.
Have you no shoes ?	{ Non tibi sunt ulli calcéi ? An nihil calcéorum habes ?
I have none.	{ Nulli. Nihil (nullos, non ullos) habeo.
Have you any ?	{ Numqui tibi sunt ? Num aliquos (ullos) habes ?
I have none.	{ Non sunt. Nullos habeo.
Has the man any ?	{ Num qui sunt víro illi ? Num vír ille ullos habet ?
He has none.	{ Non sunt. Nullos habet.
Has he any good books ?	{ Ecqui sunt ei libri boni ? Habétne libros aliquos bonos ?
He has some.	{ Sunt ei aliqui (nonnulli). Nonnullos (aliquot) habet.

B. The substantives which are pluralia tantum, i. e. used in the plural number only, are : —

1. The names of certain determinate days of the Roman month, as Calendae, the Calends; Nōnae, the nones; Idūs, the ides. To these add nundīnae, a fair (held every ninth day); and ferīae, holidays.

2. The names of festivals and public games, as Bacchānālīa, Flōrālīa, Sātūrnālīa, &c., festivals in honor of Bacchus, Flora, Saturn, &c., Olympīa, the Olympic games, and lūdi, public games generally. So also nātālīa, birthday festival; rēpōtīa, drinking-bout after a feast; sponsālīa, espousals.

3. Many names of towns and countries, including such as are properly names of nations, e. g. Arbēlā (orum), Erbil; Athēnae, Athens; Gādēs, Cadiz; Leuctrā (orum); Delphī; Trēvirī, the country of the Treviri; Pārisī, Paris; Syrācūsae, Syracuse; Persae, Persia.

4. The following substantives, which, with a plural form, commonly preserve a plural signification : — ambāges, quibbles, subterfuges.

Alpes, the Alps.

argūtīae, subtleties, wit.

arma, arms.

artus, limbs.

bellāria, dainties.

cāni, gray hairs.

sūpēri, the upper gods.

tormīna, the gripes.

trīcae, fooleries, gewgaws.

utensīlia, necessities (of life).

valvae, }

fōres, } door-folds.

vērbēra, blows.

5. The following substantives, which, though plural in form, have more or less a singular signification : —

altāria, the high altar.	inimicitiae, enmity. cancelli, } lattice-work, grating.	lōcūli, a casket.
clāthri, }	mānūbiae, booty.
casses, } hunter's net.	nuptiae, a wedding. plāgae, }	ōbices, a bolt, bar.
clitellae, pack-saddle.	pantices, the paunch.
clūnes, } the buttocks.	praecordia, the diaphragm.
nātes, }	pugillāres, }
cūnae, }	tābulae, } writing-tablets.
cunābūla, }	cērae, }
incunābūla, }	scālae, the ladder.
exsēquiae, the funeral.	scōpae, the broom.
fauces, the throat.	sordes, the dirt.
fidēs, the lyre.	tenēbrae, darkness.
indūctiae, armistice.	virgulta, the brushwood.

C. Some substantives assume a different signification in the plural, and sometimes also a different gender. Thus : —

SINGULAR.	PLURAL.
fastus, pride.	fastus, } the calendar.
fōrum, the market-place.	fasti, }
lustrum, a period of five years.	fōri, the gangways.
tempus, time.	lustra, dens of wild beasts. tempōra, the temples (of the head).

D. Others modify their signification in the plural without abandoning that of the singular : —

SINGULAR.	PLURAL.
aedes, is, a temple.	aedes, ium, a house.
āqua, water.	āquae, mineral springs.
auxillium, help.	auxilia, auxiliary troops.
bōnum, something good.	bōna, property.
carcer, a prison.	carcēres, the lists (barrier).

fācultas, ability, power.	fācultātes, property, means.
fortūna, fortune, luck.	fortūnae, gifts of fortune.
hortus, i, a common garden.	horti, } hortūli, } a garden for pleasure. littēra (or litēra), a letter of the alphabet.	littērae (litērae), a letter, writings.
lūdus, pastime, school.	lūdi, a public spectacle. nāris, the nostril.

 nātālis (i. e. dies), birthday.
 (ops), help.
 ōpēra, trouble, pains.
 pars, the part.
 rostrum, a beak, bill.
 sāl, salt.

nāres, lum, the nostrils, or the nose.
 nātāles, the birth (with respect to rank).
 ōpes, power; property.
 ōpērae, operatives.
 partes, a party; rôle.
 sāles, witty sayings, repartee.

E. The Adjectives defective in number are pauci, a few, and plērique, most, which in ordinary language want the singular. Of paucus, the neuter diminutive paucillum or paucillulum only occurs in the sense of "some little." The singular plerusque was anciently used in the sense of "the greater part of," but is now only put in the neuter (plerumque), and adverbially, "for the most part."

EXERCISE 19.

Has the American good money? — He has some. — Have the Dutch good cheese? — Yes, sir, the Dutch have some. — Has the Russian no cheese? — He has none. — Have you good stockings? — I have some. — Have you good or bad honey? — I have some good. — Have you some good coffee? — I have none. — Have you some bad coffee? — I have some. — Has the Irishman good wine? — He has none. — Has he good water? — He has some. — Has the Scotchman some good salt? — He has none. — What has the Dutchman? — He has good ships. — Have I some bread? — You have none. — Have I some good friends? — You have none. — Who has good friends? — The Frenchman has some. — Has your servant any coats or brooms? — He has some good brooms, but no coats. — Has any one hay? — Some one has some. — Who has some? — My servant has some. — Has this man any bread? — He has none. — Who has good shoes? — My good shoemaker has some. — Have you the good hats of the Russians, or those of the Dutch? — I have neither those of the Russians nor those of the Dutch, I have those of the Irish. — Which sacks has your friend? — He has the good sacks of the merchants. — Has your boy the good hammers of the carpenters? — No, sir, he has them not. — Has this little boy some sugar? — He has none? — Has the brother of your friend good combs? — The brother of my friend has none, but I have some? — Who has good wooden chairs? — Nobody has any.

Lesson XVIII. — PENSUM DUODEVICESIMUM.

OF NUMERALS.

A. The numerals of the Latin language are either adjectives or adverbs.

* The platform or desk from which the ancient Romans spoke, so called from its having been adorned with the beaks of captured ships.

Numeral adjectives are divided into five classes: Cardinal, Ordinal, Distributive, Multiplicative, and Proportional.

Of adverbial numerals there is but one class, which answer to the question how many times? as sēmēl, once, tēr, thrice.

B. Cardinals contain the answer to the question quōt? how many? as ūnus, one, dūo, two, centum, a hundred. Of these the first three are susceptible of declension, and those from quattuor (four) to centum (a hundred), inclusive of both, are invariable. The multiples of 100, as far as mille (a thousand), are declined like the plural of bonus; as dūcenti, ae, a, two hundred, &c. — Unus, dūo, and trēs are thus inflected: —

Unus, a, um, one.

ABL.	trībūs.

REMARK 1. The plural ūni, ūnae, ūnā, can only be used, a) when joined with substantives that are pluralia tantum, i. e. used in the plural only; as ūnae scōpae, one broom; ūnae lītērae, one letter; ūnā castra, one camp; in ūnīs aedībūs, in one house; b) when it assumes the sense of "only," "alone," "one and the same," "like," &c.; as trēs uni passus, only three steps; unis morībūs, with one and the same kind of manners, &c.

2. Like dūō is inflected ambō, ambae, ambō, "both." — Instead of the genitives dūōrum, dūārūm, the contracted form dūūm is frequently employed, especially with mīllūm, thousand.

C. Obs. The numeral mille, thousand, is indeclinable in the singular, but is regularly inflected in the plural, e. g. mīllā, mīllūm, mīllībūs, &c. It is generally followed by the genitive (sometimes by an appositional case) of the objects enumerated, as mille homīnum, duo (tria, quattuor, &c.*) mīlia homīnum (more rarely homīnes), &c. — This is its construction as a substantive; but mille is far more frequently used as an indeclinable adjective in all the cases, singular and plural; e. g. mille equites, a thousand knights; mille hominum numero, a thousand men in number; mille modis, in a thousand ways.

D. The Romans have a separate class of numerals in answer to the question, How many each (apiece)? or How many each time? (Quōtēni, ae, a?) These are always in the plural, and are called Distributives. E. g. bīni (terni, quāterni, &c.), “two (three, four) each,” or “two (three, four) each time,” “two by two”; singūli, “one each,” “one by one,” “one at a time.” Examples:—

Boys of sixteen or seventeen years each.	Puēri sēnum septenūmoe dēnum† annōrum.
They met with one interpreter each.	Cūm singūlis interprētibus congrēsi sūnt.
He gave us three books apiece.	Dēdit nobīs tērnos libros.
His daughters have each a son.	Fīliae ejus singūlos filios habent.
He does not know how much twice two is.	Nōn didicit, bīs bina quōt essent.

E. Obs. These distributives are employed instead of the cardinals, a) in connection with such substantives as are used in the plural only,† as binae (not duae) scopae, two brooms, quaternae nuptiae, four weddings, &c.; b) with substantives whose plural assumes a simple signification different from the singular, as castrum, a castle, duo castra, two castles; but una castra (pl. peculiar), a camp, bina castra, two camps; aedes, a temple, tres aedes, three temples; but aedes (a pl. with singular signification), a house, unae aedes, one house, trinae § aedes, three houses; littera, a letter (of the alphabet), quattuor litterae, four letters (of the alphabet); but litterae (pl.), a letter (epistle), unae litterae, one letter, quaternae litterae, four letters, &c.

The hatter.

The joiner.

Round.

A or an (one).

Opifēx* (gen. -icis) pilēōrum, m.

Fābēr (ri, m.) scrinīarius.

Rotundus, a, um.

{ Aliquīs, -quā, -quōd.

* It is also customary to use the distributives instead of the cardinal numerals, and to say bina (terna, quaterna, &c.) mīlia for duo mīlia, &c. — The accusative of the objects enumerated becomes necessary when one of the declinable numerals dūcenti, &c. is added; as, habet tria mīlia trecentos milites, he has three thousand three hundred soldiers.

† The plural in um is the regular form for this class of numerals, instead of the orum, arum, orum of other adjectives.

‡ This applies only to such nouns as have a singular signification with this plural form. Plurals like liberi, children, follow the general law.

§ In all these cases, where the distributive is thus used for the cardinal numeral with nouns of a plural form, the English “one” must be expressed by uni, ae, a, and “three” by trini, ae, a. Singūli and terni remain distributive always.

F. Obs. The indefinite article a or an is generally omitted in Latin. When expressed, however, it is unus, a, um, "one," or aliquis, quā, quod, "some one." Examples:—

Have you a looking-glass ?	{ Estne tibi (unum) speculum ?
I have one.	{ Habesne (unum) speculum ?
	{ Est mihi unum.
	{ Habeo unum.
Have you a book ?	{ Estne tibi (unus) liber ?
	{ Habesne (unum) librum ?
I have one.	{ Est mihi unus.
	{ Habeo unum (aliquem).
I have none.	{ Est mihi nullus (or Non est).
	{ Nullum habeo.
Have you a good round hat ?	{ Estne tibi bonum unum pileum
	{ rotundum ?
	{ An habes bonum unum pileum ro-
	{ tundum ?
I have one.	{ Est mihi unus.
	{ Unum habeo.
Has he a beautiful house (home) ?	{ Num est ei domus pulchra ?
	{ Numquid ille habet domum unam
	{ pulchram ?
I have none.	{ Est ei nulla (or Non est).
	{ Nullam habet (or Non habet).
I have two of them.	{ Mihi sunt duae.
	{ Ego (earum) duas habeo.
He has three of them.	{ Sunt ei tres.
	{ Habet (earum) tres.

G. Obs. The partitive genitive after numerals is commonly omitted in Latin, when the quantity denoted by them is equal to the whole. But the relative pronoun may stand in the same case with the numeral.

You have four of them.	{ Sunt tibi quattuor.
	{ Quattuor (earum*) habes.
Of which you have five.	{ Quae tibi quinque sunt.
	{ Quas† quinque habes.
Have you five good horses ?	{ Suntne tibi quinque equi boni ?
	{ Num quinque habes equos bonos ?
Nay rather, I have six of them.	{ Immo vero mihi sunt sex.
	{ Habeo (eorum) sex.

* Earum can only be correctly put when it refers to a larger number already alluded to.

† Quae and quas, because the numeral quinque denotes the entire number possessed ; but quorum if a larger number is meant.

I have six good and seven bad ones. { Sūnt mīhi sex bōni et septem viles.
Ego sex bōnos septemque viles hābeo.

And. (Copulative conjunction.)

Et, ac, atque, -que.

H. Obs. The conjunction ac cannot be used when the next word begins with a vowel or the letter h. Et and atque stand before vowels and consonants both. The enclitic que, like the interrogative ne, is always suffixed to the word which it serves to connect.

Have you a (one) letter ? { Estne tibi ūna epīstōla ?
Habēsne ūnas līteras ?
I have ten of them. { Sūnt mīhi dēcem.
Hābeo (eārum) dēnas.
I have ten letters and five notes. { Sūnt mīhi dēcem epīstōlæ et (ac, atque *) quīnque schēdūlæ.
(Ego) dēnas līteras et (ac, atque) quīnque schēdūlas hābeo. (See Obs. E.)
Titus and Cajus have each of them a book. { Tītus et Cājus lībros sīngulos hā-bent.
They have five looking-glasses apiece. { Sūnt sīs quīna spēcūla.
Quīna spēcūla hābent.
I have three houses and a thousand pens. { Sūnt mīhi aēdes trīnæ et mīlle pennārūm.
Ego aēdes trīnas atque mīlle pēnnas hābeo.

I. The following Table exhibits a list of the cardinal and distributive numerals of the Latin language :—

CARDINAL.		DISTRIBUTIVE.
1. ūnus, a, um, one .	I.	singūli, ae, a,	one each .
2. duō, ae, o, two .	II.	binī, ae, a,	two each .
3. trēs, tria, three .	III.	terni (or trīni), ae, a,	three each .
4. quattuor, four .	IV.	quaterni, ae, a,	four each .
5. quinque, five .	V.	quīni, ae, a,	five each .
6. sex, six , &c.	VI.	sēni, ae, a,	six each , &c.
7. septem	VII.	septēni, ae, a,
8. octo	VIII.	octōni, ae, a,
9. novem	IX.	novēni, ae, a,
10. dēcem	X.	dēni, ae, a,

* Atque (= ad + que) is emphatic, and may be rendered by "and besides." Et connects objects considered as distinct, que things belonging to, or resulting from, each other. Ac has upon the whole the same force as atque, but it is often employed instead of a simple et, to prevent a repetition of the latter.

CARDINAL.		DISTRIBUTIVE.
11.	undĕcim	XI.	undĕni, ae, a.
12.	dūdĕcim	XII.	dūdĕni, ae, a.
13.	{ trĕdĕcim or dĕcem et tres }	XIII.	terni dĕni, ae, a.

20.	viginti	XX.	vicĕni, ae, a.
21.	{ unus et viginti viginti unus † }	XXI.	vicĕni singŭli, ae, a.
22.	{ duo et viginti viginti duo }	XXII.	vicĕni bini, ae, a.
23.	tres et viginti	XXIII.	vicĕni terni, ae, a.
28.	{ octo et viginti dūdĕtriginta }	XXVIII.	vicĕni octōni, ae, a.
29.	{ nōvem et viginti undĕtriginta }	XXIX.	vicĕni nōvēni, ae, a.
30.	triginta	XXX.	tricĕni, ae, a.
40.	quādrāginta	XL.	quādrāgĕni, ae, a.
50.	quinqŭaginta	L.	quinqŭāgĕni, ae, a.
60.	sexāginta	LX.	sexāgĕni, ae, a.
70.	septuāginta	LXX.	septuāgĕni, ae, a.
80.	octōginta	LXXX.	octōgĕni, ae, a.
90.	nōnāginta	XC.	nonāgĕni, ae, a.
99.	{ nōnāginta nōvem undĕcentum }	IC.	{ nonāgĕni nōvēni, ae, a. undĕcĕni, ae, a.
100.	centum	C.	centĕni, ae, a.
109.	{ centum et nōvem centum nōvem }	CIX.	centĕni nōvēni, ae,
200.	dūcenti, ae, a	CC.	dūcĕni, ae, a.
300.	trĕcenti, ae, a	CCC.	trĕcĕni, ae, a.
400.	quādringenti, ae, a	CCCC.	quādringĕni, ae, a.
500.	quingenti, ae, a	IO or D.	quingĕni, ae, a.

* For 18, 28, 38, &c. and for 19, 29, 39, &c. the subtractive expressions dūdĕviginti, dūdĕtriginta, undĕviginta, &c., as far as undĕcentum, are more common than the compounds dĕcem et octo, &c., and neither the duo nor the un of these words is inflected.

† The rule for the juxtaposition of the intermediate numbers is, that from 20 to 100 either the smaller may precede with et, or the larger WITHOUT et, as in the case of 21. But beyond 100, the larger always comes first, with or without et; e. g. dūcenti quadrāginta sex, or dūcenti et quadrāginta sex, 246.

Lesson XIX. — PENSUM UNDEVICESIMUM.

How much?	Quā multum? quantum? (with the gen.).
How many?	{ Quā multi, ae, ā? Quā? (indeclinable).
How much bread, wine, water?	{ Quā multum pānis, vīni, aquae? Quantum pānis, vīni, aquae?
How many knives?	{ Quot (quā multi) cūltri? Quā multi cultrorum?
How many tables?	{ Quot (quā multae) mēnsae? Quā multae mensarum?
How many looking-glasses?	{ Quot (quā multa) spēcūla? Quā multa speculorum?
Only, but. (Adv.)	{ Tantum, solum,* nō nisi, duntaxat.
How many tables have you?	{ Quot tibi mēnsae sūnt? Quā multas mēnsas habes?
I have only two.	{ Mīhi nō sūnt nisi duae. Duas tantum habeo.
How many knives have you?	{ Quot sūnt tibi cūltri? Quā multos cūltros habes?
I have but one good one.	{ Est mīhi ūnus solum bonus. Ūnum solum bonum habeo.
How many glasses have you?	{ Quot sūnt tibi vāsa vitrēa? Quā multa vāsa vitrēa habes?
I have but six.	{ Sūnt mīhi duntaxat sex. Sex tantum habeo.
I have ten, and those (and indeed) good ones.	{ Dēcem mīhi sūnt, eaque (et ea, atque ea) bona.
A. Obs. The demonstrative is, ea, id is often put with the conjunctions et, atque, que, et—quidem, and nec by way of explanation of something that precedes, in the sense of the English "and that," "and indeed," "nor indeed," "and not indeed" (nec is).
I have a hundred books, and those good ones.	Centum libros (librorum) habeo, et eos bonos.
I have but one table, and that a poor one.	Ūnam tantum mēnsam habeo, eamque tēnuem.
What? What kind of?	{ Quid, quae, quod or quid. Qui(s)nam, quānam, quodnam or quidnam? Qualis, quālis, quāle?
What sort of?

* In connection with a substantive, and especially with one denoting a person, the English "only" is frequently expressed by the adjective solus or unus ("alone"); as, ego solus habeo, I only (alone) have; solos poetas legit, he reads only poets.

B. Obs. The pronominal adjective quālis denotes the nature or quality of a person or object, and is the correlative of tūlis, "such," "so constituted." It is inflected like turpis (Lessons IV. and XIII.). The pronoun quī, quae, quōd agrees with its noun in gender, number, and case, but quōd stands substantively, and is followed by the genitive.

What (sort of a) book have you?	{	Quālis (quīs) ēst tibi liber?
I have a fine book.	{	Quālem librum (quid libri) habes?
	{	Est mihi liber pulcher.
	{	Librum pulchrum habeo.
What (kind of a) table has he?	{	Quālis (quāenam) ēst ei mensa?
	{	Quid mensae habet?
He has a wooden table.	{	Quam or quālem mensam habet?
	{	Est ei mensa lignea.
	{	Mensam ligneam habet.
What (sort of) sugar has your friend?	{	Quāle (quōd) ēst amico tuo saccharum?
	{	Quidnam ēst amico tuo sacchari?
	{	Quāle (quōd) habet amicus tuus saccharum?
He has good sugar.	{	Est ei saccharum bonum.
	{	Bonum saccharum habet.
What (sort of) knives has he?	{	Quāles (quī) sūnt ei libri?
	{	Quid librōrum habet?
He has bad books.	{	Quāles (quōsnam) libros habet?
	{	Sūnt ei libri viles (nēquam).
	{	Libros habet nēquam (vīles).
What paper have you?	{	Quālis (quāe) ēst tibi charta?
	{	Quidnam chartae habes?
I have beautiful paper.	{	Quālem (quā) chartam habes?
	{	Est mihi charta pulchra.
	{	Pulchram chartam habeo.

Our, ours.

Your, yours (plural).

Nostēr, nostrā, nostrūm.

Vestēr, vestrā, vestrūm.

C. The possessive pronouns noster and vester are declined like pulcher. Thus:—

Nostēr, nostrā, nostrūm, our, ours.

	SINGULAR.			PLURAL.
NOM.	nostēr	nostrā	nostrūm	nostri	nostrae	nostrā
GEN.	nostri	nostrae	nostri	nostrōrūm	-ārūm	-ōrūm
DAT.	nostrō	nostrae	nostrō		nostris
ACC.	nostrūm	nostrūm	nostrūm	nostrōs	nostrās	nostrā
VOC.	Like Nom.			Like Nom.
ABL.	nostrō	nostrā	nostrō.	nostris.

Have you our candlestick or his ?	Nostrúmne candēlābrum hábēs án éjus (illius) ?
I have his.	Éjus (hábeo).
Has he his own hats or ours ?	Útrum ille ténēt pīleos suòsmet án nóstrós ?
He has ours.	Nóstrós (ténēt).
Which paper have you ?	Quám chártam hábēs ?
I have that of our friends.	Familiáriūm nostrórum chártam há- beo.
How many are there of us ?	Quót (quám mūlti) sūmus ?

D. Obs. When quot or quam multi denotes the entire number, they do not admit the partitive genitive after them. The latter can only be put where in English we use among.

How many are there of you ?	Quót éstis ?
How many are there of them ?	Quót sunt illi ?
There are twenty of us, of you, of them.	Viginti sūmus, éstis, sūnt.
How many are there among us, among you, among them ?	Quót sunt nóstrum, véstrum, illò- rum ?
There are twelve among us, you, them.	Duódecim sūnt nóstrum, véstrum, illórum.

OF REDUNDANT NOUNS.

E. Redundant nouns are such as exhibit a superfluity of forms. This may take place in several ways :—

1. There may be two forms for the nominative and one only for the remaining cases ; as arbōr or arbūs, gen. arbōris, f., a tree ; hōnōr or hōnūs, gen. hōnōris, m., honor, &c., &c.

2. There may be one form for the nominative, and two forms of different declensions for the genitive and remaining cases ; as laurūs, gen. i & ūs, f., the laurel-tree* ; cupressūs, i & ūs, f., the cypress ; ficūs, i & ūs, f., the fig-tree ; pinūs, i & ūs, f., the pine ; and cōlūs, i & ūs, f., a distaff. Among these may be included jūgērum, i, n., a Roman acre, which has a redundant ablative : sing. jūgērō & jūgēre, pl. jūgērīs & jūgērībūs† ; and the plural ilīa, the entrails, which in the gen. has ilīum & ilīōrum, and in the dat. and abl. ilībūs & ilīs. Vās, gen. vāsīs, n., a vessel, has its plural from the secondary form vāsum, i, n. :—vāsa, vasōrum, &c.

* The remaining cases are, Dat. laurō, Acc. laurū, Voc. lauré, Abl. laurō and laurū ; Pl. Nom. lauri and laurūs, Gen. laurōrum, Dat. and Abl. laurīs, Acc. laurōs, Voc. lauri. Other names of trees prefer the second declension, except quercus, which is entirely of the fourth.

† The forms of the second declension are to be preferred in prose.

3. One and the same noun may have two forms of different genders, but of the same declension. Such are :—

bācūlum,* i, n.	and	bācūlus, i, m.	a staff, stick.
baltēus, i, m.	"	baltēum, i, n.	girdle, bell.
callus, i, m.	"	callum, i, n.	hard flesh, callus.
cātillus, i, m.	"	cātilum, i, n.	a small dish.
cātinus, i, m.	"	cātinum, i, n.	a dish, platter.
clīpēus, i, m.	"	clīpēum, i, n.	a shield.
cūbītus, i, m.	"	cūbītum, i, n.	the fore-arm; a cubit.†
intūbus, i, m.	"	intūbum, i, n.	succory (a plant).
jūgūlum, i, n.	"	jūgūlus, i, m.	the collar-bone.
lūpinus, i, m.	"	lūpinum, i, n.	lupine (a plant).
pālātum, i, n.	"	pālātus, i, m.	the palate.
pāpȳrus, i, m. & f.	"	pāpȳrum, i, n.	the papyrus (reed).
pīlēum, i, n.	"	pīlēus, i, n.	sort of hat.
porrum, i, n.	"	porrus, i, m.	leek.

4. One and the same substantive may have two forms of different declensions, as :—

ālmōnīa, ae, f.	and	ālmōnīum, i, n.	aliment.
angīportus, ūs, m.	"	angīportum, i, n.	alley, lane.
arcus, ūs, m.	"	arcus,† i, m.	a bow; an arch.
buccīna, ae, f.	"	buccīnum, i, n.	a horn, trumpet.
cingūlum, i, m.	"	cingūla, ae, f.	a girdle, belt.
consortio, ōnis, f.	"	consortium, i, n.	partnership.
delphīnus, i, m.	"	delphin, inis, m.	a dolphin.
ēlēphantus, i, m.	"	ēlēphās, antis, m.	an elephant.
essēdum, i, n.	"	essēda, ae, f.	a war-chariot.
hebdōmāa, ādis, f.	"	hebdōmāda, ae, f.	a week.
jūventus, ūtis, f.	"	{ jūventa, ae, f. }	(the age of) youth.
		{ jūventās,§ ātis, f. }
mendum, i, n.	"	menda, ae, f.	a fault, error.
pālumbēs, is, m. & f.	"	{ pālumbus, i, m. }	the ring-dove.
		{ pālumba, ae, f. }
paupertās, ātis, f.	"	paupēriēs, ēi, f.	poverty.
pāvō, ōnis, m.	"	pāvus, i, m.	a peacock.
pēnum, i, n.	"	{ pēnus, ūs & i, m. & f. }	provisions.
		{ pēnus, ōris, n. }
plebs, gen. plēbis, f.	"	plēbēs, ēi, f.	the common people.
senectus, ūtis, f.	"	senecta,¶ ae, f.	old age.
tāpētē, is, n.	"	{ tāpētum, i, n. }	tapestry; carpet.
		{ (tāpēs,) ētis, m. }

* In this list the form most generally in use is put first, without reference to gender.

† The measure is commonly denoted by cubitum, especially in the plural.

‡ The latter chiefly of the rainbow. But this noun may also be referred to case 2.

§ Chiefly in poetry:—youth personified.

|| The poetical form.

¶ This latter is poetical.

tōnītrus, ūs, m.	} and tōnītrūm, i. n.	thunder.
tōnītrū, ūs, n.
vesp̄era, ae, f.	“ { vesper(us), ĕri,* m.		evening.
	{ vesper, ĕris, m.

5. A number of feminine nouns have two forms, one of the first, the other of the fifth declension †:—

barbāria, ae,	and barbāriēs, ēi, f.	barbarity.
dūrītīa, ae,	“ dūrītīēs, ēi, f.	hardness.
luxūria, ae,	“ luxūrīēs, ēi, f.	profusion, luxury.
mācēria, ae,	“ mācēriēs, ēi, f.	a garden-wall.
mātēria, ae,	“ mātēriēs, ēi, f.	matter, materials.
mollītīa, ae,	“ mollītīēs, ēi, f.	suppleness, softness.
mūria, ae,	“ mūrīēs, ēi, f.	salt liquor, brine.
segnītīa, ae,	“ segnītīēs, ēi, f.	sluggishness.

6. Verbal substantives of the fourth declension with a secondary form in uhi:—

cōnātus, ūs, m.	and cōnātum, i, n.	an effort, attempt.
eventus, ūs, m.	“ eventum, i, n.	an issue, event.
praetextus, ūs, m.	“ praetextum, i, n.	an ornament, a pretext.
rictus, ūs, m.	“ rictum, i, n.	the jaws, open mouth.

F. Among redundant nouns we must include those which, in the plural, assume another gender and another form, partly in addition to the regular form. Such are:—

1. MASCULINES, which in the plural have an additional NEUTER form:—

jōcus, i, m.	a jest, joke;	pl. jōci	and jōca.
lōcus, i, m.	a place;	“ lōci †	“ lōca.
sibilus, i, m.	a whistling sound;	“ sibili	“ sibila. §
Tartārus, i, m.	the infernal region;	“ Tartāra	(only).

2. FEMININES with an additional NEUTER form in the plural:—

carbāsus, i, f.	a curtain, sail;	pl. carbāsi	and carbāsa.
margārita, ae, f.	a pearl;	“ margāritae	“ margārita, -orum.
ostrēa, ae, f.	an oyster;	“ ostrēae	“ ostrēa, -orum.

3. NEUTERS with plurals of different genders:—

balnēum, i, n.	a bath;	pl. balnēa, n.	and balnēac, f.
coelum, i, n.	the sky, heavens;	“ coeli	(only), m.

* Of this form there is only the Acc. vesp̄erum and the Nom. commonly vesp̄er, sometimes vesp̄erus. The ablative is vesp̄ere and vesp̄eri. But vesper, ĕri, m., the evening-star, is regular.

† But this form of the fifth declension is commonly used only in the Nom., Acc., and Abl.

‡ The masculine, chiefly of places or passages in books; the neuter, of localities proper.

§ Sibili denotes single or isolated whistling or hissing sounds, and sibila continued hissing (chiefly in poetry).

|| The latter more frequent, and in the sense of “public baths.”

dēlicium , i, n.	delight ;	pl. dēliciae (only), f.
ēpulum , i, n.	a public banquet ;	" epulae (only), f.
frēnum , i, n.	the bridle, rein ;	" frēni, m. and frēna, n.
porrum ,* i, n.	leek ;	" porri (only), m.
rastrum , i, n.	a rake, harrow ;	" rastri, m. and rastra, n.
sisēr, ēris , n.	skirwort (a plant) ;	" sisēres (only), m.

EXERCISE 21.

Lesson XX. — PENSUM VICESIMUM.

Much, a good deal.

{ Multum (with the gen.).
 { Multis, ā, ūm.
 { Permultum (a good deal).

Many, a large number.

{ Multi, ae, ā.
 { Multum (with the gen. pl.).
 { *Non pauci, ae, ā.
 { Copia magna, ae, f. (with the gen.).

A. Obs. The indefinite numeral multus is declined like bonus, and has the construction of adjectives. But instead of multus in agreement with its substantive, the neuter multum is often put partitively, and followed by the genitive, either singular in the sense of "much," or plural in the sense of "many." As Much bread, money, sugar.

Multum panis, pecūniae, sacchari.

Many books, letters, candlesticks.

{ Multi libri, multae epistolae, multa candelabra.

{ Multum librōrum, epistolārum, candelabrōrum.

Many men.

{ Multi homines (or hominum).†

{ Copia (hominum) magna.

Many (i. e. men); many things.

{ Multi; multa (neut. pl.) = res multae.

Have you much good wine?

Estne tibi (habesne) multum vini boni?

I have a good deal.

* Non pauci is negative: "not a few." — Copia or multitudo (gen. -dinis) magna, "a large force, body, or multitude." Besides these, frequentes is also used in the sense of "numerous."

† Multi hominum is the same as the English "many among men," "many of the human family."

Have you much of the money ?	Estne tibi (habēsne) multum ejus pecuniae ?
I have a good deal of it.	{ Est mihi ejus satis multum. Satis multum ejus habeo.
Too much.	{ Nimis, ā, ūm. Nimis multum, nimum (with the gen.).
Too many.	{ Nimis multi, ae, ā. Nimis multum or nimum (with the gen. pl.).
Too much bread, money, wine.	Nimis multum (nimum) panis, pecuniae, vini.
Too many men.	{ Nimis multi homines (hominum). Nimum hominum.
We.	Nos. (Lesson IX. B.)
We have.	{ Nobis est (pl. sunt). Nos habemus (tenemus).
We are.	Nos sumus.
We are hungry, thirsty.	(Nos) esurimus, sitimus.

B. Obs. The pronoun nos, like ego, tu, ille, &c., is commonly not expressed before the verb.

We are right (correct), wrong. (Nos) recte loquimur, (nos) erramus.

We have not much money. { Nobis non est multum pecuniae.
Non multum pecuniae habemus.

Ye or you (pl.).	Vos. (Lesson IX. B.)
Ye (or you) have.	{ Vobis est (pl. sunt). Vos habetis.
Ye (or you) are.	Vos estis.
Ye (or you) are hungry, thirsty.	(Vos) esuritis, sititis.
Ye (or you) are right, wrong.	{ (Vos) recte loquimini. (Vos) erratis.
Ye (or you) are tired, sleepy.	(Vos) estis fessi, somniculosi.

Enough. { Satis, sat, adsatim (with the gen.); pl. satis multi, ae, ā.

C. Obs. The adverb satis is often employed substantively, like the pronouns nil, quid, quantum, multum, &c., and is followed by the genitive singular or plural. E. g.

Enough bread, money, sugar. Satis (sat) panis, pecuniae, sacchari.*

* Satis may, however, also stand adjectively; as satis otium, satis consilium, leisure, advice enough; so that we may likewise say, Satis pecunia, saccharum, homines, &c. — In questions, satin for antene is very common; as Satin antre? Is all quite well? Satin plane audio? Do I hear with sufficient distinctness?

Men enough.	{ Sāt (sātis) hómīnum.
	{ Sātis múltī hómīnes.
Looking-glasses enough.	{ Sātis speculōrum.
	{ Sātis multa spēcūla.

	{ Habēsne sātis pecūniāe?
I have only a little, but (yet) enough.	{ Pārum tāntum hábeo, sód (támen) sātis.
Little.	{ Pārūm, paulūm (with the gen.).
	{ Pauxillum, pauxillulum.

D. Obs. The construction of the adverb pārum (paulum) is the same as that of sātis. Pārum is frequently used in the sense of "too little."

(But) little bread, money, sugar. Pārum (paulum) pānis, pecūniāe, saccchari.

Only a little, not much, but little. { Nonnisi pārūm (paulūm).
Paulūm (pārūm) tantūm.

He has but little (of it). { Pārum tāntum (ejus) hábet.

{ Nōn hábet (ejus) nisi pārūm (pauxillum).

OF THE CLASSIFICATION OF SUBSTANTIVES.

E. Latin substantives are commonly divided into a number of general classes, of which some are peculiar to the language. The principle of division depends partly on their signification and partly on their derivation. These classes are : —

1. Common Nouns, or such as denote a genus or species comprehending a plurality of individuals or parts; as hōmo, a man; ēquus, a horse; dōmus, a house.

Among common nouns may be included the names of materials : as aurum, gold; sāl, salt; argentum, silver.

2. Collectives, or those which, though singular in form, are plural in signification; as pōpūlus, a people; sēnātus, a senate.

3. Abstract Nouns, or such as denote some quality, activity, or mode of existence; as pulchritūdo, -nis, beauty; pīctas, -ātis, f., piety; infantia, ae, f., infancy; cursus, -ūs, m., a course; fāmes, -is, f., hunger.

The majority of these substantives are formed from adjectives or verbs. Those derived from adjectives commonly end in itas (ietas), ia, tūdo, itia, or ēdo; as bōnus — bōnitas, goodness; vētus — vētustas, oldness, age; ēlēgans — ēlēgantia, elegance; miser — miseria, misery; longus — longitūdo, length; justus — justitia, justice; dulcis — dulcedo, sweetness.

4. Proper Nouns, or names of individuals, countries, and places; as Cæsār, Cicēro, Virgīlius; Itālia, Rōma.

5. Patronymics, derived from proper names of persons, and indicative of extraction. These generally end in ides (ides, ades, iades) masculine, and in is (ēis, ias), ine, or ione * feminine. E. g. Prīamīdēs, a son of Priam; Lāertiādēs, a son of Laertes; Nērēis, a daughter of Nereus; Neptūnīnē, a daughter of Neptune.

6. Patrials or Gentiles, derived from proper names of countries or places, and indicative of nationality; as Anglus, an Englishman; Arabs, an Arab; Celta, a Celt; Trōs (gen. Trōis), a native of Troy; Trōūs, -adis, f., a woman born at Troy; Arpinās, -ātis, a native of Arpinum.

The majority of Patrials are originally adjectives; as Romānus, a, um; Syracusānus, a, um; Antīōchēnsis, is, e; Athēnēnsis, is, e, &c.

* Patronymics in dēs and nē are of the first declension; as Priamīdes, -dae, -den, -ile, -ilē (dū); Neptūnīnē, -ēs, -ē, -en, -ē, -ē. Those in is and as, of the third; as Nērēis, -idis or -idos, &c.; Thestius, -iūdis, f., &c.

7. Diminutives, or such as convey the idea of littleness, and sometimes of endearment; as fratercŭlus, a little brother; litterŭla, a little (short) letter.

This class of substantives is very numerous in Latin. They are formed from other substantives, and end (according to the gender of their primitives) most commonly in ŭlus, ŭla, ŭlum, or cŭlus, cŭla, cŭlum; sometimes also in ŏlus, a, um; ellus (illus), a, um, or uncŭlus, a, um. The following, formed from words already known to the learner, may serve as examples:—

servŭlus , i, m.	a little servant;	from	servus .
hortŭlus , i, m.	" garden;	"	hortus .
pŭerŭlus , }	" boy;	"	puer .
puellus , }
puellŭlus , }
infantŭlus , i, m.	" infant;	"	infans .
căpitŭlum , i, n.	" head;	"	caput .
opusculum , i, n.	" work;	"	opus .
chartŭla , ae, f.	" paper;	"	charta .
aedicŭla , ae, f.	" house;	"	aedes .
diēcŭla , ae, f.	" while;	"	dies .
curricŭlum , i, n.	" chariot;	"	curtus .
corcŭlum , i, n.	" heart;	"	cor .
cornicŭlum , i, n.	" horn;	"	cornu .
ocellus , i, m.	" eye;	"	oculus .
libellus , i, m.	" book;	"	liber .
cultellus , i, m.	" knife;	"	culter .
cătellus , }	" dog;	"	canis .
cătŭlus , }
fiŭlŭlus , i, m.	" son;	"	filius .
fiŭlŭla , ae, f.	" daughter;	"	filia .
pileŭlus , i, m. }	" hat;	"	pileus (um).
pileŭlum , i, n. }
băcillum , i, n.	" stick;	"	baculum .
villum , i, n.	" wine;	"	vinum .
lăpillus , i, m.	" stone;	"	lapis .
hŏmuncŭlus , i, m.	" man;	"	homo .
dŏmuncŭla , ae, f.	" house;	"	domus .
equŭlŭcus , i, m.	" horse;	"	equus .

8. Amplificatives (usually in o), which convey the notion of largeness and contempt; as bucco, ŏnis, m. (from bucca, the cheek), a blubber-head; năso, ŏnis, m. (from năsus, the nose), a man with a large nose.

9. Verbal Nouns, or such as are derived from verbs. These are either common or abstract; as lector, ŏris, m., a reader; audŭtor, ŏris, m., a hearer; ămor, ŏris, m., love; clămor, ŏris, m., a clamor; contemptŭo, ŏnis, f., and contemptus, ŭs, m., contempt; gaudŭm, i, n., joy; ornămentum, i, n., an ornament.

The kreutzer (a coin).	*Kreutzērus,† i, m.
The shilling.	*Schillingus, i, m.

A few, some few.

{ Aliquod (indeclinable).
Nonnulli, ae, ā.
Pauci, ae, ā; perpauci, ae, ā (very few).

A. Obs. The proper equivalent for the English "few" is pauci, ae, ā, and is opposed to "many." — Instead of this, nonnulli and aliquot may be used in the sense of "some, some few, several."

* This word, like the English, signifies both work or labor in general, and also a literary production.

† I put these modern coins with a Latin termination, instead of the more inconvenient circumlocution numus nomen gerens kreutzer, schilling.

Have you a few books?	{ SÚntne tibi áliquot líbri ? Hábēsne áliquot líbros ?
I have a few (some few).	{ SÚnt mibi áliquot. Nonnúllos hábeo.
He has a few.	{ SÚnt ei áliquot (nonnúlli). Nonnúllos (áliquot) hábet.
I have only (but) a few knives.	{ Pauci tántum cúltri mihi sÚnt. Cúltros hábeo nõn nÍsi paucos.
You have only a few.	{ Pauci modo (tántum) tibi sÚnt. Hábēs nõn nÍsi paucos.
Few men.	{ Pauci hómínes, pauci.
Few things.	{ Paúcae res, paúca (n. pl.).
Very few (men), things.	{ Perpauci, perpaúca.

Other, the other, another.

{ Altēr, ěra, ěrũm (of two).
{ Áliũs, ā, ũl (of several).

B. Obs. Altēr is opposed to únus or another alter, and signifies the other of two. Áliũs, on the other hand, is applied to several or many, and is another (of many). These words are thus inflected:—

S. altēr, the other.

P. altĕrī, the others.

	{	Est (ei) aliud.
	{	Hābet aliud.
	{	Est ei aliud nullum.
	{	Nullum aliud habet.

C. Obs. When the words alter and alius are repeated in opposition to each other, the first alter signifies "the one," and the second "the other"; and the first alius "one," and the second "the other."

The one hates the other.	Alter (or unus) alterum odit.
One (of many or of two parties) hates the other.	Alius alium odit.
They hate each other.	Alii alios odērunt.
It is one thing to asperse and another to accuse.	Aliud est maledicere aliud accusare.

He has them not.	{	(Ea) nōn habet.

OF ORDINAL NUMERALS.

D. Ordinal numerals contain the answer to the question Quotūs, ā, ūm? "Which of a certain number, rank, or place?" as prīmus, the first; sēcundūs, the second; dēcimūs, the tenth. They are all of them adjectives of the first and second declensions, and inflected like bōnus, a, um. Examples:—

Have you the first or the second book?	{	Estne tibi liber primus an sēcundus?
	{	Ūtrum librum habes primum an sēcundum?
I have the third.	{	Est mihi tertius.
	{	Tertium habeo.
Which volume have you?	{	Quotum est tibi volūmēn?
	{	Quotum volūmēn habes?
I have the fifth.	{	Est mihi quintum.
	{	Quintum habeo.
Which note have you?	{	Quota est tibi schēdula?
	{	Quotam schēdulam habes?
I have the fifth.	{	Est mihi quinta.
	{	Habeo quintam.
Which is the hour (of the day)?	{	Quota hōra est?
It is ten o'clock (the tenth).	{	Hōra dēcima est.*
What day of the month is it?	{	Quotus est dies mēnsis?

E. Adverbial numerals correspond to the question Quōtīens? or Quōtīēs? "How many times?" The answer then is either, generally, tōtīens (or tōtīēs), so many times; ālquōtīens (or -ēs), several times; or definitely, sēmēl, once; bls, twice; dēcītēs, ten times, &c.

F. The following table exhibits a list of the ordinals of the Latin language, and of the corresponding adverbial numerals:—

ORDINALS.		NUMERAL ADVERBS.
1.	{ primus, ā, ūm, the first. prior, prius, ōris, (of two). }	sēmēl,	once.
2.	{ sēcundus, a, um, the second. alter, ēra, ērum (of two). }	bls,	twice.

* Among the ancient Romans the tenth hour was four o'clock, P. M., the first being our six, A. M. The division of the days of the month was likewise different from ours (as will be shown hereafter). In writing and speaking the Latin, however, it is now customary to follow the modern method. It is necessary to add here, that "at an hour," "on a day" (or, more generally, "time when"), must be put in the ablative; as hōrā primā, at one o'clock; tertio Aprilis, on the third of April. A date may be written thus:—Romae, tertio Octobris, a. p. Chr. MDCCCLVI.; Rome, October 3d, 1856.

* The rule respecting the juxtaposition of ordinals is, that either the smaller numeral should precede the greater WITH "et," or the greater the smaller WITHOUT "et," as in this instance. To this, however, those from 13 to 19 must be regarded as exceptions, tertius decimus or tertius et decimus, &c. being here the only admissible forms. For 21st, Ūnus et vicēsīmus, fem. Ūna et vicēsīma (or, contracted, unetvicēsīma), are more common than PRIMUS et vicēsīmus, &c. So also ALTER et vicēsīmus (tricēsīmus, quādrāgēsīmus, &c.) better than SECUNDUS et vicēsīmus, &c.

† For 28, 38, &c., 29, 39, 99, &c., the subtractive expressions dūdētricēsīmus, dūdēquādrāgēsīmus, &c., undētricēsīmus, undēquādrāgēsīmus, undēcentēsīmus, &c., are used, without any change of duo or un, precisely as in cardinals.

REMARKS.

1. Ambō, like duō, trēs, dūcenti, &c., is a natural plural, and consequently wants the singular.

2. Uterque, although involving a plural signification, is commonly put in the singular; as uterque polus, both poles; utrāque fortuna, both good and bad fortune; uterque pater, both parents. Sometimes, however, also in the plural; as utrique Dionysii, both the Dionysiiuses; utrāque oppida, both towns.

3. The plural utrique is regularly used, when two parties or collective bodies are spoken of; as Utrique (i. e. plebs et senatus) victoriam crudeliter exercebant, They both (i. e. the people and the senate) made a cruel use of their (respective) victories.

4. The remaining correlatives of ūter, "which of (the) two?" are: altēr, "the one of two," or "the other" (Lesson XXI. B.); altērūter, "one or other of two," "the one or the other"; neuter, "neither of the two"; ūterris and uterlibet, "any one of the two you please," "either of the two." All these compounds of uter are inflected like the simple pronoun, except alterūter, of which either both components are declined separately, as alter ūter, altēra utra, altērūm utrum, gen. altērius utrius, &c., or the last only, as altērūter, altērutra, altērutrum, gen. altērutrius, &c.

Have you my book or my paper? Ūtrum habēs meūm librum an meāam chartam?

I have both.

Ambō (utrumque) habeo.

B. RULE.—An adjective, participle, or pronoun, belonging to two or more nouns, is generally put in the plural. Its gender is determined according to the following rules:—

1. When the substantives are of the same gender, the adjective, participle, or pronoun agrees with them in gender. E. g. Pater mihi et frater mortui sunt, My father and brother are dead. Soror ejus et mater mortuae sunt, His sister and mother are dead.

2. When substantives denoting living beings are of different genders, the adjective is masculine rather than feminine, and feminine rather than neuter. E. g. Pater mihi et mater mortui sunt, My father and mother are dead. Soror tua et ejus mancipium (neut.) inventae sunt, Your sister and her slave have been found.*

3. When substantives denoting inanimate objects are of different genders, the adjective is neuter. E. g. Libros atque mensas multa pulchraque habeo, I have many fine books and tables. Labor voluptasque dissimilia naturae sunt, Labor and pleasure are naturally unlike.

4. When there is a mixture of animate and inanimate objects, the adjective either assumes the gender of the animate object, or is put into the neuter. E. g. Famulos et domos bonos multosque habeo, I have good servants and houses, and many of them. Canes mihi et cornua venatica multa eaque bona sunt, I have many dogs and hunting-horns, and those good ones.

5. The adjective, however, frequently agrees (in gender, number, and case) with the nearest noun, and is understood with the rest. E. g. Amor tuus ac judicium (sc. tuum) de me, Your affection and (your) opinion of me. Libros atque mensas multas easque pulchras habeo.

Which of us (of you, of them) two has that book? Úter nóstrum (véstrum, eórum) líbrum illum hábet?

Neither of us (of you, of them) has it. Neúter nóstrum (véstrum, eórum) éum hábet.

One or the other of us (of you, of them) has it. Álterúter nóstrum (véstrum, eórum) éum hábet.

Both of us (of you, of them) have it. { Úterque nóstrum (véstrum, eórum) éum hábet.

* The primary signification of adhuc (= ad + huc) is "hitherto," "thus far," "as yet." There is good authority, however, for its secondary senses of praelterea, "besides," and etiámnum, "yet," "as yet," "still."

EXERCISE 29.

Which volume of his work have you? — I have the second. — How many tomes has this work? — It has three. — Have you my work, or that of my brother? — I have both. — Has the foreigner my comb or my knife? — He has both. — Have you our bread or our cheese? — I have both. — Have you my glass or that of my friend? — I have neither the one nor the other. — Have we any more hay? — We have some more. — Has our merchant any more pepper? — He has some more. — Has he any more candles? — He has some more. — Have you any more coffee? — We have no more coffee, but we have some more vinegar. — Has the German any more water? — He has no more water, but he has some more meat. — Have we any more gold ribbons? — We have no more gold ribbons, but we have some more silver (ribbons). — Has our friend any more sugar? — He has no more. — Have I any more beer? — You have no more. — Has your young man any more friends? — He has no more.

EXERCISE 30.

Has your brother one more horse? — He has one more. — Have you one more? — I have one more. — Has the peasant one more ox? — He has one more. — Have you a few more gardens? — We have a few more. — What have you more? — We have a few good ships, and a few good sailors more. — Has our brother a few more friends? — He has a few more. — Have I a little more money? — You have a little more. — Have you any more courage? — I have no more. — Have you much more money? — I have much more, but my brother has no more. — Has he enough salt? — He has not enough. — Have we buttons enough? — We have not enough. — Has the good son of your good tailor buttons enough? — He has not enough. — Which of you two has some money left? — Neither of us has any left. — One or the other of us has a good deal of it left. — Has the sailor my stick or my sack? — He has neither (neutrum) of the two. — Have you my hat or my coat? — I have both. — Which of you (three) has my paper? — I have it not. — Has the youth anything left? — He has nothing left. — Have you many more candles? — I have not many more.

* Instead of reliquus (a, um) est, and reliqui (ae, a) sunt, the compounds of sum, superest and supersunt, may be employed in a similar sense. E. g. Superestne tibi aliquantum aquae, vini, pecuniae? — Superest. — Non superest. — Libri mihi multi uique boni supersunt, &c.

Lesson XXIII. — PENSUM TERTIUM ET VICESIMUM.

As much — as.	{ Tām multam — quām (multūm). Tantūm — quantum* (quām), (with the gen.).
As many — as.	{ Tīm multi, ae, a — quām multi, ae, a. Tā (indecl.) — quā (indecl.).
As much bread as wine.	Tantum (tām multum) pānis, quantum (quām multum or quām) vini.
As many men as children.	{ Tōt hōmīnes quōt† lībēri. Tām multi hōmīnes, quām (multi) lībēri.
Have you as much gold as silver?	Habēsne tantum auri, quantum (quām) argēti?
I have as much of the former as of the latter.	Habeo tantum illius, quantum (quām) huius.
I have as much of the one as of the other.	Tantum ex (de) altēro (ūno), quām ex (de) altēro habeo.

A. Obs. The partitive relation denoted by the English “of” is in Latin expressed either by the genitive or by the prepositions e, ex, or de with the ablative.

Have you as many hats as coats?	Habēsne tōt pīlēos quōt tōgas?
I have as many of these as of those.	Tōt (tām multas) illōrum, quōt (quām multas) hārum habeo.
I have as many of the one as of the other.	Habeo tām multas (tōt) ex unīs, quām multos (quōt) ex altēris. ‡
Have you as many (wine-) glasses as goblets?	Sūntne tibi tōt (tām multi) scyphi, quōt (quām multa or quām) pōcula?

* In a similar manner the Romans say, tantus — quantum, as great — as; tālis — quālis, such — as; tōtes — quōties, as many times — as, &c. Words thus corresponding with each other are called correlatives.

† Tot — quot, tantum — quantum are more frequent than tam multi, &c. The Romans are fond of inverting the logical order of these clauses, and of saying quot — tot, quantum — tantum, &c., and sometimes the tot, tantum, &c. is entirely suppressed; as Cras et quot dies (= tot dies, quot) erimus in Tusculano, To-morrow and as many days as we shall be in Tusculanum.

‡ “The former” of two persons or things is commonly expressed by ille, and sometimes also (especially when two persons are spoken of) by prior, m. & f., prius, gen. prioris. “The latter” may then be either hic or posterior, m. & f., posterius, n., gen. posterioris. “The one” may be expressed by alter or unus, “the other,” by alter or ille. The words may thus be used in every gender and in any of their cases, singular and plural. The plural ūni — alteri is here employed precisely like utrique of Lesson XXI. A. Rem. 8.

I have quite as many of the one as of the other. Súnt mñhi tótídem ex áteris, quót ex áteris or íllis.

Quite (or just) as many — as.

Tótídem (indecl.) — quót.

Quite (or just) as much — as.

Tantumdem (or tantundem) — quantum.

B. Obs. Tótídem is a compound of tot and ídem, and tantumdem of tantum and ídem (= likewise). The construction of these words is the same as that of tot and tantum.

I have just as much of this as of that. Est mñhi tantundem hujus, quantum illius.

I have just as many of these as of those. Súnt mñhi tótídem hórú, quót illórú.

I have just as much wine as water. Est mñhi tantundem víni, quantum aquae.

You have just as many hats as letters. Tíbi súnt tótídem plúi, quót epístolae.

More.

Plús, pl. plúres, plúra.

C. Obs. The comparative plús has only the neuter in the singular, but a double form in the plural. It is thus inflected : —

	SINGULAR.		PLURAL.
	Neut.	Masc. & Fem.	Neut.
NOM.	plús	plúrēs	plūrā (plūriā)

ABL.	plūrē or í.	plūribūs.

REMARKS.

1. The dative singular of plús is wanting.
2. The form plúria for plúra is obsolete, but still in use in the compound complúria, several.
3. Plúres and complúres are the only comparatives which have their genitives in ium. All others have um. (Cf. Less. XIII.).
4. The neuters plús and plúra are often used substantively,* and then the former signifies "more" (in the abstract), the latter "more things."

D. Obs. The neuter singular plús stands partitively, and is followed by the genitive of the noun, which may be either sin-

* And plús also adverbially; as plús formosus (= formosior), more beautiful; plús plúsque diligere, to cherish more and more.

gular or plural. Plures and plura have the agreement of regular adjectives, but they are frequently employed in the sense of "more than one," or "several." Thus:—

More bread, water, wine.

Plūs pānis, aquae, vini.

More men.

Plūs hómīnum, plūrēs hómīnēs.

More letters.

Plūs epistolārū, plūrēs epistolae.

More goblets.

Plūs pōculōrum, plūrā pōculā.

Than.

Quam; * quam quod, quam quantum; quam quot.

More water than wine.

Plūs aquae quām (quantum) vini.

More men than children.

Plūs hómīnum quām (quot) liberū (= liberōrum).
Plūrēs hómīnes quām (quot) liberi.

More of this than of that.

Plūs hujusce quam illius.
Plūs de (ex) hōc quām de (ex) illo.

More of the one than of the other.

Plūs ex (de) altero (ūno), quām ex (de) altero or illo.

More of these than of those.

Plūs hōrum (hārum, hōrum) quām illōrum (illārum, illōrum).
Plūs (plūres, plūra) ex (de) his quām ex (de) illis.

More of the one than of the other.

Plūs (plūres, plūra) de alteris (ūnis), quām de alteris or illis.

I have more of your sugar than of mine.

Est mihi plūs tui sacchāri quām quantum mei.
Ego plūs de sacchāro tuo habeo, quām quod de meo.

I have more books than letters.

Sunt mihi plūres librōrum quām quot epistolārū.

Less.

Minus (neut. with the gen.).

Less water than wine.

Mīnus aquae quām (quam quantum) vini.

Less bread than sugar.

Mīnus pānis quām (quod) sacchāri.

How many books have you?

Quot sunt tibi libri?
Quot libros habes?

I have more than five hundred.

Sunt mihi plūs quingenti.
Plūs quingētos habeo.

E. Obs. When the comparatives plus, amplius, and minus are followed by a numeral, the particle quam is often omitted.

* With reference to this quam, and the construction of comparatives generally, see Lesson XLII. The student will notice here the idiomatic use of quantum, quod, and quot.

I have less than twenty.	{ SÚNT mīhi mínus viginti.
How much money have you?	{ Mínus viginti hábeo.
I have less than ten dollars	QUÁNTAM pecúniám hábes?

F. Obs. The neuter singular mínus, "less," is construed like plus,* and the plural pauciôres, a, "fewer," like plures. They are thus inflected:—

NOM.	mínus	pauciôrēs	pauciôrā

EXERCISE 33.

How many children have you? — I have only one, but my brother has more than I; he has five. — Has your son as much head as mine? — He has less head than yours, but he has more courage. — My children have more courage than yours. — Have I as much money as you? — You have less than I. — Have you as many books as I? — I have less than you. — Have I as many enemies as your father? — You have fewer than he. — Have the Americans more children than we? — They have fewer than we. — Have we as many ships as the English? — We have less than they. — Have we fewer knives than the children of our friends? — We have fewer than they. — How many have they? — They have more than eighty. — How many have we? — We have less than twelve.

EXERCISE 34.

Who has fewer friends than we? — Nobody has fewer. — Have you as much of my tea as of yours? — I have as much of yours as of mine. — Have I as many of your books as of mine? — You have fewer of mine than of yours. — Has the Spaniard as much of your money as of his own? — He has less of his own than of ours. — Has your baker less bread than money? — He has less of the latter than of the former. — Has our merchant fewer dogs than horses? — He has fewer of the latter than of the former; fewer of the one than of the other. — He has fewer horses than we, and we have less bread than he. — Have our neighbors as many carriages as we? — We have fewer than they. — We have less corn and less meat than they. — We have but little corn, but meat enough. — How many houses have you? — I have more than thirty of them. — How many horses has the brother of our friend? — He has more than a hundred horses, and less than fifty books. — How much money have we? — We have less than ten shillings. — Has your young man less (fewer) mirrors than we? — He has more than you; he has more than a thousand.

Lesson XXIV.—PENSUM VICESIMUM QUARTUM.

OF THE LATIN VERBS.

A. Latin verbs are divided into three principal classes:— 1. Transitive verbs; 2. Intransitive or neuter verbs; 3. Deponent verbs.

1. Transitive verbs are active verbs, the sense of which is not complete without the addition of an object, which is generally in the accusative; as āmo, I love, sc. amicum, my friend; scrībo, I write, sc. epistolam, a letter.

2. Intransitive or neuter verbs are those which denote either a simple mode of existence, or such an activity as does not terminate in any object; as dormiō, I sleep, curro, I run.

3. The class of deponent verbs is peculiar to the Latin. They have a passive form with an active (or reflexive) signification; as loquor, I speak, sequor, I follow.

4. Transitive verbs have two forms, called the Active and the Passive Voices; as moneō, I remind, moneor, I am reminded; audīo, I hear, audior, I am heard.

5. Latin verbs have four Moods, viz.:— 1. the Indicative; 2. the Subjunctive; 3. the Imperative; and 4. the Infinitive; as, 1. āmo, I love; 2. amārem, I might love; 3. amāto, let him love; 4. amāre, to love.

6. They have six Tenses:— 1. the Present; 2. the Imperfect; 3. the Perfect; 4. the Pluperfect; 5. the First Future; and 6. the Future Perfect. E. g. 1. audīo, I hear; 2. audīebam, I heard; 3. audīvi, I have heard; 4. audivēram, I had heard; 5. audīam, I shall hear; 6. audivēro, I shall have heard.

7. The Latin verb has four Participles:— The present active in ns; the future active, in tūrus; the perfect passive, in tus; and the future passive, in ndus; e. g. āmāns, loving; amātūrus, about to love; amātus, loved; amandus, to be loved.

8. Among the forms of the Latin verb are usually included the Gerund (vide Lesson XXV.), the active Supine in um, and the passive Supine in ū; e. g. amātum, to love; amātū, to be loved.

OF THE CONJUGATION OF VERBS.

B. There are in Latin four Conjugations, distinguished from each other by the termination of the Infinitive Present, which ends as follows:—

1. āre; 2. ēre; 3. ēre; 4. īre.

Examples:—amāre, to love; monēre, to remind; legere, to read; audire, to hear.

The characteristic terminations of the Present Indicative in the first and second persons are:—

1. o, ās; 2. eo, ēs; 3. o (io), is; 4. io, is.

Examples:—āmo, āmās, I love, thou lovest; moneō, moneēs, I remind, thou remindest; lēgo, lēgis, I read, thou readest; audīo, audis, I hear, thou hearest.

C. To the full conjugation of Latin verbs, it is essential to know four principal parts, from which the rest are derived. These parts are:—a) the Present Indicative; b) the Present Infinitive; c) the Perfect Indicative; d) the Supine in um. The terminations of these parts are:—

1st conj.	o,	āre,	āvi,	ātum,
2d conj.	eo,	ēre,	ūi,	itum,
3d conj.	o (io),	ere,	i,	tum,
4th conj.	io,	ire,	ivi,	itum.

Examples:—1. amo, amāre, amāvi, amātum; 2. monēo monēre, monūi, monitum; 3. lego, legere, lēgi, lectum; facio, facere, fēci, factum; 4. audio, audire, audivi, auditum.

REMARK 1.—The invariable or permanent part of the present (indicative and infinitive) is called the first or general root of the verb (am, mon, leg, aud); that of the perfect, the second root (amāv, monū, lēg, audiv); and that of the supine in um, the third root (amāt, monū, lect, audū).*

REMARK 2.—Many verbs are irregular in the formation of these principal parts, which frequently follow the analogy of two different conjugations (e. g. the verb do below). In these cases the infinitive present determines to which of the conjugations the verb is to be referred. Some verbs again are defective, the supine, or the perfect and the supine both, being wanting.

To love, cherish.	{ Amo, āre, āvi, ātum, Diligo, ere, lexi, lectum. (ALIQUEM, ALIQUID).†
To set in order, arrange.	Dispōno, ere, pōsui, pōsitum (ALIQUID).
To open.	Aperto, ire, pērii, pertum (ALIQUID).
To do.	Ago, ere, ēgi, actum (ALIQUID).
To do (make).	Facio, ere, fēci, factum (ALIQUID).
To give.	Dō, dare, dēdi, dātum ‡ (ALICUI ALIQUID).
To see.	Vidēo, ere, vidi, visum (ALIQUEM, ALIQUID).
To say, speak.	Dico, ere, dixi, dictum (ALIQUID).
To carry.	Porto, āre, āvi, ātum (ALIQUID).
To wash.	Lāvo, āre, āvi (or lāvi), ātum (lautum or lōtum) (ALIQUEM, ALIQUID).
To want, need.	{ Egeo, ere, ūi, — (ALIQUA RE). Indigeo, ere, ūi, — (ALICUIUS).

* The manner in which the different tenses, &c. are formed from these primary parts is explained in Lesson XXVIII., which see. The student should make himself familiar with the formula of every verb, as it occurs in this and in subsequent lessons.

† See Rules F. and G. of this Lesson.

‡ The verb dō has the syllable dā short; as dāre, dāmus. The monosyllabic forms dā and dās are the only exceptions.

OF THE PRESENT INDICATIVE.

D. The present indicative of Latin verbs corresponds in general to that of the English. The distinctions, however, indicated by the English I love, do love, am loving, are not expressed by any separate forms in Latin. The present indicative of the respective conjugations is thus inflected: —

1. Amo, I love.		2. Mōnĕo, I remind.
SING.	I love āmō *	I remind mōnĕō
	Thou lovest āmās	Thou remindest mōnĕs
	He loves, āmāt,	He reminds, mōnĕt,
PLUR.	We love āmāmŭs	We remind mōnĕmŭs
	Ye love āmātis	Ye remind mōnĕtis
	They love. āmant.	They remind. mōnent.
3. Lĕgo, I read.		4. Audĭo, I hear.
SING.	I read lĕgō	I hear audĭō
	Thou readest lĕgis	Thou hearest audĭs
	He reads, lĕgit,	He hears, audĭt,
PLUR.	We read lĕgimŭs	We hear audimŭs
	Ye read lĕgītis	Ye hear audītis
	They read. lĕgunt.	They hear. audĭunt.

Like āmo inflect: do, porto, lāvo, &c. — Like moneo: hābĕo, video, ĕgĕo, and indĭgĕo, &c. — Like lēgo: dilĭgo, dispōno, dico, &c. — Like audĭo: āpĕrio, ĕsŭrio, sĭtio, &c.

E. Obs. Verbs of the third conjugation in io are inflected like audĭo, except that the i of the different persons is short. The verb sum, I am, is irregular. The present indicative of fācio, I make, do, and sŭm runs thus:

SING.	I do fāciō	I am sŭm
	Thou dost fācis	Thou art ĕs
	He does, fācīt,	He is, est,
PLUR.	We do fācimŭs	We are sŭmŭs
	Ye do fācītis	Ye are estis
	They do. fāciunt.	They are. sunt.

Do you love your brother?
I do love him.

Amāsne tŭ frātreŕ tŭum?
Vĕro, ĕum āmo.

F. RULE. — The object of an active transitive verb is put in the Accusative. This accusative may be either a person (aliquem) or a thing (aliquid). As

* The o final of the present tense of all verbs is commonly long, but in poetry sometimes short.

Puer librum legit.Vidéo hominem.Apëri fenëstram.

Does your brother arrange his books?

He does arrange them.

He does not arrange them.

Do ye see anything beautiful?

We do see something beautiful.

What is that little boy doing?

He is doing something bad.

Do you open the window?

I am opening it.

Who is washing his stockings?

The sailors are washing them.

What do the men say?

They say nothing.

Does your father give you a good book?

He gives me a good book.

The boy reads the book.I see the man.Open the window.Disponitne frater tuus libros suos?Dispõnit.Êos nõn dispõnit.Videtisne aliquid pulchri?Videmus vëro quiddam pulchri.Quid agit ille puërculus?Agit aliquid nequam (mali).Apërisne fenëstram?Apërio.Quis lavat tibialla sua?Lavant eã nautae.Quid dicunt homines?Nihil dicunt.Datne tibi pater librum bonum?Dat mihi librum bonum.

G. Obs. In Latin, as in English, the immediate object of transitive verbs (whether they be active or deponent) is put in the Accusative (aliquem or aliquid), and the remote object (i. e. that for or with reference to which anything is done) in the Dative (alicui).^{*} As

Dã mihi librum.Mitto tibi epistolam.Commõdat nobis cùltrum.Nõn schõlae, sed vitæ discimus.Give me the book.I send you the letter.He lends us the knife.We learn not for school, but for life.

Dost thou love him?

I do not love him.

Do you want your money?

{ Eúmne ámas?{ Númquid eúm ámas?{ Eúm nõn ámo (nõn diligo).{ Egëсне tú pecúnã tuã?{ Indigëсне pecúnlae tuæ?

H. Obs. The verb ëgëo and its compound indigëo are intransitive, and are generally followed† by the Ablative, but sometimes by the Genitive of the object needed. (Cf. Lesson XXVI. B.)

* In connection with this rule it is necessary to remark, that many verbs in Latin are neuter, while their English equivalents are transitive. No details can at present be given, but the construction of every verb will be pointed out as it is needed by the student of this method. Of Latin verbs generally, some are followed by the Nominative, others govern the Genitive, Dative, Accusative, or Ablative.

† I. e. they govern the Ablative and Genitive. In Latin the object commonly precedes the verb, and can only be said to follow in logical order.

I really do need it.	{ Ego véro eā égĕo.
What do you stand in need of?	{ Sāne, ejus indigĕo.
I do not need anything.	Quā rê indigēs?
Do you want any one (anything)?	Nihil égĕo.
I need my father.	Egēsne aliquo (aliquā rê)?
	Pátris* indigĕo.

EXERCISE 35.

Does your brother love you? — He does love me. — Do you love him? — I do love him. — Does your father love him? — He does not love him. — Dost thou love me, my good child? — I love thee. — Dost thou love this ugly man? — I do not love him. — Does the servant open the window? — He does open it. — Dost thou open it? — I do not open it. — Does he open the book? — He does not open it. — Dost thou set my books in order? — I set them in order. — Does the servant arrange our boots and shoes? — He sets both the one and the other in order. — Do our children love us? — They do love us. — Do we love our enemies? — We do not love them. — What do you give me? — I do not give thee anything (I give thee nothing). — Do you give my brother the book? — I do give it to him. — Do you give him a hat? — I do give him one. — What do you give him? — I give him something beautiful. — What does he give you? — He gives me nothing.

EXERCISE 36.

Does the sailor wash his stockings? — He does wash them. — Do you wash your hands (manus tuas)? — I do wash them. — Does your brother wash as many shirts as stockings? — He washes more of the one than of the other. — Do you wash your shirts? — I do not wash them. — Do your brothers wash their stockings or ours? — They neither wash yours nor theirs; they wash those (i.e. the stockings) of their children. — What does your servant carry? — He carries a large table. — What do these men carry? — They carry their wooden chairs. — What books does the young man carry? — He carries good books. — Does he read them? — He does not read them? — What do you read? — I am reading nothing. — What do the men say? — They are saying something good. — What dost thou say? — I do not say anything. — What are you doing? — I am doing nothing. — What are the boys doing? — They are doing something bad. — They are reading good books. — Are these men hungry or thirsty? — They are neither hungry nor thirsty.

EXERCISE 37.

Dost thou hear anything? — I hear nothing. — Does your father hear anything? — He neither hears nor sees anything. — Dost thou see anything? — I see nothing. — Do you see my large garden? — I do see it. — Does your father see our ship? — He does not see it, but we see it. — How many ships do you see? — We see a good many; we see more than thirty (plus triginta). — Do you give me books? — I do give thee some. — Does your father give you money? — He does not give us any. — Does he give you hats? — He does not give us any. — Do you see many sailors? — We see more soldiers than sailors (quam nautarum). — Do the soldiers see many storehouses? — They see more gardens than storehouses. — Do the English give you good cakes? — They do give us some. — Do you give me as much wine as beer? — I give thee as much of the one as of the other. — Do you give me some more cakes (panificia aliquot amplius)? — I do not give you any more. — Do you give me the horse which you have? — I do not give you that which I have? — Which horse do you give me? — I give you that of my brother. — Do you want (need) your money? — I do want it. — Does your father want his servant? — He does want him. — Dost thou need anything (aliquā re)? — I need nothing (nihil). — Do we want our carriage? — We do want it. — Do our friends want their clothes? — They do want them.

* The genitive (especially of the person) is quite frequent after indigĕo.

Lesson XXV. — PENSUM VICESIMUM QUINTUM.

OF THE GERUND.

A. The gerund is a verbal substantive of the second declension neuter gender. It is formed from the present indicative by changing the 1. o, 2. eo, 3. o (io), 4. io of the respective conjugations into 1. andi, 2. endi, 3. endi (iendi), 4. iendi; as, āmo, amandi; mōnēo, mōnendi; lēgo, lēgendi (fācio, fāciendi); audio, audiendi. Its nominative is wanting, the present infinitive being commonly used in its stead. The gerund is thus declined: —

GEN. of loving	āmandi	GEN. of seeing	videndi
DAT. to loving	āmandō	DAT. for seeing	videndō
ACC. loving	āmandūm	ACC. seeing	videndūm
ABL. by loving	āmandō.	ABL. by seeing	videndō.

So decline: apēriendi, dandi, dicendi, fāciendi, lāvandi, lēgendi, mōnendi, portandi, &c.

B. Gerunds generally govern the same cases as their verbs. They are in other respects construed like substantives, according to the following rules: —

a) The Genitive is used: 1. After certain adjectives implying an operation of the mind; as cupīdus, diligens, gnārus, ignārus, mēmor, immēmor, perītus, studīosus, &c. 2. After many substantives, especially after ars, causa, consilium, cupīditas, facultas, occasio, potestas, spes, studium, tempus, voluntas, and the ablatives causā and gratiā, "for the sake of." E. g. cupīdus dicendī, desirous of speaking; studīosus audiendī, fond of hearing; ars pingendī, the art of painting; tempus abeundi, the time of leaving (to leave); discendī causā, for the sake of learning.

b) The Dative of the gerund is employed after verbs and adjectives, especially after intantum esse, opēram dare, tempus impendere, and after utilis, inutilis, noxtus, par, aptus, inloneus, &c.; as, operam dat studendo, he applies himself to study; intentus est legendo, he is bent on reading; aptus discendo, apt to learn; utilis bibendo, useful to drink.

c) The Accusative of the gerund always depends on prepositions, especially on ad (to, for) and inter (during, while); sometimes also on ante (before), circa, and ob. E. g. paratus ad videndum, ready to see; inter ludendum, while playing, &c.

d) The Ablative of the gerund is either used, 1. to denote the instrument in answer to the question whereby? wherewith? or, 2. it is dependent on one of the prepositions ab, de, ex, or in; as, defessus sum scribendo, I am wearied with writing; justitia in suo cuique tribuendo, justice in giving every man his own.

EXAMPLES:—

The desire of living well.	Cūpīditas benē vivēdī.
The science of avoiding unnecessary expenses.	Sciēntia vitāndi sūmptus supervacūos.
Desirous, fond of hearing.	Cūpīdus, studīosus audiēdī.
Sulphur water is useful for drinking (to drink).	Aqua nitrōsa utilis est bibēdo.
He is not solvent (able to pay).	Nōn (par) est solvēdo (dat.).
They were present at the registration.	Scribēdo (dat.) adfuerunt. (A law term.)
He came for the purpose of seeing (to see).	Vēnit ad vidēdum.
He keeps dogs for hunting purposes.	Alit cānes ad venāndum.
Easy to take (to be taken).	Fācilis ad capiēdum.
While walking, drinking, playing.	Inter eūndum (ambulāndum), bibēdum, ludēdum.
The mind of man is nourished by learning and thinking.	Hōmīnis mēns discēdo alitur et cogitādo.
He spends his leisure in reading and writing.	Ōtium sūum in legēdo consūmit inque scribēdo.

OF THE FUTURE PASSIVE PARTICIPLE.

C. The future passive participle is formed according to the analogy of the gerund. Its terminations for the respective conjugations are:—

1. andus, a, um; 2. endus, a, um; 3. endus, a, um (iendus, a, um); 4. iendus, a, um. As, amandus, a, um, to be loved; videndus, a, um, to be seen; legendus, a, um, to be read; faciendus, a, um, to be done; audiendus, a, um, to be heard. This participle is regularly inflected like bonus, a, um; it is used in all the cases, both singular and plural, and agrees with its substantive in gender, number, and case.

REMARK.— Verbs of the third and fourth conjugations may also have undus instead of endus, especially when i precedes; as dicundus, faciundus, audiundus, &c. Thus, regularly, potiundus, from potior, I possess. In other verbs this form occurs chiefly in certain standard expressions, such as In jure dicundo, In administering justice; In finibus dividundis, In determining the boundaries, &c.

OF THE NOMINATIVE OF THE PARTICIPLE IN "DUS."

D. The nominative (and sometimes the accusative) of the future passive participle has generally the signification of necessity or of propriety, more rarely also of possibility; as amandus, "one that must be loved, is to be loved, ought to be loved"; legendus, "that must be read, is required to be read," &c. The construction of this participle has the peculiarity of requiring the agent (by whom the action is to be performed) in the dative case, instead of in the ablative with ab. (Cf. Lesson XXXIV.) Examples:—

I, thou, he, must love.	Amandum est mihi, tibi, illi.
We, you, they, must see.	Videndum est nobis, vobis, illis.
I, you, they, must read.	Legendum est mihi, tibi, tuis.
I (thou, he) must write a letter (I have a letter to write).	Epistola mihi (tibi, ei) scribenda * est.
We (ye, they) must write letters (have to write letters).	Epistolae (nobis, vobis, eis) scri- bendae sunt.
I (you, they) have to read the * book.	Librarius est mihi (tibi, illis) legendus.
We (you, he) have to read books.	Libri sunt mihi (tibi, illi) legendi.

* It was customary among the earlier Latin writers (and also among the later poets) to employ the object accusative after the neuter form of the participle of transitive verbs, and to say, epistolam (or epistolas) mihi scribendum est; as, for example, Lucretius: Quoniam aeternas poenas in morte timendum est, instead of Quoniam aeternae poenae in morte timendae sunt (Since we must dread eternal punishment in death). But this construction is rarely used by Cicero, and the rule should be to employ the nominative and the participle in the same case.

I, thou, he, must rest (go, sleep), &c.	Quiescendum (ũndum,* dormi- endum) est mihi, tibi, ei, &c.
We ought especially to cherish diligence, and to practise it always.	Diligentia præcipue colenda est nobis, et semper adhibenda.
One must venture (risk), one must die.	Audendum est, moriendum est.
Every one must (should) use his own judgment.	Suo cuique iudicio (abl.) utendum est.
I know that I must write a letter.	Scio epistolam mihi esse scribendam.

OF THE OBLIQUE CASES OF THE PARTICIPLE IN "DUS," OR OF THE GERUNDIVE.

E. The future passive participle rarely retains its original signification of necessity or propriety in the oblique cases (i. e. in the genitive, dative, &c.), but is commonly employed in the sense of a present participle or of the gerund. When thus used, it is called the Gerundive. Thus we say:—

The design of writing a letter (i. e. of a letter to be written).	Consilium epistolæ scribendæ, instead of consilium scribendi epistolam.†
The design of writing letters (i. e. of letters to be written).	Consilium epistolarum scribendarum, instead of consilium epistolas scribendi.
A committee of ten on legislation (i. e. for the writing of laws).	Decemviri legibus scribendis (dat.).
One of the committee of three on grants of public lands.	Triumvir agro dando (dat.).
He is born for the endurance of miseries.	Natus est miseriis ferendis (dat.).
He was sent to procure ships.	Missus est ad naves comparandas (for ad comparandum naves).
He comes to defend the city.	Venit ad urbem defendendam (for ad defendendum urbem).

* In intransitive verbs this neuter form of the participle with est, erat, &c. is the only one in use. The dative of the agent is often left indeterminate.

† This conversion of the object accusative of the gerund into the passive construction of the gerundive may always take place, unless in those cases where perspicuity would suffer from the change. When the accusative after the gerund is a pronoun or adjective of the neuter gender, the conversion usually does not take place, to prevent ambiguity respecting the gender of these words. Thus always: Studium illud efficiendi (the desire of accomplishing that), and never illius efficiendi; Cupidus plura cognoscendi (desirous of knowing more), and never plurium cognoscendorum. Thus also: In sum cuique tribuendo (in giving every one his own), more commonly than, In suo cuique tribuendo. In general, however, the rule is, that, when the verb governs the accusative, the passive construction with the participle is to be preferred to the gerund with the accusative.

- Fortitude in the endurance of hardships and dangers. Fortitúdo in laboribus periculisque subeúndis (for in subeúndo labores, &c.).
- I am engaged in writing a letter. Occupátus süm in epístolā scribēdā (for in scribēdo epístolam).
- I am engaged in writing letters. Occupátus süm in epístolis scribēdis (for in scribēdo epístolas).
- The plan has been formed of destroying the city, of murdering the inhabitants, of blotting out the Roman name. Ínita sũnt consília úrbis delēndæ, cívium trucidandórum, nóminis Románi extinguéndi.

F. Obs. From the above examples, it will be perceived that the gerundive agrees with its substantive in gender, number, and case. Violations of this general rule, however, both with respect to gender and to number, are not unfrequent in the genitive of substantives, and especially of pronouns. E. g. : —

- Since there is an opportunity of seeing you (fem.). Quóniam tui (fem.) vidēdi (for vidēdæ) est cōpia.
- For the sake of exhorting you. Vēstri exhortādi (for exhortandórum) causā.
- The liberty of plundering fruit. Licéntia diriplēdi pomórum (for poma).
- The power of selecting examples. Exemplórum (for exémpa) eligēdi potéstas.

EXERCISE 38.

Are you fond of reading? — I am fond of reading. — Are your brothers fond of reading? — They are not fond of reading. — Who is fond of hearing? — The merchants are fond of hearing. — Does he come for the purpose of seeing? — He does come for the purpose of seeing. — They come (veniunt) for the purpose of hearing. — Is it useful to drink wine? — It is useful. — It is not useful to drink wine. — Are you (esne tu) solvent (i. e. can you pay your debts)? — I am solvent. — I cannot pay my debts. — Is the place easy to take (easily taken)? — It is difficult (difficilis) to be taken. — Do you read while you are playing? — I do not read while I am playing. — By what (quā re) is the mind of man nourished? — It is nourished by learning and thinking. — Does he spend his leisure in reading? — No, sir, he spends it in playing. — Does he read for the sake of learning (discendi gratiā)? — He reads for the sake of writing.

EXERCISE 39.

Must you read? — I am not obliged to read. — Must they sleep? — They must sleep. — Must your brother go? — He must go. — Who must go (cui)? — The sailor must go. — The boys must go. — Must the captains go? — They must go. — Must one venture? — One must venture. — One must not venture. — What must (should) one do (quid est faciendum)? — Every one must (should) use his own judgment. — Do you keep (alisne tu) dogs for hunting? — I do not keep any. — Must you write a letter (Have you a letter to write)? — I must write one (I have one to write). — Have I any letters to write? — You have some to write. — Who has (cui sunt) many letters to write? — The merchant has many to write. — I have none to write. — Who should practise diligence? — We all (nobis omnibus) should practise and cherish it.

EXERCISE 40.

Have you (estne tibi) the design of writing a letter? — I have the design of writing several. — Has your father the design of writing letters? — He has the design of writing letters and notes. — Is the time of departure at hand (adestne tempus abeundi)? — It is at hand. — The time of departure is not yet (nondum) at hand. — Is it time to speak? — It is time to speak. — Are you (esne tu) engaged (occupatus) in writing a letter? — I am not engaged in writing a letter, but in writing notes. — Is your son fond of writing letters? — He is not fond of writing, but of reading them. — Is paper useful for writing letters? — It is. — Have you an opportunity to speak? — I have an opportunity to speak. — Who has an opportunity to read? — Your son has an opportunity to read and to write? — Who comes to see? — I come (ego venio) to see. — Who was (quis missus est) sent to procure ships? — The captain was sent. — Have you the desire to accomplish (i. e. of accomplishing) that? — I have (est). — What must we do? — We must give every man his own.

Lesson XXVI. — PENSUM VICESIMUM SEXTUM.

A wish, a mind, desire.	Cūpīdūtas, voluntas, ālis, f.; stūdiūm, i, n.
Time, leisure.	Tempus, ōris, n.; spātiūm, ōtiūm,* i, n.
A mind (desire) to work.	{ Volūntas opērāndi. Stūdiūm opēris faciēdi.
Time to work.	{ Spātiūm ad laborāndūm. Ōtiūm (tēmpus) ad opus faciēndūm.
I have a mind (wish, desire) to do anything.	{ Est mihi volūntas (cūpīdūtas, stūdiūm) āliquid faciēdi. Cūpīdus sūm āliquid faciēdi. Cūpio āliquid faciēre.

* Tempus is the proper word for "time" generally. Otiūm is "leisure." Spātiūm is properly "space," "room," i. e. a certain portion of time, an allotment or allowance of time for doing anything.

A. Obs. The preposition to, which in English is always the sign of the infinitive, is not always so in Latin. It is sometimes rendered by the infinitive, sometimes by the supine in um, and sometimes by one of the oblique cases of the gerund or gerundive. The shade of difference in these expressions will readily be perceived by the learner.

I have time to work (for working).	{	Est mihi spātium ad lābōrāndum.
	{	Hābeo ōtium ad ōpus faciēndum.
I have a mind (desire) to work.	{	Cūpidus sūm laborāndi.
	{	Cūplo ōpus faciēre.
I have the courage to speak.	{	Est mihi ānīmus loquēdi.
	{	Audēo lōqui (dicere).
To work.	{	Lābōro, āre, āvi, ātum.
	{	Ōpus faciēre (to do work).
To speak.	{	Lōquor, lōqui, lōcūtus sum.*
	{	Dico, ēre, xi, ctum.
To desire.		Cūpio, ēre, īvi (īi), itum (ALIQUID FACERE).
To venture, dare.		Audēo, ēre, ausus sum † (ALIQUID FACERE).
To cut.		Sēco, āre, secūi, sectum (ALIQUEM, ALIQUID).
To buy.		Ēmo, ēre, ēmi, emptum (ALIQUEM, ALIQUID).
To lack (want, to be without).		Cārēo, ēre, ūi, itum (ALIQUA RE).

B. RULE. Verbs signifying plenty or want are generally followed by the Ablative, sometimes by the Genitive. As :—

Exēo pecūniā.
Cūret ānīmo.
Liber scālet vītiis.
Indiget patrīs.

I want (am in want of) money.
He lacks (has not) the courage.
The book abounds in errors.
He needs his father.

I have not, I lack.

{ Nōn hābeo (with the acc.).
 { Mīhi dēest (with the nom.).
 { Cāreo (with the abl.).

* Loquor is a deponent verb of the third conjugation. The principal parts of verbs of the passive form are only three, viz.:—1. the Present Indicative (loquor); 2. the Present Infinitive (loqui); and 3. the Perfect Indicative (locutus sum). With respect to the signification, loqui is properly "to speak," "to talk," e. g. Latin, English; and dicere, "to say," or "to speak," in connected or formal discourse.

† On this deponent perfect, see Lesson XXXIII. A. Rem. 4.

I have not (I lack) the courage to speak.	{ Déest * mīhi ānimus loquēdi. Cāreo ānimo loquēdi. Nōn aūdēo loqui (fūri).
To cut it (of cutting, for cutting it).	{ Eum, eam, id secāre (secādi). Ad eum, id secāndum. Ad eam secādam (fem.).
To cut them (of cutting, for cutting them).	{ Eos, eas, ea secāre (secādi). Ad eos secādos (masc.). Ad eas secādas (fem.). Ad ea secāda (neut.).
To cut some (sing.).	{ Aliquid secāre (secādi). Ad nonnūllum secāndum. Ad nonnūllam secādam (fem.).
To cut some (plur.).	{ Aliquot (nonnūllos, &c.) secāre (secādi). Ad nonnūllos secādos, &c. Ad aliquot secāda.
Have you time to cut trees?	{ Habēsne ōtium ad secāndum arbōres? Estne tibi spātium ad arbōres aliquas secādas?
I have time to cut some.	{ Hābeo ōtium ad secāndum aliquas. Est mīhi spātium ad aliquot secādas.
Have you a mind to cut the bread?	{ Cupidūsne es pānis in frūsta secādi? Cupīsne pānem in frūsta secāre?
I have no mind (desire) to cut it.	{ Nōn sūm cupidus ejus in frūsta secādi. Eum in frūsta secāre nōn cupio.
To buy some more.	{ Plūs (āmplius) emēre or emēdi. Ad āmplius (plūs) emēndum.
To buy one.	{ Ūnum (-am, -um) emēre or emēdi. Ad ūnum (-am, -um) emēndum.
To buy one more.	{ Ūno (-a, -o) āmplius (plūs) † emēre or emēdi. Ad emēndum ūno (-a, -o) plūs (āmplius).

* Deest is compounded of de + sum, and is inflected precisely like the simple verb. It is construed with the dative of the person:—Deest mihi, tibi, hominibus, &c., "There is wanting to me, to you, to the men"; i. e. "I have not, lack, want."

† Plus and amplius are here used substantively, like aliquid, nihil, and may like them be followed by a partitive genitive; e. g. plus equorum, more horses; amplius librorum, more books. Uno is the ablative of excess: "more by one." We thus can say either uno equo amplius, or uno amplius equorum, one more horse.

To buy two.	{ Dúos (dúas, dúo) émère or eméndi. Ad eméndum dúos (dúas, dúo).
To buy two more.	{ Duóbus (-ábus, -óbus) ámplius (plús) émère or eméndi. Ad eméndum duóbus (-ábus, -óbus) plús (ámplius).*
Have you a mind to buy one more horse?	{ Cupísne émère úno plús equórum? Ésne cupidus eméndi úno ámplius equórum?
I have a mind to buy one more.	{ Cúpío émère úno plús. Súm cupidus eméndi úno ámplius.
Have you a mind to buy some books?	{ Cupísne émère libros áliquos? Cupidúsne és librórum áliquot eméndi?
I have a mind to buy some, but I have no time.	{ Cúpío áliquot (nonnúllos) émère, séd cáreo ótío (déest mihí spá- tium).
Am I right in doing so? (Is it right for me to do so?)	{ Éstne mihí fās (or licétne mihí) hóc fácère?
You are not right. (It is wrong for you.)	{ Nón ést tíbi fās (nón licet). Ést tíbi néfas.

EXERCISE 41.

Have you still a mind to buy the house of my friend?—I have still a mind to buy it, but I have no more money.—Have you time to work?—I have time, but no mind to work.—Has he time to cut some sticks?—He has time to cut some.—Have you a mind to cut some bread?—I have a mind to cut some, but I have no knife.—Have you time to cut some cheese?—I have time to cut some.—Has he a desire to cut the tree?—He has a desire to cut it, but he has no time.—Has he time to cut the cloth?—He has time to cut it.—Have I time to cut the trees?—You have time to cut them?—Has the painter a mind to buy a horse?—He has a mind to buy two.—Has your captain of the navy time to speak (ad loquendum)?—He has time, but no desire to speak.—Have you a mind to buy a carriage?—I have a mind to buy one.—Have I a mind to buy a house?—You have a mind to buy one.—Has your brother a mind to buy a great ox?—He has a mind to buy a little one.—We have a mind to buy little oxen.—How many horses have you a mind to buy?—I have a mind to buy four.—Has any one a mind to buy a broom?—This man has a mind to buy one.—What has that man a mind to buy?—He has a mind to buy a beautiful carriage, three beautiful horses, good tea, and good meat.

* The learner must bear in mind that, although these formulas are arranged with special reference to the expressions cupio, cupidus sum, and otium ad of this Lesson, they are of general importance, as these same constructions will perpetually recur with other words in different parts of the book.

EXERCISE 42.

Have you a desire to speak? — I have a desire, but no time to speak. — Have you the courage to cut your arm? — I have not the courage to cut it. — Am I right in speaking? — You are not wrong in speaking; but you are wrong in cutting my trees. — Has the son of your friend a desire to buy one more bird? — He has a desire to buy one more. — Have you a mind to buy one more beautiful coat? — I have a mind to buy one more. — Have we a mind to buy a few more horses? — We have a mind to buy a few more, but we have no more money. — What have you a mind to buy? — We have a mind to buy something good, and our neighbors have a mind to buy something beautiful. — Have their children a desire to buy any birds? — Their children have no desire to buy any. — Have you the courage to buy the trunk of the captain? — I have a desire to buy it, but I have no more money. — Who has a mind to buy my beautiful dog? — Nobody has a mind to buy it. — Have you a mind to buy my beautiful birds, or those of the Frenchman? — I have a mind to buy those of the Frenchman. — Which book has he a mind to buy? — He has a mind to buy that which you have, that which your son has, and that which mine has. — Have you two horses? — I have only one, but I have a wish to buy one more.

Lesson XXVII. — PENSUM VICESIMUM SEPTIMUM.

OF COMPOUND VERBS.

A. The majority of Latin compound verbs are formed by prefixing certain particles to simple verbs. These particles are either the separable prepositions a (ab or abs), ad, ante, circum, cum, de, e or ex, in, inter, ob, per, post, prae, praeter, pro, sub, super, supler, and trans, or one of the inseparable prefixes amb (an), dis (or di), re, and se.

REMARKS.

1. It is frequently the case that the radical vowel or diphthong of the simple verb is changed in the compound; as frango, diffringo; laedo, collido, &c.

2. The final consonant of many of the above prepositions is often assimilated, i. e. changed, into the initial of the verb. The notes to the following list of compound verbs will show to what extent this is done.

EXAMPLES OF COMPOUND VERBS.

A ¹ — āmitto, I lose.	In — illido, I strike against.
Ab — ābēo, I go away.	“ — immūto, I change.
“ — antūgio, I escape.	“ — irrumpto, I burst into.
Abs — abscondo, I conceal.	Inter ⁷ — interpōno, I put between.
Ad ² — addo, I add (to).	“ — intelligo, I comprehend.
“ — affero, I bring (to).	Ob ⁸ — obsto, I stand against.
“ — assūmo, I take, assume.	“ — oppōno, I place against.
Ante ³ — antēpōno, I prefer.	“ — ostendo, I show.
“ — anticipo, I anticipate.	Per ⁹ — perlēgo, I read through.
Circum — circūmēo, I go around.	“ — pellicio, I allure.
Cum ⁴ — combūro, I burn up.	Post — postpōno, I value less.
“ — compōno, I compose.	Prae — praefēro, I prefer.
“ — colligo, I collect.	Praeter — praetermitto, I omit.
“ — corripio, I seize.	Pro — prōcurro, I run forward.
“ — conservo, I preserve.	“ — prōdēo,¹⁰ I go forth.
“ — cōulesco, I blend with.	Sub ¹¹ — subjicio, I subject.
“ — cōmēdo, I eat up.	“ — succēdo, I follow.
“ — cōgito (= co-agito), I think, reflect.	“ — suspendo, I suspend.
De — descendo, I descend.	Super — superimpōno, I place upon.
E ⁵ — ējicio, I cast out.	Supter — suptērāgo, I drive under.
“ — escendo, I disembark.	Trans ¹² — transēo, I pass over (beyond).
Ex — exaudio, I hear.	“ — tradūco, I lead over.
“ — expōno, I expound.	“ — transcribo, I transcribe.
In ⁶ — intro, I enter.

B. The particle amb (am, an) has the sense of around, about, concerning. Dis or di denotes separation or dispersion, sometimes also

¹ A is put before m and v; ab before vowels and the majority of consonants; abs only before c and t. In the verbs aufēro, aufūgio, the ab is changed into av = au.

² Ad remains unchanged before vowels, and before d, j, v, m; but before the remaining consonants it is assimilated.

³ Ante changes its e into i only in the verbs anticipāre and antistāre.

⁴ Cum in composition never appears without a change of form. Before b, p, m, it becomes com; before l, n, r, it is assimilated into col, con, cor; before the remaining consonants it is always con; before vowels it is generally co, but sometimes com.

⁵ Before vowels, and before c, p, g, s, t, generally ex; before the rest of the consonants, e; before f, assimilation.

⁶ In, before m, b, p, becomes im; before l and r it is assimilated; in all other cases it remains unchanged.

⁷ Inter remains unaltered, except in intelligo.

⁸ Ob is assimilated only before f, g, p. The form ostendo is from the obsolete obs and tendo.

⁹ Per generally remains unaltered, except sometimes before r.

¹⁰ The letter d is sometimes inserted between the prefix and the verb, to prevent a hiatus; as pro-d-ēo, re-d-ēo, &c.

¹¹ Sub before vowels remains unchanged; it is assimilated before the consonants c, f, g, m, p, and sometimes also before r.

¹² Trans rejects the final s, when the verb begins with one; it sometimes becomes tra before consonants.

intensity. Re is generally back, again, but it sometimes likewise denotes separation. Its form before a vowel is red. Se is equivalent to the English aside, apart. These particles are called inseparable, because they are never used as independent words. Examples: —

Amb — ambulo, I go about.	Re — remitto, I send back.
“ — ambigo, I quarrel (about).	“ — rēlēgo, I read again.
“ — amputo, I cut off.	“ — recludo, I unlock.
“ — anquiro, I investigate.	“ — rēdēo, I return.
Dis — disjicio, I scatter.	Se — sēvōco, I call aside.
“ — dispōno, I arrange	“ — sēdūco, I lead aside.
“ — dimitto, I dismiss.	“ — sējungo, I separate.
“ — diffēro, I put off.

C. Obs. Verbs are also compounded with nouns, adjectives, and with other verbs and adverbs; as vēnumdāre, from vēnum + dāre; calēfacēre, from calidus + facēre; obstūpēfūcēre, from ob + stūpēo + facēre, &c. But the great majority are compounds with prepositions.

To break, to break into pieces.	{ Frango, ěre, frēgi, fractum (ALIQUID and NEUTER). Confringo, ěre, frēgi, fractum. Diffingo (ALIQUID).
To keep, take care of.	{ Servo, āre, āvi, ātum. Rēpōno, ěre, pōsul, pōsitum. (ALIQUID).
To pick up.	{ Tollo, ěre, sustūli, sublātum (ALIQUID).
To mend, repair.	{ Rēpāro, āre, āvi, ātum. Rēficio, ěre, fēci, sectum. (ALIQUID).
To light, kindle.	{ Accendo, ěre, di, sum (ALIQUID).
To make (or light) a fire.	{ Ignem (m.) accendēre (fācēre).
To burn (be on fire).	{ Ūro, ěre, ussi, ustum. Ardēo, ěre, arsi, arsum.
To burn up, destroy by burning.	{ Combūro, ěre, bussi, bustum. Concrēmo, āre, āvi, ātum. (ALIQUEM, ALIQUID).
To seek, look for.	{ Quaero, ěre, quaesivi, quaesitum. Conquiro, ěre, isivi, isitum. (ALIQUEM, ALIQUID).
To warm.	{ Calēfācio, ěre, fēci, factum (ALIQUID).
To make.	{ Fācio, fācēre, fēci, factum. Conficio, ěre, fēci, sectum. (ALIQUID).
To do.	{ Ago, āgēre, ēgi, actum. Fācio, fācēre, fēci, factum. (ALIQUID).

To be willing, to wish.

Volo, velle, vólui (ALIQUID FACERE).

D. Obs. The present indicative of the verb volo, which is irregular, is thus inflected.

SING.	I will, am willing, or wish	ego volo
	Thou wilt (you will), &c.	tū vis
	He will, is willing, &c.	ille vult,
PLUR.	We will, wish, &c.	nōs vólumūs
	Ye will, wish, &c.	vōs vultis
	They will, wish, &c.	hī, īi, illi vólunt.

REMARK. — The forms volt and voltis occur in ancient authors instead of vult and vultis.

Will you? Do you wish? Are you willing?	{ Visne? Écquid vis?
Will he? Is he willing? Does he wish?	{ Ān (tū) vis? Núm vis?
Do you wish to make my fire?	{ Vúltne? Écquid (is) vúlt?
	{ Ān (ille) vúlt? Núm vúlt?
	Visne tū mīhi accendēre (facere) ignem?
I am willing to make it.	{ Volo eum accendēre.
I do not wish to make it.	{ Ego eum facere nōn nolo.
Does he wish to buy your horse?	Nolo eum accendēre.
He wishes to buy it.	Vúltne equum tuum emere?
He does not wish to buy it.	Vúlt eum emere.
	{ Nōn vúlt eum emere.
	{ Eum emere nōn vúlt.

To be unwilling.

Nolo, nollē, nólui (ALIQUID FACERE).

E. Obs. The verb volo is compounded of nōn and volo, and follows the inflection of the simple verb. Thus:—

SING.	I am unwilling, &c.	nōlo
	Thou art unwilling, &c.	nōn vis
	He is unwilling, &c.	nōn vult,
PLUR.	We are unwilling	nōlūmūs
	Ye are unwilling	nōn vultis
	They are unwilling.	nōlunt.

REMARK. — Neris and nevult occur in the older Latin writers instead of nonris and nonvult.

F. RULE. The verbs volo, nolo, mālo, cūpiō, sōlēo, audeo, and others expressing willingness, desire, ability, custom, duty, and the like, are followed by the infinitive; as,

*Volo fieri doctus.

Nōn vult abire.

Dēbes esse diligens.

Sōlet trīstis esse.

Pōtest liber esse.

I wish to become learned.

He is unwilling to go.

You ought to be diligent.

He is wont to be sad.

He can be free.

Has the tailor time to mend my coat.

He has time to mend it.

Has the shoemaker time to mend my boots?

He has time to mend them.

Am I right in keeping (is it right for me to keep) your money?

You are not right in keeping it.

Who has to mend (who must mend) our coats?

The tailor has to mend them.

What have I to do?

You have to warm our coffee.

Habétne sartor spátium ad reparándum méam tógam?

Éstne sartóri ótium ad tógam méam reficiéndam?

Ést éi ótium ad éam reficiéndam.

Éstne sutóri spátium ad cāligas méas reficiéndas?

Ést éi spátium ad éas reficiéndas.

Éstne mīhi fās pecūnlam tuā servāre (reponēre)?

Nōn ést tibi fās (tibi nefas ést) éam servāre (reponēre).

Cui sūnt tógae nōstrae reparāndae?

Reparāndae sūnt sartóri.

Quíd ést mīhi faciéndum?

Coffea nōstra tibi calefaciéndā ést.

EXERCISE 43.

Have you a desire to keep my letter? — I have a desire to keep it. — Am I right in keeping your money? — You are right in keeping it. — Has the tailor a desire to make my coat? — He has a desire to make it, but he has no time. — Has your tailor time to mend my coats? — He has time to mend them. — Have you courage to burn my hat? — I have not the courage to burn it; I have a mind to keep it? — Has the shoemaker's boy a mind to mend my boots? — He has no time to mend them. — What has our friend's tailor to mend? — He has to mend our old coats. — Who has to mend our boots? — Our shoemaker has to mend them. — What has our hatmaker to do? — He has to mend your great hats. — Has your brother's joiner anything to do? — He has to mend our great tables and our little chairs. — Do you wish to keep my twenty-seven crowns? — I wish to keep them. — Will you pick up that crown or that florin? — I will pick up both. — Do you wish to cut his finger? — I do not wish to cut it. — Does the painter wish to burn vinegar? — He wishes to burn some.

* After verbs expressing a desire or wish (such as volo, nolo, molo, cupio, opto, studio), the noun, adjective, or participle of the predicate is in the Nominative, when the subject of the sentence remains the same, but in the Accusative when a new subject is introduced, or the pronoun of the same person repented. Thus: Cupio esse clemens, I desire to be clement; but Cupio te esse clementem, I desire you to be clement; and also Cupio me esse clementem, instead of Cupio esse clemens. And in the same way: Volo cum fieri doctum, I wish him to become learned; and Volo me fieri doctum, instead of Volo fieri doctus.

— Is the peasant willing to burn his bread? — He is not willing to burn his own, but that of his neighbor. — Have you anything to do? — I have nothing to do. — Have we anything to do? — We have to warm our coffee. — Do you wish to speak? — I wish to speak. — Is your son willing to work? — He is not willing to work.

EXERCISE 44.

Do you wish to buy anything? — I wish to buy something. — What do you wish to buy? — I wish to buy some good books. — What has he to buy? — He has to buy a good horse. — Will you buy this or that table? — I will buy neither this nor that. — Which house does your friend wish to buy? — He wishes to buy your brother's great house. — Is your servant willing to make my fire? — He is willing to make it. — Will your father buy these rams or these oxen? He will buy neither the one nor the other. — Does he wish to buy my umbrella or my cane? — He wishes to buy both. — Do you wish to make a fire? — We do not wish to make any. — What do you wish to make? — I wish to make vinegar. — Will you seek my knife? — I will seek it. — Have you to look for anything? — I have nothing to look for. — Has he time to seek my son? — He has time, but he will not seek him. — What has he to do? — He has to make a fire, to wash my thread stockings, to buy good coffee, good sugar, good water, and good meat. — Will he buy your good trunk? — He will buy it. — Will you buy my great or my little house? — I will buy neither your great nor your little house; I wish to buy that of our friend. — Will you buy my beautiful horses? — I will not buy them. — How many rams will you buy? — I will buy twenty-two. — Does the foreigner wish to buy much corn? — He wishes to buy but little. — Do you wish to buy a great many gloves? — We wish to buy only a few, but our children wish to buy a great many. — Will they seek the same boots which we have? — They will not seek those which you have, but those which my father has. — Will you look for my coats, or those of the good Frenchman. — I will look neither for yours nor for those of the good Frenchman; I will look for mine and for those of my good son.

Lesson XXVIII. — PENSUM DUODETRICESIMUM.

OF THE DERIVATION OF TENSES.

It has already been said (Lesson XXIV.) that the different tenses and other parts of the Latin verbs are all formed from four principal parts; namely, from the Present Indicative, the Present Infinitive, the Perfect Indicative, and the Supine in um. This formation takes place according to the following laws: —

I

A. From the PRESENT INFINITIVE (amāre, mōnēre, lēgere, audire) are derived :—

1. The Imperative Passive, which has invariably the same form ; as amāre, mōnēre, lēgere, audire, be thou loved, admonished, read, heard.

2. The Imperative Active, by dropping the final re ; as amā, mōnē, lēgē, audi, love, admonish, read, hear thou.

3. The Present Infinitive Passive, by changing, 1. āre, 2. ēre, 4. īre, into, 1. ārī, 2. ērī, 4. īrī, and 3. ēre into i ; as amārī, monērī, lēgī, audīrī, to be loved, admonished, read, heard.

4. The Imperfect Subjunctive Active, by adding m ; as amārēm, monērēm, legērēm, audīrēm, that I might be loved, admonished, read, heard.

5. The Imperfect Subjunctive Passive, by adding r ; as amārēr, monērēr, legērēr, audīrēr, that I might be loved, admonished, read, heard.

B. From the PRESENT INDICATIVE (amo, mōnēo, lēgo, audīo) are derived :—

1. The Present Indicative Passive, by adding r ; as amor, mōnēor, lēgor, audīor, I am loved, admonished, read, heard.

2. The Present Subjunctive Active, by changing the terminations of the Present Indicative (1. o, 2. ēo, 3. o (īo), 4. īo) into, 1. em, 2. eam, 3. am (īam), 4. īam ; as āmēm, mōnēam, lēgam (capīam), audīam, that I may love, admonish, read (take), hear.

3. The Present Subjunctive Passive, by changing the final m of the Active into r ; as āmer, mōnēar, lēgar (capīar), audīar, that I may be loved, admonished, read (taken), heard.

4. The Imperfect Indicative Active, by changing the terminations of the Present into, 1. ābam, 2. ēbam, 3. ēbam (īēbam), 4. īēbam ; as amābam, monēbam, legēbam (capīēbam), audīēbam, I loved, admonished, read (took), heard.

5. The Imperfect Indicative Passive, by changing the final m of the same tense in the Active into r ; as amābar, monēbar, legēbar (capīēbar), audīēbar, I was loved, admonished, read (taken), heard.

6. The First Future Active, by changing the termination of the Present into, 1. ābo, 2. ēbo, 3. am (īam), 4. īam ; as amābo, monēbo, lēgam (capīam), audīam, I shall love, admonish, read (take), hear.

7. The First Future Passive, by changing the final m of the same tense in the Active into r ; as amābor, monēbor, lēgar (capīar), audīar, I shall be loved, admonished, read (taken), heard.

8. The Present Participle Active, by changing the terminations of the Present Indicative into, 1. ans, 2. ens, 3. ens (īens), 4. īens ; as āmāns, mōnēns, lēgens (capīens), audīēns, loving, admonishing, reading (taking), hearing.

9. The Future Passive Participle, by changing the same terminations into, 1. andus, 2. endus, 3. endus (īendus), 4. īendus ; as aman- dus, monendus, legendus (capiendus), audiendus, to be loved, admonished, read (taken), heard.

10. The Gerund, in a similar manner; as amandī, monendī, legendī (capiendī), audiendī, of loving, admonishing, reading (taking), hearing.

C. From the PERFECT INDICATIVE (amāvi, monūi, lēgi, audīvi) are derived:—

1. The Pluperfect Indicative, by changing the final i into eram; as amāveram, monūeram, lēgeram, audīveram, I had loved, admonished, read, heard.

2. The Future Perfect, by changing the final i into ero; as amāverō, monūerō, lēgerō, audīverō, I shall have loved, admonished, read, heard.

3. The Perfect Subjunctive, by changing i into erim; as amāverim, monūerim, lēgerim, audīverim, that I may have loved, admonished, read, heard.

4. The Pluperfect Subjunctive, by changing i into issem; as amāvissem, monūissem, lēgissem, audīvissem, that I might have loved, admonished, read, heard.

5. The Perfect Infinitive Active, by changing i into isse; as amāvisse, monūisse, lēgisse, audīvisse, to have loved, admonished, read, heard.

D. From the SUPINE IN "UM" (amātum, monūtum, lectum, audītum) are derived:—

1. The Perfect Participle Passive, by changing the final um into us, a, um; as amātus, a, um, loved; monūtus, a, um, admonished; lectus, a, um, read; audītus, a, um, heard.

2. The Future Participle Active, by changing um into urus, a, um; as amāturus, a, um, about to love; monūturus, a, um, about to admonish; lecturus, a, um, about to read; audīturus, a, um, about to hear.

REMARK. — The Participle in urus in connection with esse serves to form the Future Infinitive Active; as amātūrum (am, um) esse, to be about to love; monūtūrum (am, um) esse, to be about to admonish, &c. The same Participle, compounded with the different tenses of the verb sum, gives rise to a new conjugation, by which the various shades of a future or incipient action are indicated; as amāturus sum, I am about to love; amāturus eram, I was about to love; amāturus ero, I shall be about to love, &c.

E. In the PASSIVE VOICE several tenses are periphrastic or compound, and are formed by combining the Perfect Participle with one of the tenses of the verb sum. These compound tenses are:—

1. The Perfect Indicative, with sum; as amātus (a, um) sum, I have been loved; monūtus (a, um) sum, I have been admonished, &c.

2. The Perfect Subjunctive, with sim; as amatus (a, um) sim, that I may have been loved; auditus (a, um) sim, that I may have been heard, &c.

3. The Pluperfect Indicative, with eram; as lectus (a, um) eram, I had been read; auditus (a, um) eram, I had been heard, &c.

4. The Pluperfect Subjunctive, with essem; as amatus (a, um) essem, that I might have been loved; monitus (a, um) essem, that I might have been admonished, &c.

5. The Future Perfect, with ero; as auditus (a, um) ero, I shall have been heard; lectus (a, um) ero, I shall have been read, &c.

6. The Perfect Infinitive, with esse; as amatum (am, um) esse, to have been loved; auditum (am, um) esse, to have been heard, &c.

7. To these compound or periphrastic parts of the Passive Voice we must add the Future Infinitive, which is formed by combining the Supine in um with iri; as amatum iri, lectum iri, &c., to be about to be loved, read, &c. (See Paradigms, pp. 664, 665.)

To tear, lacerate.

{ Discindo, ěre, ūdi, issum.

To drink.

{ (ALIQUID).
 { Bibo, ěre, bibi, bibĭtum.
 { Pōto, āre, āvi, ātum or pōtum.
 { (ALIQUID).

To carry (take).

 { Porto, āre, āvi, ātum.
 { (ALIQUID).

To bring (carry).

{ Affĕro, afferre, attŭli, allātum.
 { Apporto, āre, āvi, ātum.
 { (ALICUI ALIQUID).

To go.

Ēo, ĭre, ĭvi or ĭi, ĭtum (NEUTER).

F. Obs. The verbs fĕro, I bear, carry, and ĕo, I go, are irregular in several tenses. The present indicative is thus inflected:—

SING.	I carry	fĕro	SING.	I go	ĕo
	Thou carriest	fers		Thou goest	is
	He carries,	fert,		He goes,	it,
PLUR.	We carry	fĕrimus	PLUR.	We go	imus
	Ye carry	fertis		Ye go	itis
	They carry.	fĕrunt.		They go.	ĕunt.

To be.

Sŭm, esse, fŭi, fŭtŭrus.

To be at home.

Dŏmĭ (gen.) ĕsse.

To go home.

Dŏnum (acc.) ĭre.

G. Obs. 1. The English "at home" is in Latin expressed by the genitive dŏmĭ, to which may be added meae, tuae, nostrae, vestrae, and aliĕnae, in the sense of "at my, thy (your), our, your, another man's house or home"; but when another adjective or pronoun follows, the ablative with in is required; as in illā domo, in that home; in domo privāta, in a private house. When the genitive of the possessor is added, either domi or in domo may be used; as domi or in domo alicujus, at some one's house or home; domi or in domo Cæsaris, at the house of Cæsar.

2. The English "home" (after verbs of motion) is expressed by the accusative domum, and so also domum meam, tuam, nostram, vestram, aliēnam, "to my, thy (your), our, your, another man's house or home"; but with any other adjective or pronoun the preposition in is required; as in domum illam, to that house or home; in domum novam, to the new house or home. When the genitive of the possessor is added, it is either domum or in domum alicujus, to some one's house or home.

Is your father at home?

Estne pater tuus domi?

He is not at home.

Nōn est (domi).

Is his brother going home?

Itne frater ejus domum?

He is going home.

It (domum).

With or at the house of.

{ Apud (Prep. with the Acc.).

{ Cum (Prep. with the Abl.).

To go to the man or to the man's house.

{ Ad virum ire.

{ Domum or in domum viri ire.

To be with one's friend (at the house of one's friend).

{ Apud amicum or cum amico (suo) esse.

{ Domi or in domo amici esse.

To go to one's friend or to the house of one's friend.

{ Ad amicum (suum) ire.

{ Domum or in domum amici ire.

To be with me, thee (you), us, you, at my house, &c.

{ Apud mē, tē, nōs, vōs esse.

{ Mēcum, tēcum, nobiscum, vobiscum* esse.

{ Domi mēae, tuae, nostrae, vestrae esse.

To be at one's own, at another man's house.

{ Domi suae, aliēnae esse.

To go to one's own, to another man's house.

{ Domum suam, aliēnam ire.

To be with him, with them, with some one.

{ Apud eum, eos, aliquem esse.

{ Cum eo, his, aliquo esse.

{ Domi or in domo ejus, eorum, alicujus esse.

* The preposition cum with mē, tē, nōs, always becomes mēcum, tēcum, aecum; with nōbis, vōbis, either nōbiscum, vōbiscum, or cum nōbis, cum vōbis.

To go to him, to them, to some one.	{ Ad eum, eos, aliquem ire. Dónum or in dómum ejus, eorum, alicujus ire.
To be with no one, at no one's house.	{ Apud neminem (nullum) esse. Cum nullo (némine) esse. Dómi or in dómo nullius esse.
To go to no one, to no one's house.	{ Ad nullum (néminem) ire. Dónum or in dómum nullius ire.
To be with one's father, at one's father's house.	{ Apud patrem (cum patre) esse. In dómo patrēnā esse.

He is at no one's house (with no one)?	{ Nōn est apud quēquam. In dómo nullius est.
Do you wish to go to your friend?	{ Visne ad amicum tuum (dómum or in dómum amici tui) ire?
I do not wish to go to him.	{ Nōlo ad eum (dómum or in dómum ejus) ire.
At whose house? With whom?	{ Cujus in dómo? Apud quē?
To whose house? To whom?	{ Cujus in dómum? Ad quem?
To whom (to whose house) do you wish to go?	{ Ad quem (cujus in dómum) vis ire?
I do not wish to go to any one (to any one's house).	{ Nōlo ad quēquam (in dómum cu- jūsqum) ire.
With whom (at whose house) is your brother?	{ Apud quem (cujus in dómo) est frāter tuus?
He is with us (at our house).	{ Est apud nōs. Dómi nōstrae est.

EXERCISE 45.

Do you wish to tear my coat? — I do not wish to tear it. — Does your brother wish to tear my beautiful book? — He does not wish to tear it. — What does he wish to tear? — He wishes to tear your heart. — With whom is our father? — He is with his friend. — To whom do you wish to go? — I wish to go to you. — Will you go to my house? — I will not go to yours, but to my tailor's. — Does your father wish to go to his friend? — He wishes to go to him. — At whose house is your son? — He is at our house. — Do your children wish to go to our friends? — They wish to go to them. — Is the foreigner at our brother's? — He is there (apud eum). — At whose house is the Englishman? — He is at yours. — Is the American at our house? — No, sir, he is not at our house; he is at his friend's. — Is the Italian at his friends'? — He is at their house.

EXERCISE 46.

Do you wish to go home? — I do not wish to go home; I wish to go to the son of my neighbor. — Is your father at home? — No, sir, he is not at home. — With whom is he ? — He is with the good children of our old neighbor. — Will you go to any one's house ? — I will go to no one's house. — At whose house is your son ? — He is at no one's house ; he is at home. — What will he do at home ? — He will drink good wine. — Will you carry my letters home ? — I will carry them to my father's. — Who will carry my notes ? — The young man will carry them. — Will he carry them to my house ? — No ; he will carry them to his brother's. — Is his father at home ? — He is not at home ; he is at the foreigner's. — What have you to drink ? — I have nothing to drink. — Has your son anything to drink ? — He has good wine and good water to drink. — Will your servant carry my books to my brothers' ? — He will carry them to their house. — What will you carry to my house ? — I will carry to your house two chickens, three birds, good bread, and good wine. — Will you carry these chairs to my house ? — I will not carry these, but those. — What will the German do at home ? — He will work and drink good wine.

EXERCISE 47.

What have you at home ? — I have nothing at home. — Have you anything good to drink at home ? — I have nothing good to drink ; I have only bad water. — Has the captain as much coffee as sugar at home ? — He has as much of the one as of the other at home. — Will you carry as many crowns as buttons to my brother's ? — I will carry to his house as many of the one as of the other. — Will you carry great glasses to my house ? — I will carry some to your house. — Has the merchant a desire to buy as many oxen as rams ? — He wishes to buy as many of the one as of the other. — Has the shoemaker as many shoes as boots to mend ? — He has as many of the one as of the other to mend. — Has he as much wine as water to drink ? — He has as much to drink of the one as of the other. — Has the Turk a desire to break some glasses ? — He has a desire to break some. — Has he a mind to drink some wine ? — He has no mind to drink any. — Will you buy anything of me (de mē) ? — I will buy nothing of you. — Of whom (de quō)* will you buy your corn ? — I will buy it of the great merchant. — Of whom will the English buy their oxen ? — They will buy them of the Dutch. — Will the Spaniards buy anything ? — They will buy nothing.

* The person of whom any is bought is in Latin put in the Ablative with the preposition de ; so that the formula is: aliquid de aliquo emere, to buy any of any one.

Lesson XXIX. — PENSUM UNDETRICESIMUM.

OF THE CLASSIFICATION OF VERBS.

A. Latin verbs in general may be divided into Primitive and Derivative, and with reference to their composition into Simple and Compound.

Primitive verbs are those which are not derived from any other word, but are themselves the roots for other parts of speech.

Derivatives are formed either from nouns, adjectives, or other verbs.

Simple verbs may be either primitive or derivative.

Compound verbs are formed by the union of a verb with another verb or with some other part of speech. (See Lesson XXVI.)

B. The verbs derived from other verbs are subdivided into a number of classes. These classes are : —

1. Frequentatives, or such as denote a reiteration or frequent repetition of the action expressed by the primitive ; as dictāre (from dico), to say often ; quaeritāre (from quaero), to inquire repeatedly.

These verbs are all of the first conjugation, and are generally formed from the supine of their primitives, by changing the ātum of the first conjugation into ūtō, ūtāre, and the um of the remaining conjugations into o, āre ; as portātum (the supine of porto, I carry) — portūo, āre, I carry often ; dormitum (the supine of dormio, I sleep) — dormitūo, āre, I am apt to sleep constantly, I am sleepy. But others again are formed from the present indicative of their primitive, and some even from other frequentatives ; as agūtō, āre (from ago, I drive), to drive up and down ; latūtō, āre (from latēo, I am concealed), I hide myself ; dictūtō, āre, I say or tell often ; lectūtō, āre, I read again and again (from the obsolete frequentatives dictāre, lectāre), &c.

2. Desideratives, in ūrītō, ūrīre, denoting a desire for that which is indicated by the primitive. These verbs are likewise derived from the supine of the primitive, and are always of the fourth conjugation ; as ēsum (the supine of edo, I eat) — ēsūrītō, īre, I desire to eat, I am hungry ; emptum (from emo, I buy) — emptūrītō, īre, I desire to buy ; coenātum (from coeno, I dine) — coenātūrītō, īre, I desire to dine, &c.

But a number of verbs in ūrītō, ūrīre (and ūrītō, ūrītāre) are no frequentatives and can readily be distinguished by the long u ; as ligūrīre, to be dainty ; prūrīre, to itch ; centurītāre, to divide into centuries ; decūrītāre, to divide into companies.

3. Inchoatives or Inceptives in sco, scēre, which serve to indicate the beginning of an action or state ; as languesco, ēre, I am growing languid (from languēre, to be languid); ingemisco, ēre, I begin to sigh (from gemēre, to sigh).

The final sco of these inchoatives is asco from primitives of the first conjugation, esco from those of the second, and isco from those of the third and fourth.

Inchoatives frequently occur compounded with prepositions, while their primitives are simple verbs; as pertimesco, I begin to dread, from timeo, I am afraid; conticesco, I become silent, from taceo, I am silent; obdormisco, I fall asleep, from dormio, I sleep.

Some inchoatives are derived from substantives and adjectives; as maturesco, I grow ripe, from matūrus, a, um; puērasco, I am becoming a boy, from puer, a boy, &c.

A number of verbs in sco are no inchoatives, as cresco, I grow; nosco, I learn to know; posco, I demand.

4. Diminutives, with the termination illo, illāre, which is annexed to the root of the primitive without any other change; as cantillo, I sing a little, I trill (from cantare, to sing); conscribillo, I scribble (from scribēre, to write); sorbillo, I sip (from sorbēre, to sup, drink up). The verbs of this class are but few in number.

5. Intensives in sso, ssēre; as capesso, facesso, petesso (from capio, facio, pēto), I seize, perform, seek with earnestness or eagerness.

C. Verbs derived from nouns are called Denominatives. E. g. lucēo, I shine; fraudo, I deceive, defraud; vulnēro, I wound (from lux, fraus, vulnus), &c.

A large number of Latin verbs derived from substantives signify to be or to imitate that which is indicated by the noun. The majority of these verbs are deponents of the first conjugation; as dominus — domināri, to act the lord, to domineer; cornix — cornīcāri, to chatter like a crow; fūr — fūrāri, to be a thief, to steal; Graecūlus — graecāri, to live like a Graeculus, to live luxuriously and effeminately; but also pāter — patrisso, āre, I take after my father; būbo — būbūlo, āre, to screech like an owl, &c.

Where?

Ūbi? Ūbīnam? * (Adverbs.)

Whither? Where to?

Quō? Quorsūn? Quorsūs? (Adverbs.)

D. Obs. 1. The interrogative adverb ūbi? implies motion or rest in a place, and the noun of the answer generally stands either in the genitive or ablative,† but sometimes in the accusative with one of the prepositions ad, apud, super, or super.

* This nam is affixed with some emphasis. So also Ūbi loci? Ūbi gentium? Ūbi terrarum? Where in the world?

† When this ablative is the name of a town of the third declension, it stands without a preposition; as Carthagine, at Carthage; but otherwise it has in before it.

Obs. 2. The interrogative adverb quô? implies motion or direction towards a place, and the noun of the answer is always in the accusative, either with or without a preposition.

There.	Ibî, illuc, ictuc (rest).
Thither (there).	Ēo, illô, illuc (motion).
To carry thither.	Ēo (illo, illuc) portâre (férre).
To carry it thither.	(Ēum, éam), id illô portâre.
To carry some thither.	SING. Aliquantum eô (illo, illuc) portâre (férre).
To carry them thither.	PLUR. Aliquot eô (illô, illuc) portâre (férre).
Where is my son?	Ēos (éas, éa) eô (illo, illuc) portâre or férre.
He is at home.	Ūbi ést filius méus?
Is his brother there too?	Dómi ést.
He is not there, but at the neighbor's.	Dómi suæ ést.
Will you carry my books to the merchant?	Éstne ibi ét * frâter éjus?
I do not wish to carry them to him.	Nôn ést ibi; apud vicinum ést.
To send.	Visne tú líbros méos ad mercatôrem portâre?
To come.	Nólo éos ad illum portâre.
To lead.	Mitto, ěre, misi, missum (ALICUI ALIQUID, ALIQUID AD ALIQUEM).
When? At what time?	Vênio, ěre, vĕni, ventum.
	Pervĕnio, ěre, vĕni, ventum (NEUTER).
	Dūco, ěre, duxi, ductum.
	Dēdūco, ěre, duxi, ductum.
	(ALIQUEM AD ALIQUEM).
	Quandô? Quô tempôre?

E. RULE. Time when is put in the Ablative without a preposition, as:—

Hórâ duodécimâ.	At twelve o'clock.
Hôc tempôre.	At this time.
Diē constitutâ.	On the appointed day.
To-morrow.	Crâs (adv.), crastinô tempôre.
To-day, this day.	Hôdiē (adv.), hôc diē, hodiernô tempôre.
Somewhere, anywhere.	Ālicūbî, usquâ, usptâm (rest).
Somewhither, anywhither.	Ālquô, quôquâ, quôptâm (motion).

* The conjunction et has sometimes the sense of also, too.

F. Obs. The adverb alicubi is compounded of aliquis and ubi, and is synonymous with in aliquo loco, "in some place," or "somewhere," "anywhere," generally. Uspiam may commonly stand in the same sense, but usquam can only be employed in clauses involving a condition or negation, as after the conjunctions si, nisi, neque (nec), non, nunquam, &c. The same distinctions apply to the corresponding adverbs of motion, aliquo, quopiam, and quoquam.

Nowhere, not anywhere. Nusquā, nuspiā (rest).
Nowhither, not anywhere. Nusquā (motion).

Do you desire to go anywhere (anywhither)? Cupisne ire aliquo (quopiam)?

I do desire to go somewhere (somewhither). Cupio ire aliquo.

I desire to go to the house of my father. In dōmum patrēnam ire cupio.

I do not desire to go anywhere. Nusquam ire cupio.

Nor do I desire to go anywhere. Neque ego quōquam ire cupio.

If he desires to go anywhere. Si ille quōquam ire cupit.

Is your brother anywhere? Estne frater tuus alicubi (uspiam)?

He is somewhere. Est alicubi (in aliquo loco).

He is at the house of his father. In dōmo patrēnā est.

He is nowhere. Nusquam (nuspiam) est.

Nor is his friend anywhere. Néque amicus ejus usquam est.

Unless your friend is anywhere. Nisi amicus tuus usquam est.

Will you conduct me to your tailor? Visne me ad sartōrem tuum dūcere?

I will conduct you to him. Volo te ad eum dūcere (deducere).

When will you lead me to him? Quādo (quō tempore) me vis ad eum dūcere?

I will lead you to him to-morrow. Ego te crās (crastino tempore) ad eum dūcere volo.

Who will send me good books? Quis vult mihi mittere libros bonos?

No one will send you any. Nemo tibi illos mittere vult.

The physician.

Mēdicus, i, m.

To write.

Scribo, ēre, psi, ptum (ALICUI ALICUI OR AD ALIQUEM).

Have you as many letters to write as my father?

Scribendaēne tibi sunt tam multae litterae quam patri meo?

Habēsne tot litteras scribendas, quōt pater meus?

I have more (of them) to write than he.

Scribendae sunt mihi plūs (plures) quān ei.

Scribendas ego plures habeo quam ille (ipse).

EXERCISE 48.

Will you go anywhither (anywhere)? — I will go nowhither (nowhere). — Will your good son go to any one? — He will go to no one. — When will you take your young man to the painter? — I will take him there (ad eum) to-day. — Where will he carry these birds to? — He will carry them nowhither. — Will you take the physician to this man? — I will take him there (ad eum, to him). — When will you take him there? — I will take him there to-day. — Will the physicians come to your good brother? — They will not come to him. — Will you send me a servant? — I will send you none. — Will you send a child to the physician? — I will send one to him. — With whom is the physician? — He is with nobody. — Do you wish to go anywhither? — I wish to go to the good Americans. — Has he time to come to my house? — He has no time to come there. — Will the captain write one more letter? — He will write one more. — Will you write a note? — I will write one. — Has your friend a mind to write as many letters as I? — He has a mind to write quite as many.

EXERCISE 49.

Where is your brother? — He is at home. — Whither do you wish to go? — I wish to go home. — Whither does your father wish to go? — He wishes to go to your house. — Whither will you carry this letter? — I will carry it to my neighbor's. — Is your son at home? — He is there. — Whither will the shoemaker carry my boots? — He will carry them to your house? — Will he carry them home? — He will carry them thither. — Will you send good sugar home? — I will send some thither. — Will the baker send good bread home? — He will send some thither. — Will you come to me? — I will come to you. — Whither do you wish to go? — I wish to go to the good Frenchmen. — Will the good Italians go to our house? — They will go nowhither. — Will you take your son to my house? — I will not take him to your house, but to the captain's. — When will you take him to the captain's? — I will take him there to-morrow. — Have you many letters to write? — I have only a few to write. — How many letters has our old neighbor to write? — He has as many to write as you. — Who has long letters to write? — The youth has some to write. — How many more letters has he to write? — He has six more to write. — How many has he to send? — He has twenty to send. — Has he as many letters to send as his father? — He has fewer to send. — Has the hatmaker some more hats to send? — He has no more to send. — Has your son the courage (auléne filius tíus) to write a long letter? — He has the courage to write one. — Will he write as many letters as mine? — He will write quite as many. — Will you buy as many carriages as horses? — I will buy more of the latter than of the former.

Lesson XXX.—PENSUM TRICESIMUM.

OF THE PRESENT SUBJUNCTIVE.

A. The Present Subjunctive is formed from the Present Indicative by changing the terminations of the respective conjugations into, 1. em, 2. eam, 3. am (iam), 4. iam; as, amo, amem; monĕo, monĕam; lego, legam (facio, faciam); audio, audiām.* It is inflected as follows:—

FIRST CONJUGATION.

SINGULAR.		PLURAL.
That I may love	āmēm	That we may love	āmēmūs
That thou mayst love	āmēs	That ye may love	āmētīs
That he may love,	āmēt,	That they may love.	āmēt.

SECOND CONJUGATION.

SINGULAR.		PLURAL.
That I may remind	mōnĕām	That we may remind	mōnĕāmūs
That thou mayst remind	mōnĕās	That ye may remind	mōnĕātīs
That he may remind,	mōnĕāt,	That they may remind.	mōnĕant.

THIRD CONJUGATION.

SINGULAR.		PLURAL.
That I may read	lēgām	That we may read	lēgāmūs
That thou mayst read	lēgās	That ye may read	lēgātīs
That he may read,	lēgāt,	That they may read.	lēgant.

FOURTH CONJUGATION.

SINGULAR.		PLURAL.
That I may hear	audiām	That we may hear	audiāmūs
That thou mayst hear	audiās	That ye may hear	audiātīs
That he may hear,	audiāt,	That they may hear.	audiant.

Like amem inflect: ordinem, dem, portem, laborem, lavem, &c. Like monĕam: habĕam, vidĕam, fovĕam, &c. Like lēgam: dicam, disponam, scribam, faciam,† &c. Like audiām: aperiam, esuriam, sitiam, veniam, &c.

REMARK.—The present subjunctive of the first and third conjugations sometimes has im instead of em or am; as edim, comedim; duim, perduim; ‡ for edam, comedam; dem, perdam. But this anti-quoted form occurs only in a few verbs. It is retained in the irregular verbs esse and velle, and their compounds; as velim, nolim, malim; sim, possim, prosim, &c.

* See Lesson XXVIII. B. 2.

† Verbs of the third conjugation in to have their present subjunctive in tam. Thus, also, capio, capiam, calefacio, calefaciam, &c.

‡ From the obsolete forms duo, perduo (= do, perdo).

B. The Present Subjunctive of the irregular verbs sum, volo, nolo, eo, and fēro (affēro) is thus inflected:—

SINGULAR.		PLURAL.
That I may be	sim	That we may be	simus
That thou mayst be	sis	That ye may be	sitis
That he may be,	sit,*	That they may be.	sint.
That I may be willing	vēlim	That we may be willing	vēlimus
That thou mayst be willing	vēlis	That ye may be willing	vēlitis
That he may be willing,	vēlit,	That they may be willing.	vēlint.
That I may go	eam	That we may go	eamus
That thou mayst go	eas	That ye may go	eatīs
That he may go,	eat,	That they may go.	eant.
That I may carry	fēram	That we may carry	fēramus
That thou mayst carry	fērūs	That ye may carry	fērātīs
That he may carry,	fērūt,	That they may carry.	fērant.

REMARK.—The compounds of these verbs are all of them inflected in the same way; as desim, possim, prosim, from desum, possum, prosum; mālim,† nolim, from mālo, nolo; abēam, prodēam, transēam, from abeo, prodēo, transēo; affēram, diffēram, circumfēram, from affēro, diffēro, circumfēro, &c.

OF THE USE OF THE SUBJUNCTIVE.

C. Obs. The Subjunctive serves to denote various modifications of the action or state expressed by the verb, and is often put in Latin where the English idiom requires the Indicative or Infinitive. It is chiefly employed:—

1st. After certain conjunctions, such as ut and quō, that, in order that; nē, that not, lest; licet and quamvis, although; utīnam, would that; quīn and quominus, but that, &c. E. g.:—

Vēnio ut vidēam.

I come to see (in order that I may see).

* Instead of sim, sis, sit, the older Latin writers employ the forms stem, stes, stet; and also from the obsolete fūo, the forms fūam, fūas, fūat; —, —, fūant.

† An ancient form of this is mavellim, is, it, &c. So the Imp. Subj. mavellēm for malleam; the Pres. Ind. mavolo for malo; the Future Indic. mavolam for malam, &c.

Cave nē scribas.Take care lest you write.Ūtinam habērem.Would that I had.

2d. In indirect or dependent questions, introduced by an interrogative adjective, pronoun, or adverb, such as quantus, qualis, quotus; quis, qui, cujus; ubi, quo, quorsum, quando, quoties, quomodo; an, ne, &c. E. g. :—

Nescio quantum habēas.I do not know how much you have.Dic mihi quis (quālis) sit.Tell me who he is.Scisne quando ventat?Do you know when he comes?Vide an ventūrus sit.See whether he is about to come.

3d. To denote possibility in general, and also an exhortation or command; as Forsitan temere fecerim.I may possibly have acted rashly.Emas quod necesse est.Buy what is necessary.Eamus. Scribamus.Let us go. Let us write.

I come in order to see (for the sake of seeing, to see, about to see).	{	Vento ut vidēam. Vento ad vidēndum. Vento vidēdi causā. Vento vidēre or visum. Vento visūrus.
--	---	--

D. Obs. The compound conjunction in order to, in order that, is commonly expressed in Latin either by ut with the subjunctive, or (after verbs of motion) by the supine in um; but it may frequently be likewise rendered by the accusative of the gerund or gerundive with ad, by the genitive of the gerund with the ablative causā or gratiā, “for the sake of,” by a mere infinitive, or, lastly, by the future participle in urus.

Do you wish to go to your brother in order to see him?	{	Visne ad frātre m tuū ire, ut eūm vidēās? Visno ire visum frātre m tuū?
I desire to go to him in order to see him (for the sake of seeing him).	{	Cūpio ad eūm ire, ut eūm vidēam. Ego eūm visum ire cūpio. Cūpio ad eūm ire vidēdi grātiā.
Has your brother a knife to cut his bread?	{	Estne frātri tuo cūlter ad secāndum pānem suū? Habētne frāter tuus cūltrum, quī† pānem suū secet?
He has one to cut it (wherewith to cut it).	{	Est ei ūnus ad eūm secāndum. Hābet ūnum, quī eūm secāre possit.

* The direct questions involved in these examples are:— Quantum habes?— Quis (qualis) est?— Quando (quo tempore) venit?— Venturusne est?

† This quī is an old ablative, and may stand for every gender of that case singular and plural (i. e. for quō, quā, quibus). When thus used it represents the instrument or means, exactly like the English “wherewith,” “whereby.” Thus Nepos:—ut, quī efferretur, viz reliquerit, so that he left scarcely enough, wherewith he might be buried.

I have no money to buy bread (wherewith I may buy bread).	{ Pecúniām, qui pānem émam, nōn hābeo. Cārēo pecúniā ad emēndum pā- nem.
Have you paper enough to write a letter (for writing a letter).	{ Estne tibi sātis chārtae ad lītteram scribēndam?
I have not enough.	{ Nōn est (mihi sātis).
To sweep (out).	{ Everro, ēre, erri, ersum. Scopis purgo, āre, āvi, ātum. (ALIQUID, LOCUM ALIQUEM).
To kill, slay.	{ Occido, ēre, idi, isum. Interficiō, ēre, fēci, factum. (ALIQUEM).
To slaughter.	{ Mactō, āre, āvi, ātum (ALIQUEM, ANIMAL ALIQUOD).
To salt.	{ Salto, ire, ivi or li, itum (ALIQUID).
To lend.	{ Commodo, āre, āvi, ātum. Credo, ēre, crediti, creditum. (ALICUI ALIQUID).
To be able.	{ Possum, posse, potui.
To know how (to be able).	{ Scio, ire, ivi or li, itum. (ALIQUID FACĒRE).

E. Obs. Possum signifies "to have the power or ability," scio, "to have the knowledge or skill," "to know how." Both these verbs may be followed by the infinitive of another verb. Possum is a compound of pōtis and sum, and is inflected in the present as follows:—

INDICATIVE.

Singular.		Plural.
I can (am able)	pōssūm	We can (are able)	pōssūmus
Thou canst (art able)	pōtēs	Ye can (are able)	pōtestis
He can (is able),	pōtest,	They can (are able).	possunt.

SUBJUNCTIVE.

Singular.		Plural.
That I may be able	pōssim	That we may be able	pōssimūs
That thou mayst be able	possis	That ye may be able	possitis
That he may be able,	pōssit,	That they may be able.	possint.*
Can you write a letter?		{ Potēsne scribēre epistōlam?
I can write one.		{ Scisne scribere epistolam?
Can he work?		{ Pōssum (scio) ūnam scribēre.
		Nūm ille laborāre (opus faciēre) pōtest?
He cannot work.		Laborāre (opus faciēre) non pōtest.
Can they come to us?		Possūntne venīre ad nōs?
They cannot come to you.		Ad vōs venīre nōn possunt.

* Antiquated forms of this are possem, es, et, &c., or potessim, is, it, &c. So also potestur for potest, and potesse for posse.

To kill me.

Mê accidere (interficere).

To see me.

Mê videre.

F. Obs. In Latin the accusative generally takes its place before the verb on which it depends, and the dative before the accusative.* The verb itself is commonly put at the end of the sentence.

To speak to me (with me).

Mêcum loqui, ad mê loqui.

To speak to you (with you).

Têcum† loqui, ad tê loqui.

To speak to him (with him).

Cum éo loqui, ad éum loqui.

To speak to us (with us).

Nobiscum loqui, ad nôs loqui.

To speak to you (with you).

Vobiscum loqui, ad vôs loqui.

To speak to them (with them).

Cum illis loqui, ad illos loqui.

To send to him.

Êi mittere.

To send to his house.

Ad éum (in dômum ejus) mittere.

To send it to me.

Êum (eam, id) mhi mittere.

To send him (them, &c.) to me, to my house.

Êum (eos) ad mê (dômum méam) mittere.

To send it to me to-morrow.

Êum (eam, id) mhi crástino témpore mittere.

To send him (them) to me (i.e. to my house) to-morrow

Êum (eos) ad mê (dômum méam) crâs mittere.

When will you send me the hat?

Quândo vis mhi pîlêum mittere? (Cf. Lesson XXIV. G.)

I will send it to you to day.

Ego tibi éum mittere vôlo hódie.

Will you lend me some money?

Visne mhi crédere aliquântum pecúniæ?

I will lend you a little.

Vôlo tibi aliquântulum crédere.

Do you desire to see my brother, in order to speak to him?

Cupisne frâtem méum videre, ut cum éo (ad eum) lôquâris?

I do desire to see him, in order to speak to him?

Cûpio éum videre, ut cum éo (ad éum) lôquar.†

Has he a broom to sweep my house?

Habétne scôpas ad dômum méam everténdam?

He has none.

Nôn habet.

Have you anything to write, to eat, to say?

Habésne quod scribas, quod édas, quod dicas?

I have something to write, to eat, to say.

Hábeo quod scribam, édam, dicam.

I have nothing to write, to eat, to say.

Nôn hábeo quod scribam, édam, dicam.

Has he any money to give me?

Habétne quid mhi dét pecúniæ?

* Unless the accusative be a personal pronoun, which frequently precedes the dative.

† Compare Lesson XXVIII. p. 133, note.

‡ The present subjunctive of the deponent loquor is:—SING. lôquar, lôquâris or lôquâre, lôquâtur; PLUR. lôquâmur, lôquamini, lôquantur. Compare Lesson XXXV.

He has no money to give you.	Nôn hábet quid tibi dét pecúniæ.
Do you lend us books to read?	Commodatisne nobis libros legéndos?
We lend you books and letters to read.	Vóbis et libros legéndos et litteras commodámus. (Vide Lesson XXII. B. 5.)

EXERCISE 50.

Can you cut me some bread? — I can cut you some. — Have you a knife to cut me some? — I have one. — Can you wash your gloves? I can wash them, but have no wish to do it. — Can the tailor make me a coat? — He can make you one. — Will you speak to the physician? — I will speak to him. — Does your son wish to see me in order to speak to me (ut mecum or ad me loquatur)? — He wishes to see you, in order to give you (ut tibi det) a crown. — Does he wish to kill me? — He does not wish to kill you; he only wishes to see you. — Does the son of our old friend wish to kill an ox? — He wishes to kill two. — How much money can you send me? — I can send you thirty crowns. — Will you send me my letter? — I will send it to you. — Will you send the shoemaker anything? — I will send him my boots. — Will you send him your coats? — No, I will send them to my tailor. — Can the tailor send me my coat? — He cannot send it to you. — Are your children able to write letters? — They are able to write some.

EXERCISE 51.

Have you a glass to drink your wine? — I have one, but I have no wine; I have only water. — Will you give me money to buy some? — I will give you some, but I have only a little. — Will you give me that which (quod) you have? — I will give it to you. — Can you drink as much wine as water? — I can drink as much of the one as of the other. — Has our poor neighbor any wood to make a fire (ad ignem accendendum)? — He has some to make one, but he has no money to buy bread and meat. — Are you willing to lend him some? — I am willing to lend him some. — Do you wish to speak to the German? — I wish to speak to him. — Where is he? — He is with the son of the captain. — Does the German wish to speak to me? — He wishes to speak to you. — Does he wish to speak to my brother or to yours? — He wishes to speak to both. — Can the children of our tailor work? — They can work, but they will not.

EXERCISE 52.

Has the carpenter money to buy a hammer? — He has some to buy one. — Has the captain money to buy a ship? — He has some to buy one. — Has the peasant money to buy sheep? — He has none to buy any. — Have you time to see my father? — I have no time to see him. — Does your father wish to see me? — He does not wish to see you. — Has the servant a broom to sweep the house? — He has one to sweep it. — Is he willing to sweep it? — He is willing to sweep it.

— Have I salt enough to salt my meat? — You have not enough of it to salt it. — Will your friend come to my house in order to see me? — He will neither come to your house nor see you. — Has our neighbor a desire to kill his horse? — He has no desire to kill it. — Will you kill your friends? — I will kill only my enemies. — Do you wish to speak to the children of your shoemaker? — I wish to speak to them. What will you give them? — I will give them large cakes. — Will you lend them anything? — I have nothing to lend them (quod iis commodum). — Has the cook some more salt to salt the meat? — He has a little more. — Has he some more rice? — He has a great deal more. — Will he give me some? — He will give you some. — Will he give some to my poor children (liberis meis egenis)? — He will give them some. — Will he kill this or that hen? — He will kill neither (neutram). — Will he kill this or that ox? — He will kill both. — Who will send us biscuits? — The baker will send you some. — Have you anything good to give me? — I have nothing good to give you.

Lesson XXXI. — PENSUM UNUM ET TRICESIMUM.

OF THE CONSTRUCTION OF SENTENCES.

A. A sentence is a thought or concept of the mind expressed in words. As Puer legit, the boy reads. Arbor flōret, the tree blossoms. Deus est (erat, erit) justus, God is (was, will be) just.

Every sentence is composed of at least one subject and one predicate.

The subject of a sentence is the person or object of which anything is affirmed; as puer, arbor, Deus.

The predicate is that which is affirmed of the person or thing called the subject; as legit, flōret, est (erat, erit) justus.

The subject is always a substantive, or some other word used substantively, and generally stands in the nominative.

REMARK. — But the subject of a verb in the infinitive mood is put in the accusative.

The predicate is either a finite verb,* or else a noun, adjective, participle, or adverb, with one of the tenses of the copula sum; e. g. est, erat, erit, &c.

* The term finite verb (verbum finitum) includes all the verbal forms of every mood, except the infinitive (verbum infinitum).

B. The subject nominative may be variously modified or expanded by the addition of other words, which are said to stand in the attributive relation to it. This may be done, —

1. By another noun, either in the same case or one of the oblique cases; as, Deus, rex coelorum, justus est, God, the king of heaven, is just; amici nostri puer lēgit, the boy of our friend is reading.

2. By an adjective, adjective pronoun, participle, or relative clause; as, puer noster studiōsus lēgit, our studious boy is reading; arbor, quom hēri in horto vidisti, hodie flōret, the tree which you saw yesterday in the garden blossoms to-day.

C. In a similar manner, the predicate may be modified or expanded by the addition of other words, which are said to stand in the objective relation to it. These words may be, —

1. A noun in one of the oblique cases, or an adverb; as, puer librum suum bonum lēgit, the boy reads his good book; arbor in horto nostro flōret, the tree blossoms in our garden; Deus semper erit justus, God will always be just.

2. An infinitive or another finite verb introduced by a relative, or a conjunction expressed or understood; as, cupio abire, I desire to leave; (ille) idōneus non est, qui impetret, he is not fit to obtain; cave (ne) cadas, take care lest you fall.

3. By a noun or adjective in the same case with the subject; as, Pompējus imperātor est appellātus, Pompey was called commander; (tu) vidēris vir bonus esse, you seem to be a good man; incēdo regina, I walk a queen.

REMARK. — This construction takes place after certain neuter and passive verbs of naming, becoming, remaining, appearing, &c. (Cf. Lesson XXXIV. C.)

D. The subject and predicate both are either simple or compound.

A simple subject consists of one substantive or word used substantively, either alone or modified by attributes; as Deus, arbor, puer noster studiōsus.

A compound subject consists of two or more simple subjects, generally connected by a conjunction, and belonging to one common predicate; as, puer et puella lēgunt, the boy and girl are reading; ego et tu diligentes sumus, I and you are diligent.

A simple predicate consists of one finite verb, either alone or expanded into the objective relation; as, lēgit, flōret, librum suum bonum lēgit, semper erit justus.

A compound predicate consists of two or more simple predicates depending on one common subject; as, Deus est, fuit, erit, God is, was, will be; Id et nobis erit perjucundum, et tibi non sane dērium, This will be extremely pleasant for us, and surely not out of your way.

E. Sentences, like subject and predicate, are also either simple or compound.

A simple sentence is one which contains a simple predicate, or one finite verb only.

REMARK. — There can be no sentence without a finite verb expressed or understood, and there are as many sentences as there are finite verbs.

A compound sentence contains two or more simple sentences, which are commonly called its members or clauses.

The members of a compound sentence are either all coördinated as independent, or else one of them assumes the rank of a leading clause, to which the rest are subordinated as dependent.

Independent clauses are such as make complete sense apart from their connection with each other; as, Ego rēges ejēci, vos tyrannos intrōdūctis; ego libertātem pēpēri, vos patriam servāre non vultis, I have expelled the kings, you are introducing tyrants; I have procured liberty, you are unwilling to preserve it.

A subordinate clause can make complete sense only in connection with the main or leading clause, on which it is dependent; as, Vita brevīs est, licet supra mille annos exeat, Life is short, and were it to exceed a thousand years; Hoc ideo exposui, ut scires, I have explained this, in order that you might know it.

REMARK 1. — In these sentences the clauses commencing with licet and ut are subordinate and dependent on the leading clauses, by which they are preceded.

REMARK 2. — The members of a compound sentence are commonly linked together by conjunctions, relatives, or adverbs.

F. Words are said to agree with each other when they correspond in gender, number, case, or person, and this relation is called Concord or Agreement.

Agreement may take place under the following circumstances: —

1. Between one substantive and another; as, Cicēro orātor, Cicero the orator; Augustus impērātor, Augustus the Emperor.

2. Between an adjective or participle and a noun; as, vir justus et sapiens, a good and wise man; viri optimi, most excellent men.

3. Between a relative and its antecedent; as, puer, qui lēgit, the boy who reads; puella, quae currit, the girl who runs.

4. Between a finite verb and its subject nominative; as, ego lēgo, tu āmas, nos sūmus, homīnes dicunt.

G. One word is said to govern another, when it requires it to be put in a determinate case or mood, and this relation is called Government.

A word subject to another, according to the laws of concord or government, is said to depend upon or follow it.

All the oblique cases of Latin nouns, except the vocative, are commonly determined by some other word.

1. The genitive is governed by nouns, adjectives, verbs, participles, and adverbs.

2. The dative is governed by adjectives, verbs, participles, and adverbs.

3. The accusative is governed by active transitive verbs or participles, and by prepositions.

4. The ablative is governed by adjectives, verbs, participles, and prepositions.

To whom?

Whom?

What?

Cui? Cuius? Ad quem?

Quem? Quemnam?

Quid? Quidnam?

To answer, reply.

Respondēo, ēre, di, sum (ALICUI ALIQUID; EPISTOLAE or AD EPISTOLAM).

Rescribo, ēre, ipsi, iptum (ALICUI or AD ALIQUEM; LITTERIS or AD LITTERAS).

To answer or reply to some one.

ALICUI respondēre.†
ALICUI or ad ALIQUEM rescribēre.

To answer a letter.

Epistolae or ad epistolam respondēre.

Do you wish to answer me?

Litteris or ad litteras rescribēre.

I do not wish to answer you.

Nūm vis mihi respondēre?

Nūm vis mihi (ad mē) rescribēre?

To whom do you wish to reply?

Nōlo tibi respondēre.

Nōlo tibi (ad tē) rescribēre.

I wish to reply to my good friend.

Cui vis respondēre?

Ad quem (cui) vis rescribēre?

What do you desire to answer him?

Amicō meō bonō respondēre vōlo.

Ēgo ad amicū meū bonū rescribēre vōlo.

I desire to answer him only (in a few words).

Quid cupis ei respondēre (rescribēre)?

Ei nōn nisi paūca rescribēre cupio.

To whom must we reply?

Ad quem (cui) est nobis rescribendum?

We must reply to the Englishman.

Rescribendum est nobis Anglō (ad Anglum).

* Compare Lesson XII. A. 1 - 6.

† The verb respondēre is properly "to answer or reply orally," and is sometimes opposed to rescribēre, which signifies "to write back or to answer in writing." But this distinction is not always observed, and respondēre is often used in the sense of rescribēre.

What have I to do?

You have to reply to the letter of the Frenchmen.

Quid est mihi faciendum?

Rescribendum est tibi littëris (ad littëras) Francogallorûm.

Lesson XXXII. — PENSUM ALTERUM ET TRICESIMUM.

OF THE AGREEMENT OF VERBS.

A. RULE. — The verb must agree with its subject nominative in number and person. E. g.

Ego amo.

I love.

Tu legis.

Thou readest.

Ille scribit. Puer scribit.

He writes. The boy writes.

Nos mittimus.

We send.

Vos habetis.

Ye have.

Illi dicunt. Homines dicunt.

They say. The men say.

REMARKS.

1. It has already been noticed in several places, that the pronouns ego, tu, ille, nos, vos, illi are commonly omitted, and only put where perspicuity or emphasis requires them.

2. The nominative is entirely wanting before impersonal verbs and verbs used impersonally; as, Pluit, it rains. Pingit, it snows. Pudet me tui, I am ashamed before you. Actum est de me, It is all over with me. Orandum est nobis, We must pray.

3. An infinitive, either alone or modified by other words, an adverb, participle, and an entire sentence, may become the subject of a finite verb, which then stands in the third person singular; as, Mentiri est turpe, It is disgraceful to lie. Dulce et decorum est pro patriâ mori, To die for one's country is honorable and sweet. Docto homini vivere est cogitare, To a man of letters living is thinking. Cras istud, quando venit? When will that "to-morrow" come? Homines errare non mirum est, That men should err is not strange.*

4. The infinitive sometimes supplies the place of the finite verb, especially in animated narration; as, Arma, tela, equi, viri, hostes, cives, permixti (sc. sunt); nihil consilio, neque imperio agi; fors omnia regere, — Arms, weapons, horses, men, enemies, and friends were mixed in promiscuous disorder; nothing is now done by design or in obedience to command; chance controls everything. This is called the historical infinitive, and is generally translated by the imperfect.

5. The verb is sometimes entirely omitted; as, Bona verba (sc. loquere), Do not be angry! Softly! Dii meliôra (sc. dent)! God forbid! Quid plura (sc. dicam)? In short. Quot homines, tot sententiæ (sc. sunt), As many men, so many minds.

B. RULE. — After a collective noun the predicate is either in the singular or the plural. E. g.

Pars militum caesi, pars capti Part of the soldiers were killed, and sunt. a part of them taken prisoners.

Pars stupet donum exitiale, et Some are transfixed with amazement molem mirantur equi. at the fatal present, and admire the huge size of the horse.

REMARKS.

1. A verb in the plural is very common, especially among the poets, after pars, turba, vis, multitudo, exercitus, juventus, nobilitas, gens, plebs, and vulgus.

2. The pronouns uterque, each; quisque, every one; alter . . . alterum, and alius . . . aliud, may likewise take a plural verb; as, Uterque eorum ex castris stativis exercitum educunt, Each of them leads his army out of the camp. Quisque suos patimur manes, Every one of us suffers the punishment due to him. Alius alii subsidium ferebant, One brought help to the other.

C. RULE. — Two or more subject-nominatives in the singular, connected by a copulative conjunction, ex-

* The infinitive or an entire clause may also stand as the subject of an impersonal verb; as, Te hilari animo esse vilde me juvat, I am delighted (lüt it delights me) that you are in good spirits. Juvat me, quod vigent studia, I am glad that the study of letters is prosperous. This construction is very common.

pressed or understood, generally have a plural verb.
E. g.

Senātus populusque Romānus pācem comprobaverunt.	The Roman senate and people approved of the peace.
Vita, mors, divitiæ, paupertas omnes homines vehementissime permóvent.	Life, death, wealth, poverty, affect all men most powerfully.

REMARKS.

1. The verb is in the singular when the compound subject is conceived of as one complex notion or whole; as, Tempus necessitasque postulat, Time and necessity demands. Senātus populusque Romanus intelligit, The Roman senate and people understand.

2. When the verb is referred to each of the simple subjects separately, or to the emphatic one, it is likewise in the singular; as, Conon plurimum Cypri vixit, Iphicrates in Thracia, Timotheus Lesbi, Chares in Sigæo, Conon lived mostly on the island of Cyprus, Iphicrates in Thrace, Timotheus on Lesbos, and Chares in Sigeum. Aetas et forma et super omnia Romānum nomen te ferociorem facit, Age and beauty, and, above all, the name of Roman, render thee more warlike.

3. When the sentence contains et . . . et, tum . . . tum (both . . . and) or nec . . . nec, the verb is commonly singular; as, Illam rationem et Pompejus et Flaccus secutus est, Pompey and Flaccus both pursued that plan.

4. When the nominatives are connected by the disjunctive aut, "or," or by aut . . . aut, "either . . . or," the verb is commonly singular, but sometimes plural; as, Si Aedæus aut Minos diceret, If Ææcus or Minos should say. Ne Sulpicius aut Cotta plus quam ego apud te valere videantur, Lest Sulpicius or Cotta should appear to have more influence with you than I have.

5. If an ablative with cum is put instead of a second nominative, the predicate is generally plural, but sometimes singular; as, Demosthenes cum ceteris in exilium erant expulsi, Demosthenes with the rest had been driven into exile. Tu ipse cum Sexto scire velim, quid cogites. I should like to know what purpose you yourself and Sextus have in view.

D. RULE. — When the nominatives of a compound subject are of different persons, the predicate agrees with the first person in preference to the second, and with the second in preference to the third. E. g.

Si tū et Tullia valētis, ego et Cicero valēmus. If you and Tullia are well, Cicero and I are well.

REMARK. — In sentences containing an antithesis or a division (e. g. an et . . . et), the verb assumes the person of the nearest noun; as, Et tu et omnes homines sciunt, You yourself and all men know.

Postquam in tuto ipse (ego) et ille in pericūlo esse coepit, After I myself began to be safe and he in danger. .

The market (-place).	Fōrum, i, n.
The ball.	Saltatio, ōnis, f.
The country (as opposed to city).	Rūs, rūris, n.
The square, public place.	Campus, i, m.; lōcus publicus, i, m.
The field.	Ager, gen. agri, m., or in the pl. agri, ōrum.*
The nobleman.	Hōmo nōbilis; ēquēs, Itis, m. (a knight).
The boatman.	Nauta, ac, m.; hōmo nauticus, m.
The bailiff.	Quaesitor, ōris, m.
The judge.	Jūdex, Icis, m.
People (in general).	Hōmīnes, pl. m.
To, towards (prep.).	In, ad † (with the acc.).
To go to the market.	In (ad) fōrum ire.
To be at the market.	In fōro esse.
To go to the square.	In (ad) lōcum públicum ire.
To be in the square.	In lōco público esse.
To go into the field.	In ágrum (ágrus) ire.
To be in the field.	In ágro (ágris) esse.

E. RULE. — Verbs signifying motion or direction towards a place or object are generally followed by the accusative with ad or in, or by an adverb of place. As,

Where (in what direction) are these people going?	Quō (quórsum) éunt hómīnes illi?
They are going to (towards) the square.	Éunt ad lōcum públicum.
Will you lead us into the fields?	Núm vīs nōs in ágrus dúcere?
I am unwilling to lead you thither.	Nólo vōs éo (illuc) dúcere.
Does your brother come to the market?	Venítne fráter tuus in fōrum?
He does not come there.	Nōn vénit.
Whither do you send your little servant?	Quō mittis sērvulum túum?
I am sending him to the city to my father.	Mitto eum ad pátrē in úrbem.
To go into the country.	Rūs (acc.) ire.
To be in the country.	Rúri (or rúre) ‡ esse.

* Often in the plural, especially when opposed to a collection of houses, like the English "fields."

† Ad properly implies approximation, and has something of the force of the English "towards." It may thus stand before the names of persons as well as of places; in (in this sense), before the latter only.

‡ The form rári is preferable to rúre.

F. Obs. Rus follows the construction of the names of towns, and rejects the preposition in before the accusative and ablative. As,

Do you desire to go anywhere?	Cupisne ire aliquo?
I desire to go into the country.	Égo rûs ire cúpio.
Is the bailiff in the country?	Núm est quaesitor rûri (rûre)?
No; he is at our house.	{ Nôn; apud nós ést.
To go to the ball.	{ Immo véro dómi nóstræ est.
To be (present) at the ball.	Saltátum ire.*
To dance.	Saltatióni interésse (adésse).
The (act of) dancing.	Salto, âre, âvi, âtum.
To be present at.	Saltâtio, ónis, f.
Are the young men going to the ball?	{ Adsum, esse, fûi, fûtûrus.
Yes, sir, they are going.	{ Intersum, † esse, fûi, fûtûrus.
By no means, sir; they are not going.	Eúntne adoléscentûli saltátum?
Is the tailor at the ball?	Véro, dómine, éunt.
He is there.	Mínime génitum, dómine; nôn éunt.
	Adéstne (interéstne) sártor saltatióni?
	Ádest (ínterest).

G. RULE. — Many verbs compounded with the prepositions ad, ante, con, in, inter, ob, post, prae, sub, and super are followed by the dative. As,

Praesum reipublicae.	I preside over the commonwealth.
Antecellit omnibus.	He excels every one.
Affer (adfer) mihi lúteras.	Bring me the letters.
Stadera sedibus suis inhaerunt.	The stars remain fixed in their abodes.
Objecit se telibus hostium.†	He exposed himself to the weapons of the enemy.
At, near (prep.).	Āpūd, juxta, ad (cum acc.).
To stand.	Stō, stāre, stēti, stātum.
To stand by or near.	Adsto, âre, stiti, — (ALICUI REI, APUD, JUXTA).
The window.	Fenestra, ae, f.

* Saltatum is the supine of salto, thus put with ire to denote the purpose: "to dance," "for the purpose of dancing." Cf. Less. XLVII. A.

† Adsum is properly "to be near or present." Intersum conveys the additional notion of "participating in." Both these compounds of sum are conjugated like the simple verb.

‡ Intransitive verbs comprehended under this rule are followed by the dative of the direct object (e. g. antecellit, inhaerent, praesum), and transitive verbs by that of the remote object (e. g. affer mihi, objecit telibus). This rule includes several compounds of sum: — adsum, insum, intersum, praesum, subsum, super-sum.

The fire.	Ignis, is, m. ; carbōnes, pl. m. (the coal fire).
The fireplace, hearth.	Fōcus, i, m.
To go to the window.	{ Ad fenēstram ire. Adire (ad)* fenēstram.
To stand at (near) the window.	{ Apud (juxta, ad) fenēstram stāre. Adstāre fenēstrae (juxta fenēstram).
To go to the fire.	{ Ad fōcum ire. Adire (ad) fōcum.
To stand by the fire.	{ Apud (ad) carbōnes stāre. Adstāre fōco (apud fōcum).
Where is the boatman ?	Ūbinam est nāuta ?
He is standing by the fire.	{ Stāt apud fōcum. Adstat carbōnibus (apud carbōnes).
Are we going to the window ?	Imūsne (adimūsne) ad fenēstram ?
We are not going.	Nōn imus.
To write to some one (to send one a letter).	{ Littēras ad aliquem dāre or mittōre (absolutely). Scribēre alicui or ad aliquem † (with ut and the subj.).
Are you willing to write to me ?	Visne dāre (mittere) littēras ad mē ?
I am unwilling to write to you.	Nōlo dāre (mittere) littēras ad tē.
To whom is you father writing ?	Ad quē dāt pater tuus litteras ?
He is writing to his best friend.	Litteras dāt ad amicum suū optimum.
What is he writing him ?	Quid ei scribit ?
He is writing him to come to the city.	Scribit ei, ut in urbem veniāt (Less. XXX. C. 1.)

EXERCISE 55.

Where is our friend ? — He is at the market. — Where is my brother ? — He is in the country. — Do you wish to go into the country ? — I do not wish to go there. — Whither do you desire to go ? — I desire to go to the market. — Is your brother at home ? — No ; he is at the ball. — Whither does your son wish to go ? — He wishes to go to the great place. — Does the Englishman go into the country in order to see the fields ? — He does not wish to go into the country in order to see the fields, but in order to see the forests, the birds, the water, and to drink tea. — Where is the son of the peasant ? — He is in the fields to cut corn (cutting corn = frumentum secans). — Does the son of the nobleman wish to go anywhere ? — He does not wish to go anywhere ; he is tired. — Whither does the son of

* Ad commonly implies motion towards a place ; but sometimes also rest or situation in a place. The compound adire of this sentence belongs to Rule E.

† The construction scribēre alicui or ad aliquem can only be used properly when the contents of the letter are mentioned, or when a command or exhortation is conveyed.

the bailiff wish to carry corn? — He wishes to carry some to the storehouse of your brother. — Does he wish to carry thither the wine and the meat? — He wishes to carry both thither.

EXERCISE 56.

Have you time to stand at (ad standum apud) the window? — I have no time to stand at the window. — Is your brother at home? — He is not at home? — Where is he? — He is in the country. — Has he anything to do in the country? — He has nothing to do there. — Whither do you wish to go? — I wish to go to the theatre. — Is the Turk in the theatre? — He is there. — Who is in the garden? — The children of the English and those of the Germans are there. — Where does your father wish to speak to me? — He wishes to speak to you in his room. — To whom does your brother wish to speak? — He wishes to speak to the Irishman. — Does he not wish to speak to the Scotchman? — He wishes to speak to him. — Where will he speak to him? — He will speak to him at the theatre. — Does the Italian wish to speak to anybody? — He wishes to speak to the physician. — Where will he speak to him? — He will speak to him at the ball (inter sallandum, Less. XXV. B. c.). — Can you send me some money? — I can send you some. — How much money can you send me? — I can send you thirty-two crowns. — When will you send me that money? — I will send it to you to-day. — Will you send it to me into the country? — I will send it to you thither. — Will you send your servant to the market? — I will send him thither. — Have you anything to buy at the market? — I have to buy good cloth, good boots, and good shoes.

EXERCISE 57.

What does the butcher wish to do in the country? — He wishes to buy there oxen and rams in order to kill them. — Do you wish to buy a chicken in order to kill it? — I wish to buy one, but I have not the courage to kill it. — Does the boatman wish to kill any one? — He does not wish to kill any one. — Have you a desire to burn my letters? — I have not the courage to do it. — Will the servant seek my knife or my paper? — He will seek both. — Which knife do you wish (to have)? — I wish (to have) my large knife. — What oxen does the butcher wish to kill? — He wishes to kill large oxen. — What provisions does the merchant wish to buy? — He wishes to buy good provisions. — Where does he wish to buy them? — He wishes to buy them at the market. — To whom does he wish to send them? — He wishes to send them to our enemies. — Will you send me one more book? — I will send you several more. — Are you able to drink as much as your neighbor? — I am able to drink as much as he; but our friend the Russian is able to drink more than both of us (uterque nostrum). — Is the Russian able to drink as much of this wine as of that? — He is able to drink as much of the one as of the other. — Have you anything good to drink? — I have nothing to drink.

EXERCISE 58.

Is the friend of the Spaniard able to carry provisions? — He can carry some. — Whither does he wish to carry provisions? — He wishes to carry some to our storehouses. — Do you wish to buy provisions in order to carry them to our storehouses? — I wish to buy some in order to carry them into the country. — Do you wish to go to the window in order to see the youth? — I have no time to go (ad eundum) to the window. — Have you anything to do? — I have a letter to write. — To whom have you a letter to write? — I have to write one to my friend. — Do you wish to write to the bailiff? — I wish to write to him. — What do you wish to write to him? — I wish to answer (him) his letter. — Are you able to write as many letters as I? — I am able to write more (of them) than you. — Can you write to your absent friends (ad amicos absentes)? — I can write to them. — Have you paper to write (ad scribendum)? — I have some. — Is the bailiff able to write to anybody? — He is not able to write to anybody.

Lesson XXXIII. — PENSUM TRICESIMUM TERTIUM.

OF THE PASSIVE VOICE.

A. In the active voice the agent is the nominative of the verb, and is represented as acting upon an object in the accusative; in the passive voice the object becomes the subject of the verb, and is represented as acted upon by the agent in the ablative. E. g.

ACTIVE.

Pater amat filium.

Sol mundum illustrat.

Dei providentia mundum administrat.

PASSIVE.

Filius amatur a patre.

Sole mundus illustratur.

*Dei providentiā mundus administratur.

REMARKS.

1. The passive voice in Latin is distinguished from the active by peculiar terminations. It has the same number of moods and tenses, but a number of its tenses are periphrastic. (Cf. Lesson XXVIII. E.)

2. Neuter verbs, from the nature of their signification, do not admit of a passive voice. The Romans, however, sometimes employ them passively, but only in the third person singular and impersonally; as, Bibitur, curritur, itur, venit, There is drinking, running, going, coming. So also the neuter of the future passive participle: Eundum est, veniendum est, There must be going, coming.

* The father loves the son. PASS. The son is loved by the father. — The sun illumines the world. PASS. The world is illumined by the sun. — God's providence rules the world. PASS. The world is ruled by God's providence.

3. The verbs fiō, I become (am made); capūlo, I am beaten; and venēo, I am sold, have an active form with a passive signification.

4. The neuters audēo, I venture; fidō, I trust; gaudēo, I rejoice; and solēo, I am accustomed, — assume a passive form in the perfect and the tenses derived from it. Thus: Ausus, fissus, gavisus, solitus sum, I have ventured, trusted, rejoiced, been accustomed. They are hence called semi-deponentia.

5. A numerous class of Latin verbs, both active and neuter, are only passive in form, having an active signification. They are called *Deponent * Verbs*, and are of every conjugation.

B. I. The principal parts of the passive voice, from which all the remaining forms are derived, are, 1. The Present Indicative, 2. The Present Infinitive, and 3. The Perfect Participle. Thus: —

	PRES. IND.	PRES. INF.	PERF. PART.
1.	āmōr,	āmārī,	āmātūs.
2.	mōnēōr,	mōnērī,	mōnītūs.
3.	lēgōr,	lēgī,	lectūs.
4.	audiōr,	audīrī,	audītūs.

II. The formation of the different tenses of the passive voice has already been explained in Lesson XXVIII. A—E. The parts to be considered in this Lesson are, —

1. The Present Indicative Passive, formed from the same tense of the active voice by adding r; as,

1. āmō — āmōr, I am loved.
2. mōnēō — mōnēōr, I am reminded.
3. lēgō — lēgōr, I am read.
4. audiō — audiōr, I am heard.

2. The Present Infinitive Passive, formed from the corresponding mood of the active voice, by converting, 1. ārē, 2. ērē, 4. irē, into, 1. ārī, 2. ērī, 4. irī, and the ērē of the third conjugation into ī only †; as,

1. āmārē — āmārī, to be loved.
2. mōnērē — mōnērī, to be reminded.
3. lēgērē — lēgī, to be read.
4. audirē — audirī, to be heard.

3. The Perfect Participle, formed from the supine, by changing um into us, a, um; as,

1. āmātum — āmātus, ā, ūm, loved.
2. mōnītum — mōnītus, ā, ūm, reminded.

* So called from being supposed to have laid aside (depōno, I put off, lay aside) the active voice and passive signification.

† In the older monuments of the Latin language, and also among the later poets, the syllable er is sometimes appended to the infinitive passive; as amarier, legier, mittier, &c.

3. lectūm — lectūs, ā, ūm, read.

4. auditūm — auditūs, ā, ūm, heard.

4. The Present Subjunctive, formed from the same tense of the active voice, by changing the final m into r; as,

1. amēm — amēr, that I may be loved.

2. mōnēām — mōnēār, that I may be reminded.

3. lēgām — lēgūr, that I may be read.

4. audiām — audiār, that I may be heard.

CONJUGATION OF THE PRESENT PASSIVE.

C. The following paradigms exhibit the inflection of the present tense of the passive voice, indicative and subjunctive:—

FIRST CONJUGATION.

INDICATIVE.

Amor, I am loved.

SING. amōr amāris or -rē *
amātūr,
PLUR. amāmūr amāminī amantūr.

SUBJUNCTIVE.

Amer, that I may be loved.

SING. amēr
amērē or -ris *
amētūr,
PLUR. anēmūr amēminī amentūr.

SECOND CONJUGATION.

INDICATIVE.

Monēor, I am reminded.

SING. mōnēor mōnēris or -rē mōnētūr,
PLUR. mōnēmūr mōnēminī mōnentūr.

SUBJUNCTIVE.

Monēar, that I may be reminded.

SING. mōnēār
mōnēārē or -ris
mōnēātūr,
PLUR. mōnēāmūr
mōnēāminī mōnēantūr.

THIRD CONJUGATION.

INDICATIVE.

Lēgor, I am read.

SING. lēgōr
lēgēris or -rē lēgītūr, PLUR. lēgīmūr
lēgīminī lēguntūr.

SUBJUNCTIVE.

Lēgar, that I may be read.

SING. lēgūr lēgūrē or -ris
lēgātūr,
PLUR. lēgāmūr lēgāminī lēgantūr.

* Of this second person singular the form in ris is to be preferred for the indicative and that in rē for the subjunctive. Thus the student may put Ind. amāris, monēris, legēris, audiris, and Subj. amēre, moneāre, legāre, audiāre.

FOURTH CONJUGATION.

INDICATIVE.

Audior, I am heard.
 SING. audior
 audiris or -rē auditur,
 PLUR. audimur
 audimini audiuntur.

SUBJUNCTIVE.

Audiar, that I may be heard.
 SING. audiar.
 audiarē or -ris
 audiātūr,
 PLUR. audiamur
 audiamini
 audiantūr.

Like amor, inflect commodor, dor,* laceror, lavor, portor, reparor, secur, servor, &c. Like monēor: docēor (I am taught), habēor, juhēor (I am commanded), tenēor, videor, &c. Like legor: dicor, diligor, ducor, emor, frangor, mittor, quaeror, scribor, tollor, &c. Like audior: custodior (I am guarded), erudior (I am instructed), munior (I am fortified), vestior (I am clothed), &c.

D. The Present Passive of căpio, and of other verbs in io of the third conjugation, is thus inflected: —

INDICATIVE.

Căpior, I am taken.
 SING. căpior
 căpēris or -rē căpītūr,
 PLUR. căpimur căpimini căpluntur.

SUBJUNCTIVE.

Căpiar, that I may be taken.
 SING. căpiar
 căpiarē or -ris
 căpiātūr,
 PLUR. căpiamur căpiamini căplantūr.

Like capior are conjugated: 1. All its compounds; as, accipior, decipior, excipior, &c. 2. Those compounds of facio which change the radical a into i; as, afficior, conficior, interficior, &c. 3. Jacior, I am thrown, and its compounds abjicior, dejicior, rejicior, &c.

E. The Present Passive of the verb fēro, and its compounds (affēro, antefēro, confēro, defēro, &c.), is irregular. Thus: —

INDICATIVE.

Fēror, I am carried.
 SING. fēror fēris fertur,
 PLUR. fērimur fērimini fēruntur.

SUBJUNCTIVE.

Fērar, that I may be carried.
 SING. fērar fērarē or -ris
 ferātūr,
 PLUR. fēramur fēramini fērantur.

F. The passive of facio is likewise irregular: fīo, fīerī, factus sum. The present of fīo is inflected as follows: —

* The passive of do shortens the first a, as in the active; as, dāris, dātur; dāmur, dāmini, dantur. The forms dor and der, however, are never used.

INDICATIVE.	SUBJUNCTIVE.
Fio,* I am made, I become.	Fiām, that I may be made, &c.
SING. fio	SING. fiām
fis	fiās
fit,	fiāt,
PLUR. fimus	PLUR. fiāmūs
fitis	fiātis
fiunt.	fiant.

REMARK. — These compounds of facio, which retain the radical a, have likewise fio in the passive, but those which change the a in i have ficio; e. g. arefacio — arefio; calefacio — calefio; labefacio — labefio, &c.; but conficio — conficio, interficio — interficio, &c.

G. Obs. The Present Passive always represents the action denoted by the verb as incomplete and still going on. In this respect it is to be distinguished from the perfect, which exhibits it as already accomplished and complete. E. g.

PRES. Dómus aedificátur.	The house is being built (is building).
PERF. Dómus aedificáta est.	The house is built (finished).
Are you (being) loved?	Amarísne? Ecquid amáris?
Yes, sir, I am loved.	Véro, dómine, ámor.
Is your brother loved?	Fratérne túus amátur?
He is not loved.	Nón amátur.
Which book is read?	Quis líber légitur?
Mine.	Méus.
Are we heard or they?	Útrum audimur nós an illi?
They are heard.	Audiúntur illi.
Are ye reminded?	Monémínine? Num monémini?
We are reminded.	Monémur.
We are not reminded.	Non monémur.
Where is the trunk carried to?	Quò fértur riscus?
It is carried home.	Dómum (fértur).
Is the coffee (being) warmed?	Calefitne coffea?
Yes, it is (being) warmed.	Íta ést, caléfit.
Is any one killed?	Núm quis interficítur?
No one is killed.	Nemo (nūllus) interficitur.
There are many (being) killed.	Múlti interficiúntur.
Good, well-behaved.	Bēnē† mōrātus, a, um; bōnus, a, um.
Naughty, bad.	Prārus, a, um; mālīs mōribus.†
Skillful, clever, diligent.	Pēritus, a, um; sollers, tis; dilt-gens, tis.
Awkward.	Impēritus, a, um; ineptus, a, um.

* The i of the verb fio (although preceding another vowel) is long, except when followed by er; as, fiam, fiunt; but feri, fierem.

† An adverb qualifying mōrātus.

‡ This is called the ablative of quality, which must be translated like a genitive: "of bad manners."

Assiduous, sedulous, studious.	Sedūlus, a, um; assidūus, a, um; stūdiōsus, a, um.
Idle, lazy.	Ignāvus, a, um; piger, ra, rum; segnis, e.
The idler, lazy fellow.	(Hōmo) dēsēs, -idis, m.
To praise.	Laudo, āre, āvi, ātum (ALIQUEM; ALIQUID).
To blame.	{ Vitūpero, āre, āvi, ātum. Rēprēhendo, ěre, di, sum. (ALIQUEM DE ALIQUA RE).
To reward (any one).	{ Praemium alicui dāre or dēferre. Praemio* aliquem afficere or ornāre. Praemio affici or ornāri.
To be rewarded.	{ Praemium consequor, † -sequi, -scūtus sum (dep.). Pūnīo, ire, īvi (īi), itum (ALIQUEM).
To punish.	{ Aliquem poenā afficere.
To esteem.	Aliquem magni ‡ facere or aestimāre.
To despise.	{ Contemno, ěre, -tempſi, -temptum. Despicātui § habere (ALIQUEM).
To hate, to bear hatred towards any one.	Odium habere or gerere (IN ALIQUEM).
To be hated.	{ Odio (dat.) esse (ALICUI). In odio esse (APUD ALIQUEM).
By me — by us.	A mē — a nobis.
By thee — by you.	A tē — a vobis.
By him — by them.	Ab eo (illo) — ab eis (illis).
By the father — by men.	A patre — ab hominibus.
By fire, heat, by the sword.	Igni, aestu, ferro (abl.).

H. RULE.—If the agent of a passive verb is a person, it is put in the ablative, with the preposition a or ab, but if it is an impersonal cause, means, or instrument, it stands in the ablative without a preposition.
E. g.

Laudantur a mē, a tē, ab eo (illo). They are praised by me, by you, by him.

Vituperāris a nobis, ab illis, a patre. You are blamed by us, by them, by your father.

* The Ablative = "to affect or adorn one with a reward."

† Literally, "I obtain (consequor, deponent) a reward."

‡ Literally, "to make (or esteem) one of much account." Magni is the genitive of price, and agrees with pretii understood.

§ The Dative of despicātus. Literally, "to have (hold) one for contempt"; like the English "to hold one in contempt."

Terra illa ferro ignique pervastata est.

Fecunditate arborum delector.

Who is punished ?

The boy is punished by his father.

Why is he punished ?

Because he is lazy and bad.

Which man is praised, and which one blamed ?

He who is skilful is praised, but he who is awkward is blamed.

Which boys are rewarded, and which punished ?

Those who are clever and studious are rewarded, but those who are awkward and lazy are punished.

We are loved by our friends, and you are despised by every one.

I am punished, and you are rewarded.

These children are praised because they are diligent and well-behaved ; but those are reprehended because they are lazy and bad.

Why ?

Because.

The tutor, master.

The pupil, scholar.

That land was destroyed by fire and sword.

I am delighted by the fruitfulness of the trees.

Quis punitur ?

Puer punitur a patre.

Quam ob rem poenā afficitur ?

Quia est ignavus et nequam.

Quis homo laudatur, quis vituperatur ?

Quicumque peritus est, laudatur, qui autem est imperitus, is vituperatur.

Qui pueri praemiis afficiuntur, qui puniuntur ?

Qui sollertes atque studiosi sunt, praemiis ornantur, qui autem inepti ac sēgnes sunt, nō puniuntur.

Nōs ab amicis nostris amāmur, vōs autem ab omnibus contemnimini.

Ego poenā afficior, tū ornāris praemio.

Hi liberi laudantur, quia diligētes et bēne morātī sunt, illi autem reprehenduntur, quia ignāvī atque malīs mōribus sunt.

Cur ? quam ob rem ? (Conj.)

Quia, quod (Conj.).

Tutor, ōris, m. ; magister, ri, m.

Discipulus, i, m. ; alumnus, i, m.

Lesson XXXIV.—PENSUM TRICESIMUM QUARTUM.

OF THE NOMINATIVE AFTER VERBS.

A. RULE. — After certain neuter and passive verbs, the noun serving to complete the predicate is put in the same case as the subject to which it relates. E. g.

Nōs sumus amici.

Servus fuit libertinus.

Cupio evadere orator.

Camillus dictātor dicitur.

We are friends.

The slave is made a freed man.

I desire to become an orator.

Camillus is called dictator.

REMARKS.

1. The noun in the predicate may be of any gender, but if it has a form of the same gender as the subject, that form is preferred; as, Amicitia vinculum quoddam est hominum inter se, Friendship is a kind of bond which links men to each other. But, Licentia corruptrix est morum, Licentiousness is the corruptrix of morals. Aquila volucrum regina est*, The eagle is the queen of birds. Stilus optimus est dicendi magister, Style is the best teacher of oratory.

2. The noun of the predicate may be of a different number; as,

* Regina, because the grammatical gender of quila is feminine. But the masculine rex would not be incorrect here.

Captivi militum praeda (sing.) fuerant, The captives had been booty of the soldiers. Omnia Caesar erat, Caesar was everything. Haec urbs est Thebae, This city is Thebes.

3. The verb commonly agrees with the subject, but is sometimes attracted into concord with the nearer noun of the predicate; as, Loca, quae proxima Carthaginem Numidia vocatur, The places in the vicinity of Carthage, which are called Numidia. Amantium irae (pl.) amoris integratio est, The quarrels of lovers are the renewal of love.

B. RULE. — An adjective, adjective pronoun, or participle, serving to complete the predicate after verbs neuter or passive, agrees in gender, number, and case with the subject to which it relates. E. g.

Ille puer est modestus.

That boy is modest.

Illi libri sunt mei.

These books are mine.

Tu vocaris iustus.

You are called just.

Cupit putari bella.

She desires to be considered handsome.

Scythiae invicti mansere.

The Scythians remained unconquered.

REMARKS.

1. The adjective of the predicate is sometimes put substantively in the neuter; as, Varium et mutabile semper (est) femina, Woman is always a fickle and changeable being. Aliud est actio bona, aliud oratio, A good action is one thing, and good talk another. In these instances we commonly supply in English some general term, like "thing," "things," "being," &c.

2. The adjective of the predicate sometimes agrees with another noun implied in the subject; as, Capita (neut.) conjurationis caesi * (masc.) sunt, The heads of the conspiracy were killed. This is called the Constructio ad Synesin.

3. If the predicate contains a participle with esse, it generally agrees with the nearest noun; as, Non omnis error stultitia est dicenda, Every error cannot be called stupidity. Paupertas mihi onus (neut.) visum est miserum et grave, Poverty seemed to me to be a wretched and a heavy burden.

4. If the subject is compound, i. e. composed of two or more nominatives, the adjective or participle is generally in the plural, and its gender is determined by the rules of Lesson XXII. B. 1–5. Additional examples are: Rex regiaque classis una profecti (sc. sunt), The king and the royal fleet departed together. Murus et porta de coelo tacta sunt, The wall and gate were struck by lightning. Filia atque unus e filiis captus est, The daughter and one of the sons were captured. Populi provinciaeque liberatae sunt, The nations and provinces were made free.

* In the masculine, because the heads of the conspiracy were considered men.

5. When the subject is in the accusative, the noun, adjective, or participle of the predicate is in the same case; as, Cupio me esse clementem,* I desire to be clement. Scio te haberi doctum, I know that you are considered a scholar.

6. When the infinitive of a verb neuter or passive is preceded by a dative, the noun or adjective of the predicate may stand in the same case; as, Natura dedit omnibus esse beatis, Nature has conceded happiness to all men. Licet mihi esse beato,† It is lawful for me to be happy. This construction is frequent with impersonal verbs governing the dative.

7. After the verb sum the predicate is frequently an adverb or a noun in an oblique case; as, Conatus ejus frustra fuerunt, His attempts were in vain. Recte est aeger, The patient is doing well. Esse cum imperio, To be in command (of an army).

C. The neuter and passive verbs which may thus be followed by nouns, adjectives, or participles, in the same case as the subject, are, —

1. The copula sum, and certain neuter verbs denoting motion or situation; as, cado, I fall.

eo, I go.

evado, I come off (become).

fio, I become.

fugio, I escape.

incedo, I walk.

jaceo, I lie.

maneo, I remain.

sedeo, I sit.

sto, I stand.

venio, I come.‡

2. Passive verbs of naming, choosing, constituting, rendering; as, appellor, I am called.

constituor, I am constituted.

creor, I am created.

decloror, I am declared.

designor, I am designated.

dicor, I am said (called).

eligor, I am elected.

nominor, I am nominated.

nuncupor, I am named.

perhibeor, I am said.§

reddor, I am rendered.

renuntior, I am proclaimed.

salutor, I am saluted.

vocor, I am called.||

* Compare page 128, note.

† This may also be, Licet mihi esse beatum. The logical order is, Me beatum esse mihi licet. So also, Mihi negligenti esse non licuit, I was not allowed to be negligent. Vobis necesse est fortibus esse viris, It is necessary for you to be brave men.

‡ Thus: In pectus cecidit pronus, He fell flat on his chest. In causam it princeps, He goes headlong into the case. Evadit victor, He comes off victor. Incedo regina, I walk queen. Manebit imperator, He will remain commander, &c.

§ Many of these passive verbs, especially those of case 3, are construed with an infinitive of sum expressed or understood; as, Nuntii fuisse perhibentur, They are said to have been messengers. Videntur viri boni esse, Ye seem to be good men, &c.

|| To these may be added audio, which sometimes = appellor; as, Rex patremque audisti, You heard yourself called king and father.

3. Passive verbs of esteeming, numbering, considering, and the like; as, censeor, I am supposed.

credor, I am believed.

deprehendor, I am discovered.

existimor, I am esteemed.

feror, I am reported.

habeor, I am considered.

judicor, I am judged.

memoror, I am recounted.

numoror, I am numbered.

putor, I am thought.

reperior, I am found.

videor, I seem.

The corner.

Angŭlus, i, m.; lăttbŭlum, i, n.
(hiding-place).

The well.

Pŭtĕus, i, m.

The fountain.

Fons, tis, m.

The hole.

Fŏrămen, inis, n.

To order, command.

Jŭbĕo, ĕre, jussi, jussum (ALIQUID
FIERI, ALIQUEM FACERE ALI-QUID).

I direct, let.

Cŭro, ĕre, ĕvi, ĕtum (ALIQUID FA-CIENDUM).

To go for, fetch (of things).

{ Affĕro, -ferre, attŭli, allĕtum.
Apporto, ĕre, ĕvi, ĕtum.
(ALIQUID ALIQUO).

To go for, fetch, or call (a person).

Arcesso, ĕre, ivi, itum (ALIQUEM ALICUNDE* ALIQUO).

To fetch, conduct.

Addŭco, ĕre, xi, ctum (ALIQUEM ALIQUO or AD ALIQUEM).

To send for (anything).

{ Jŭbĕo aliquid affĕrri or apportāri.
Cŭro aliquid apportandum.

To send for (a person).

Jŭbeo alique[m] arcessi or addŭci.†

Does the servant fetch anything for us?

Affĕrtne (apportātne) sĕrvus aliquid ad nŏs?

He does not fetch us anything.

{ Nŭlil affĕrt ad nŏs.
Nŏbis nŏn affĕrt quidquam.

Do you go for (call) any one?

Arcessisne alique[m]?

I call (go for) no one.

Nĕmĭnem (nŭllum) arcesso.

Do you send for anything?

Jubĕsne apportāri aliquid?

I am sending for some wine.

Vinum apportāri jŭbĕo.

I order my books to be brought (I send for my books).

Libros mĕos apportāndos cŭro.

Will you send for the physician?

Visne jubĕre mĕdicum arcessi?

I will send for him.

Vŏlo jubĕre ĕum arcessi.

We desire wine to be brought.

Nŏs vinum apportāri cŭpĭmus.

I direct paper to be brought (send for paper).

Ēgo chărtam apportāndam cŭro.

* From some place somewhither.

† The verbs jubeo and curo are, however, frequently suppressed, and the verb itself is used in a factitive sense; as, Annulum sibi fecit, He had a ring made. Securi percussit archipiratam, He ordered the chief of the pirates to be executed. So arcessere may stand in the sense of "to send for" a person, and apportare "to send for (cause to be brought)" a thing, &c.,

Let us send for a little bread. Jubeamus affèrri aliquantulum pànis.
(Less. XXX. C. 3.)

We must work (it behooves us to work). $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{Laborandum est nobis.} \\ \textit{Nòs oportet laborare.} \\ \textit{Necesse est laborèmus.} \end{array} \right.$

D. Obs. The English phrase I must, I am obliged, is expressed in Latin either by the participle in dus, or by the impersonal verbs oportet, "it behooves," and necesse est, "it is necessary." The former of the verbs is followed either by the accusative with an infinitive, or by the subjunctive without ut; the latter is commonly followed by the dative and infinitive, or by the subjunctive without ut. Thus:—

I must write.	Scribendum est mhi.
It behooves me to (I must) write.	$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{Mè oportet scribere.} \\ \textit{Opòrtet (égo) scribam.} \end{array} \right.$
It is necessary for me to write (I must write).	$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{Necesse est mhi scribere.} \\ \textit{Necesse est (égo) scribam.} \end{array} \right.$
Must you write a letter to your brother?	Oportétne tè dare litéras ad fràtrem?
I must write one.	$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{Opòrtet mè dare únas.} \\ \textit{Opòrtet dém únas.} \end{array} \right.$
Is he obliged to go to the market?	$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{Necesséne est éi in fórum ire?} \\ \textit{Necesséne est éat in fórum?} \end{array} \right.$
He is obliged to go thither.	Necesse est éat illuc.
Must you go?	Eundúmne est tibi?
I am not obliged to go.	Míhi nòn est eúndum.
What has the man to do?	Quid hómini faciéndum est?
He is obliged to go into the forest.	Necesse est éat in sílvam.
What have you to do?	$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{Quid est tibi faciéndum?} \\ \textit{Quid hábes faciéndum?} \end{array} \right.$
I have nothing to do.	$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{Nòn est mhi quidquam faciéndum.} \\ \textit{Nihil faciéndum hábeo.} \end{array} \right.$
What have you to drink?	Quid est tibi (quid hábes) ad bibéndum?
I have nothing to drink.	$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{Nihil ad bibéndum hábeo.} \\ \textit{Nòn hábeo quòd bibam.} \end{array} \right.$
I have nothing but water to drink.	$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{Áquam sòlam ad bibéndum hábeo.} \\ \textit{Nòn hábeo quod bibam nìsi áquam.} \end{array} \right.$
Are you willing to make my fire?	Visne mhi accéndere carbónes?
I am not unwilling to make it, but I have no time.	Eòs accendere nòn nòlo, càrèo autem ótio.
This evening.	Hòdie vespèri.
In the evening.	Vespèri, vespère (abl.).
This morning.	Hòdie máne (adv.).
In the morning.	Máne (adv.).

When must you go into the country? Quò témpore te opórtet ire rûs?

I must absolutely go this morning. Necesse est éam hódie mâne. ing.

Lesson XXXVI. — PENSUM TRICESIMUM SEXTUM.

OF APPOSITION.

A. RULE. — A noun added to another noun for the sake of explanation is put in the same case, and, if its form admits of it, in the same gender and number.
E. g.

Taurus mōns.

Tigrānes, rex Armēnius.

Regina pecūnia.

Philosophia, inventrix lēgum, magistra mōrum et disciplinæ.

Athēnæ omnium doctrinārum inventrices.

Mount Taurus.

Tigranes, the king of Armenia.

Queen money.

Philosophy, the inventrix of laws, the mistress of morals and discipline.

Athens, the inventrix of all the sciences.

REMARKS.

1. The noun thus added to another, for the sake of characterizing or describing, is said to be in apposition with it. The explanatory noun is called the appositum, and is commonly placed last.*

2. Apposition may take place in the oblique cases as well as in the nominative. E. g. Apud Herōdōtum, patrem histōriæ, in Herodotus, the father of history. Nero Senecæ, jam tunc senatori, in disciplinam traditus est, Nero was put under the tuition of Seneca, then already senator. Quid enim dicam de thesauro omnium, memoriæ? What shall I say in regard to memory, the treasure-house of all things?

3. A pronoun, either expressed or implied in the verb, may stand in place of the first noun; as, Nos consules desumus, We consuls are remiss. Post me quaestorem, After my being quaestor. Hoc tibi juvenis Romāna indicimus bellum (sc. nos), We, the young men of Rome, declare this war against you. Philosophiæ multum adolescens temporis tribui (sc. ego), In my youth I devoted much time to the study of philosophy.

4. The appositum is often of a different gender or number; as, Tragoedia Thyestes, The tragedy Thyestes. Deliciae meae, Dicæarchus, Dicæarchus, my favorite authority. Aborigines, genus hominum agreste, The aborigines, an uncouth race of men.

5. A noun in apposition with two or more nouns is commonly in the plural; as, Cupido atque ira, pessimi consultatores, Desire and passion, the worst of advisers. Ennius ferbat duo, quae maxima putantur onera, paupertatem et senectutem, Ennius bore two burdens, which are deemed the greatest, poverty and old age.

6. Two or more Roman prænomena (of brothers, &c.) are followed by the common family name in the plural; as, Cn. et P. Scipiones, Cneius and Publius Scipio. Tiberio Drusoque Nerōnibus, To Tiberius and Drusus Nero.

7. The appositum sometimes agrees with a genitive implied in a possessive pronoun; as, Studium tuum, adolescentis, perspezi, I have witnessed your zeal as a young man. Tuum, hominis simplicis, pectus vidimus, We have seen the heart of you, simple man.

8. A noun denoting a whole, instead of being in the genitive, is sometimes put in apposition with its partitive. E. g. Milites (= milittum), pars victoriae fiducia, pars ignominiae dolore ad omnem licentiam processerant, The soldiers, some from the confidence of the victory and others from the pain of the disgrace, had plunged themselves into excesses of every kind. Facerent, quod se dignum quisque ducerent, They might do what every one deemed worthy of himself.

* But sometimes emphatically first, as in the last example of Rem. 2.

9. Adjectives used substantively, especially those of the neuter gender, may likewise stand in apposition; as, Propinquum nostrum, Crassum, illum divitem, laudandum pū'o, Our relative, Crassus, the rich (man), ought in my opinion to be praised. Batāvi machīnas etiam, insolitum sibi, ausi, The Batavi even dared (to employ) the war-engine, a thing to which they were unaccustomed.

10. The appositum may have reference to an entire sentence, and vice versa; e. g. Postremo deserunt tribunal, manus intentantes, causam discordiae et initium armorum, At last they desert the tribunal, stretching out their hands, the cause of discord and the commencement of hostilities. Unum certamen erat relictum, sententia Vulcatii, There was one subject of dispute left, namely, the opinion of Vulcatius.

11. The genitive is sometimes put instead of the appositum; as, Arbor fici, The fig-tree. Oppidum Antiöchia, The city of Antioch. Amnis Eridāni, The river Eridanus. Nomen Mercūrii, The name (of) Mercury. But this is not so common as flūmen Rhēnus, terra Gallia, mons Avenna, oppidum Genābum, &c.

12. The ablatives urbe, oppido, &c. are sometimes found in apposition with the name of a town in the genitive; as, Corinthi, Achaiae urbe, At Corinth, a city of Achaia.

13. After expressions like est (dātur, indītūr, impōnītūr) mihi nōmen, "I am called," "my name is," the proper name is sometimes by attraction put in apposition with the dative of the pronoun (mihi, &c.), rather than with nomen or cognomen; as, Scipio, cui postea Africāno cognūmen ex virtūte fuit, Scipio, who afterwards was surnamed Africanus from his valor. Tibi nōmen insāno posuere, They gave you the name of an insane man. But also Fonti nōmen Arethūsa est, The fountain's name is Arethusa, &c.

14. The appositum is sometimes introduced by ut, velūt, quāsi, tanquam (= "as," "as if," "like"), quāvis, or ceu; e. g. Aegypti cānem et fēlem ut dēos cōlunt, The Egyptians worship the dog and cat as divinities. Herōdōtus quāsi sedātus amnis flūi, Herodotus flows like a gentle stream. Filiū suū, quāvis victōrem, occidit, He killed his own son, although victorious.*

15. The appositum may be modified by an adverb; as, C. Flamīnīus, consul iterū, C. Flaminius a second time consul. Popūlum lāte rēgem, A people ruling (lit. king) far and wide.

* Pro victis, as conquered; legatorum numero, as legates; praedae nomine, as booty, — occur in the same construction. So also pro consule; as, (Ego) pro consule Athenas veneram, I had come as proconsul to Athens.

To sell.	Vendo, ēre, dīdī, dītum.
	Divendo, &c. (in small quantities).
	(ALICUI ALIQUID).
To say, affirm.	Dico, ēre, xī, ctum.
	Aio; inquam (defective).

B. Obs. Aio (ājo), I say, affirm, and dīco, I say, are opposed to nego, I deny. Aio and inquam are defective verbs, and are chiefly used in citing the language of another. They are thus inflected in the present:—

PRES. IND.	āio, āis, āit; —, —, āiunt.
PRES. SUBJ.	—, āias, āiat; —, —, āiant.
PRES. IND.	{ inquam, } inquis, inquit; inquitmus, inquitis, inquitunt.
PRES. SUBJ.	{ inqulo, } —, —, inquat; —, —, —.

What do you say (think)?	Quid āis?
Do you say so? Is it possible?	Ain' (= āisne)*? Ain' tū?
What do they say?	Quid āiunt?
They say that the city is occupied by the enemy.	Āiunt (dicunt), urbem ab hōstibus tenēri.
I am delighted with Ennius, says one; and I with Pecuvius, says another.	Ēnnio delēctor, ait† quispiam . . . Pecūvio, inquit ālius.

To tell, order, direct.	{ Jubēre (with acc. and infin.).
	{ Mando, āre, āri, ātum.
	{ (ALICUI ALIQUID or UT).
Will you tell the servant to make the fire?	Vin' jubēre fāmulum accēndere ignem?
I will tell him to do it.	{ Jubēre eum volo facere hoc.
	{ Volo ei mandare, ut hoc faciat.
Will you tell the servant to buy a broom?	{ Vin' jubēre fāmulum scōpas emere?
	{ Vin' mandare fāmulo, ut scōpas emat?
I will order him to buy one.	Volo ei mandare, ut unas emat.
What do you desire to sell me?	Quid mhi vendere cupis?
I wish to sell you a horse.	Cupio tibi vendere equum.
The word.	Vox, vōcis, f.; vocabulum, i, n.; verbum,† i, n.
The favor.	Officium, i, n.; grātum.
The pleasure.	Voluptas, ātis, f.; oblectatio, ōnis, f.

* In familiar discourse the enclitic ne often loses its final e by Apocope. If the letter s precedes, this is likewise dropped, and the vowel of the syllable, if long, is shortened; as, jussin', adebn', egon', vin (= visne), juben (= jubēsne), salin' (= salisne), vidēn' (= vidēsne).

† So also with ut; as ut ait, ut aiunt, as he says, &c.; ut Cicero ait, dicit, docet.

‡ Vox is a word as spoken and heard; vocabulum, an isolated word or term; verbum is any part of speech, especially in connected discourse.

To give one pleasure.	{ Voluptātem afferre (ALICUI). Grātum * esse (ALICUI).
To do one a favor.	{ Officium praestāre alicui. Grātum facere alicui. (ALIQUA RE).

He is in want of them.	(Eórum) indíget.
Do you want these books ?	{ Éstne tibi ópus his líbris ? { Egēsne (egén') his líbris ?
I do want them.	{ Sūnt mīhi ópus. { Égeo íis.
Late (adv.).	Sērō, sêrum.
Too late.	Sêrius (neut. comp), sêro. ‡
Is it late ?	Éstne sêro ? Sêrúmne est ?
Is it late in the day, in the night ?	Éstne sêrum diçi, nóctis ?
It is late.	Est sêrum (sêro).
It is too late.	Sêro (sêrius) est.
What time is it ?	Quóta hōra est ?

* Neuter adjectives or pronouns, such as tantum, quantum, quid, hoc, illud, &c. are always in the nominative after opus. Both opus and usus are sometimes (though rarely) followed by the genitive or accusative; as, Temporia, cibum opus (usus) est. There is need of time, food.

† "Nothing whatever," "nothing at all."

‡ The adverbial ablative sêro is frequently put for the comparative sêrius, too late.

Lesson XXXVII. — PENSUM TRICESIMUM SEPTIMUM.

AGREEMENT OF ADJECTIVES.

A. RULE. — An adjective, adjective pronoun, or participle agrees with its substantive in gender, number, and case. E. g.

Amicus certus.
Sp̄r̄ta gl̄ria.

A sure friend.
Disdained glory.

Gramen viride.
Terræ sitiētis.
Mōtes alti.
Colūnnas nitidas.
Malōrum impendētium.
Diēbus præteritis.

The green grass.
Of the thirsty earth.
High mountains.
Shining columns.
Of impending evils.
In days past.

REMARKS.

1. All adjectives may generally be employed in two distinct relations. a) They are either directly connected with the substantive as its attributes; as, vir justus, dies præteritæ; or, b) they are linked to it by the copula sum, and constitute the predicate; as, vir est justus, dies præteritæ sunt. The former of these relations is called the attributive and the latter the predicative.

2. Adjectives* in the predicative relation have in general the same agreement as those in the attributive. (Cf. Less. XXXIV. B.)

3. Personal pronouns may have adjectives in agreement with them, like nouns. The gender of the adjective is determined by that of the substantive represented. E.g. Ego solus, or fem. Ego sola, I alone. Tu carus omnibus expectatusque venies, You will be welcomed by all. Illis absentibus, They being absent. Dicitur esse liberæ, She is said to be free. Miseri (fem. miseræ) sumus, We are wretched.

4. Words not properly substantives, but employed as such (e.g. adverbs, infinitives, or entire clauses), may take an adjective of the neuter gender. Vide examples Less. XXXII. A. Rem. 3.

5. The place of the adjective is sometimes supplied by a noun or adverb; as, Victor exercitus, A victorious army. Contemptor animus, A contemptuous mind. Minime largitor, No profuse spender. Præclare facta, Distinguished deeds.

6. The Romans sometimes employ an adjective in agreement with the subject of a sentence, where the English idiom requires an adverb in the predicate. E.g. Ego primus hanc orationem legi, I have read this oration first (= am the first that read it). Hannibal princeps in proelium ibat, ultimus conserto proelio excedebat, Hannibal always was the first that entered into battle and the last that left it. Nullus dubito (= non dubito), I do not doubt. So chiefly domesticus (= domi), matutinus (= māne), nocturnus (= noctu), multus (= multum), prior, primus, propior, proximus, solus, totus, ultimus, unus, &c., with many of which the adjective is regularly put instead of the corresponding adverb.

7. When two or more adjectives, regarded as distinct, precede their noun, they are commonly connected by conjunctions; but when they come after it, the conjunction is frequently omitted. E.g. Multi fortissimi atque optimi viri, Many brave and excellent men. Unus et perangustus aditus, One way of approach, and a narrow one. Oratio composita, ornata, copiosa, An oration well arranged, elegant, and copious.

* In these remarks the term "adjective" includes adjective pronouns and participles.

8. But when one of the adjectives is so closely allied to the noun as to form one complex notion with it, the remaining adjectives are added without a conjunction. E. g. Festi dies anniversarii, Anniversary festivals. Privata navis oneraria maxima, A private carrying-ship of the largest size. Externos multos claros viros nominarem, I might name many foreigners of distinction.

9. A plural noun has sometimes two adjectives in the singular. E. g. Maria superum atque inferum, The upper and the lower seas (parts of the Mediterranean).

10. An adjective belonging to two or more nouns is generally put in the plural; as, Veneno absumpti sunt Hannibal et Philopœmen, Hannibal and Philopœmen were killed by poison. Liber et Libera Cerere nati, Bacchus and Libera born of Ceres. Natura inimica inter se sunt civitas et rex, The king and state are naturally the enemies of each other. Injustitiam et intemperantiam dicimus esse fugienda, We say that injustice and intemperance must be shunned. (On the gender of these adjectives, see Less. XXII. B. Compare also Less. XXXIV. B. 4.)

11. A collective noun may have an adjective in the plural, which commonly assumes the gender of the individuals denoted by the noun. E. g. Magna pars vulnerati aut occisi, A large number killed or wounded. Cetera multitudo sorte decimus quisque ad supplicium lecti sunt, Of the remaining multitude every tenth man was doomed to punishment by lot.

12. Adjectives and pronouns are frequently put partitively in the neuter gender and followed by the genitive of their noun, instead of agreeing with it in case; as, Multum operae, Much attention (study). Minus viae, Less of the journey. Dimidium pecuniae, Half the money. Hoc litterarum, This letter. Hoc solatii, This consolation. Ad id locorum, To that time. *Quid causae est? What is the reason? Also in the plural: Subita belli, The surprises of war. Summa pectoris, The upper part of the chest. Occulta templi, The recesses of the temple. Strata viarum saxea, The stone pavement of the streets. (Compare Lessons XVIII. – XXIII.)

13. An adjective used partitively and followed by the genitive plural of the genus or entire number commonly assumes the gender of that genitive; as, Animalium alia ratione expertia sunt, alia ratione utentia, Of animals, some are destitute of reason and others enjoying it. Multae arborum meâ manû sunt satae, Many of these trees were planted by my hand.

14. When a partitive is followed by the genitive singular of a collective noun, it takes the gender of the individuals implied in it; as,

* But this can only be done in the Nom. and Acc. In the remaining cases the adjective agrees with the noun; as, multa opera (Abl.), huic solatio, minoræ ciâ, harum litterarum. (Compare Lesson XXXVIII. A. 6.)

Prīmus Romāni genēris, The first of the Roman nation. Ceteri nostri ordinis, The rest of our order. Nec est quisquam gentis ullius, Nor is there any one of any nation.

15. Possessive pronouns, being considered the representatives of personal pronouns in the genitive, sometimes take another pronoun, adjective, or participle in the genitive; as, Nostra ipsorum amicitia, Our own friendship. In unius mea salute, On my safety alone. Nūmen meum absentis, My name while absent. Suo solius periculo, At his own peril. Vestrae paucorum laudes, The praises of you few.

16. In exclamations and addresses the adjective is sometimes in the vocative instead of the nominative, and vice versa; as, Quo morituro ruis? Where are you rushing to, dying man? Rufe, mihi frustra credite amice! O Rufus! in vain believed my friend. Projice tela manu, sanguis meus! Cast away your weapons, my son! Novus anne, veni! Come, new year, come!

17. Adjectives of the neuter gender, singular and plural, are sometimes used as adverbs. E. g. Id multum faciebam, I practised that a good deal. Qui multa deos venerātī sunt, Who besought the gods much and earnestly. Inde Romam, recens conditā, commigravit, He thence emigrated to Rome, then recently founded. Dormiuit altum, He slept profoundly.

Lesson XXXVIII. — PENSUM DUODEQUADRAGESIMUM.

A. RULE. — Adjectives, adjective pronouns, and participles are often employed independently, especially in the plural, either with or without a noun understood.
E. g.

Bóni, máli, dócti, dívites, paú-peres; amántes. The good, the bad, the learned, the rich, the poor; lovers.

Méi, túi, súi, nóstri, véstri. My, thy, his, our, your friends, men, &c.

Bónum, málum, vêrum, jústum. The good, the bad, the true, the just.

Bóna, mála, vêra, fálsa, acérba, indígna. Good, bad, true, false, bitter, unworthy things.

REMARKS.

1. With plurals denoting persons homines is commonly supplied.* So with omnes, pauci, plerique, nonnulli, &c. But the possessives mei, tui, &c. have reference to amici, milités (men, soldiers), cives (citizens). With immortales the word dii is understood.

2. Adjectives of the singular number denoting persons usually have vir or homo expressed with them; as, vir doctus, bonus, justus; homo pauper, dives, improbus, &c. They sometimes, however, appear alone in all the cases. E. g. Sapiens, dives, socius, nupta, a wise man, a rich man, an ally, a married woman. Quid interest inter doctum et rudem? What is the difference between an educated and an ignorant man? Quid minus libero dignum? What can be more unworthy of a free man?

3. With adjectives denoting objects, various words are understood; as, Dextra, sinistra (sc. manus), the right hand, left hand. Ferina, agnina, bubilla, porcina (sc. caro), Venison, lamb, beef, pork. Calula,

* And not unfrequently expressed, as in Homines Románi, Roman men. Homines adolescentuli, young men, &c.

frigida (sc. aqua), Warm, cold water. Tertiāna, quartāna (sc. febris), The tertian, quartan fever. Decumāna (sc. pars), The tenth part. Primae (sc. partes), The first part or rôle. Hiberna, aestiva (sc. castra), The winter, summer quarters. In Tusculāno (sc. praedo), At the country-seat Tusculanum. Brevi (sc. tempore), In a short time; and also ex quo, ex eo, ex illo (sc. tempore, which is frequently understood), &c., &c.

4. Of adjectives used substantively, those of the neuter gender are the most common. The singular denotes either an abstract quality or an individual act or object; as, bonum, malum, verum, the good, bad, true (or something good, bad, true); commune, dictum, factum, something in common, something said, done (= a saying, deed). So the pronouns hoc, illud, quid, aliquid; and quantum, tantum, multum, &c.

5. The plural of neuter adjectives used substantively indicates a diversity of things of the same quality; as, bona, mala, vera, falsa, multa, omnia, reliqua, good, bad, true, false, many, all, the remaining things (the rest, remainder). Dicta, facta, things said, done, i. e. words uttered, actions. So also haec, illa, quae, aliqua, these, those, which, some things.*

6. Neuter adjectives can thus be used substantively in the nominative and accusative only. In the remaining cases the feminine of the adjective with res is commonly employed, to prevent ambiguity. Thus cujus rei, hac de re, alicui rei, ulla in re, bonarum rerum, omnibus in rebus,† &c.

7. Adjectives used substantively may have other adjectives in agreement with them; as, meus natalis (sc. dies), My birthday. Paternus inimicus, A paternal enemy. Nova nupta, A newly married woman. Summum bonum, The chief good. Praeclārum responsum, A famous reply, Prāva facta,‡ Depraved actions.

8. A number of words originally adjectives have acquired the rank of substantives; as, juvenis, adolescens, amicus, familiaris, comes, victinus, statuārius, artifex, index, particeps; summa (a sum), confluens (junction of rivers); Grammatica, Ithetica, Statuāria (sc. ars), &c.

9. Additional Examples of adjectives used as substantives are:—Fortes creantur fortibus et bonis, The brave are made for the brave and good. Plerique vana mirantur, The majority of men are captivated by vanity.§ Erubescunt pudici etiam impudica loqui, The chaste|| blush even to utter unchaste things. Aliunt multum legendum

* With many of these neuters the English words thing, things may be supplied. Sometimes, however, the sense requires other words, such as place, part, respect, property, &c.

† This use of res extends to all the cases, and the Romans often say res ea, nulla res, rem aliquam, rem difficilem, res bonae, malae, &c.

‡ Participles of the neuter gender sometimes take an adverb instead of an adjective; as, bene, crudeliter facta, acute responsa, facete dictum, &c.

§ The plural of these neuter adjectives is frequently rendered by the singular.

|| In general propositions including both sexes, the adjective is always masculine; as here fortes, plerique, pudici, &c.

esse non multa, They say that we ought to read much, not many things. Quis rem tam veterem pro certo affirmet? Who can assert a thing so old as a certainty? Idcirco abestis, ut in tuto sitis, You are absent in order to be safe. Amicōrum omnia sunt communia, Friends have everything in common. Ita comprobābis divina prae dicta, Thus you will confirm the divine prediction. Nihil addo de meo,* I add nothing of my own.

The Pole:	Polōnus, i, m.
The Roman.	Romānus, i, m.
The Greek.	Graecus, Grājus, i, m.
The Arab.	Arabs, is, m.
The Athenian.	Atheniensis, is, m.
The Syrian.	Syrus, Syrius, i, m.

B. The patrials or gentiles of the Latin language are either derived from the proper names of countries, or else they are themselves the roots for the formation of the latter.

1. The majority of patrials are primitives, from which the name of the country is formed by annexing ia to the root;† as, Arabs — Arabia, Arcas — Arcadia, Gallus — Gallia, Itālus — Italia, Thrax — Thracia.

2. The patrials derived from names of countries are generally adjectives, with one of the terminations ānus, as (gen. ātis), ensis (ien-sis), īnus (ēnus), īcus (īacus, aicus), and ius. E. g. Roma — Romānus, Arpinum — Arpinas, Athenae — Atheniensis, Thebae — Thebaicus, Aegyptus — Aegyptiacus, Tarentum — Tarentinus, Cyprus — Cyprius.

3. From patrial adjectives in us, a, um, adverbs are formed, by changing that termination into ē. The following may serve as examples: —

	ADJECTIVE.	ADVERB.
Spanish.	{ Hispaniensis, } { Hispanicus, }	Hispanicē.
Italian.	Italicus,	Italicē.
Polish.	Polonicus,	Polonicē.
Russian.	Russicus,	Russicē.
Latin.	Latinus,	Latinē.
Greek.	Graecus,	Graecē.
Arabic.	Arabicus,	Arabicē.
Syriac.	Syriacus,	Syriacē.
Persian.	Persicus,	Persicē.
Egyptian.	Aegyptiacus,	Aegyptiacē.

* The neuter singular of all the possessives (meum, tuum, suum, nostrum, vestrum) is thus employed to denote possession, like the English "mine," "my own," &c.

† The root of a noun is found in the genitive singular by separating the case-termination; as Arabs, gen. Arab-is; Arcas, gen. Arcad-is; Gallus, gen. Gall-i; Thrax, gen. Thrac-is, &c.

Sanscrit.	{ Sanscritus, Sanskriticus, }	Sanskritē.
Turkish.	Turcicus,	Turcicē.
Are you a Roman?	Esne tū Romānus?
No, indeed, I am an American.	Mīnime véro; Americānus sum.
Is he a shoemaker?	Sutórne est ille?

A good, excellent, weak memory.	Mēmōria tenax (-ācis), singulāris, infirma.
To have a good memory.	Valēre * memoriā.
To have a bad memory.	Pārum (mīnus) valēre memoriā.
To have an excellent memory.	Multum valēre memoriā.
Blue.	Caerulēus, violācēus, glaucus, a, um.
Black.	Ater, atra, atrum; nīger, gra, grum.
To have, to be furnished or endowed with anything.	Praeditum, instructum, ornatum esse ALIQUA RE.
He has an excellent memory.	{ Memóriā singulāri praeditus est. Múltum válet memoriā.
She has blue eyes.	{ Óculis glaucis ornata est. Caerulea† est.
He has a small mouth (is a man of small mouth).	{ Ore párvulo instructus est. Vir est ōris pávri.
Have you a good memory?	{ Valēsne memoriā? Praeditusne es bonā memoriā?
I have an excellent memory.	{ Múltum váleo memoriā. Singulāri memoriā instructus sum.
No, I have a bad (weak) memory.	{ Immo véro párum váleo memoriā. Memoriae infirmae sum.
To play, sport.	Lūdo, ēre, ūi, ūsum (NEUT.).
To hear, listen.	Audire, auscultāre.
Instead of, in place or in lieu of (any one).	{ Loco, in locum ALICUJUS. Vice, in vicem, vicem REI or ALICUJUS. Pro, with the Abl.

* From vāleo, ēre, ūi, —, "I am sound, strong," with the ablative "with respect to."

† Caeruleus, used substantively, a blue-eyed man, and the fem. here a woman.

Instead or in place of my father.	Lóco pátris, in vícem pátris, pro pátre.
Instead of salt, sugar, &c.	Sális, sáccchari více.
Instead of me, thee, us, you.	Méam, tuám, nóstram, véstram vícem.
Instead of him, them.	In lócum (vícem) éjus, eórum.

C. Obs. The English instead of, when it relates to persons or things in the sense of in lieu of, in the place of, is in Latin expressed by loco, vice, or pro; but when it limits the meaning of a verb, the formulas tantum abest ut . . . ut, non modo non . . . sed etiam, magis (potius) quam, and quum debeam * must be employed.

Do you play instead of studying (rather than study, when you ought to study)?	{ Operámne dás lúdo mágis (pótius) quam lítteris?
I study instead of playing.	{ Lúdísne, quum lítteris studère débéas?
So far from playing, I am studying.	{ Óperam dô lítteris, pótius quam lúdo.
I not only do not play, but I even study.	{ Tántum ábest, ut lúdam, ut óperam dém lítteris.

This boy is so far from listening, that he even talks.	{ Púer íste lóquitur, quum auscultáre débeat.
To listen or attend to any one.	{ Tántum ábest, ut púer íste aúdiat, ut loquátur.
To listen or attend to anything.	{ Púer íste nôn módo nôn aúdit, sed etiam lóquitur.
Not to listen to (care for) anything.	{ Audíre aliquem.
Whom are you hearing (listening to)?	{ Auscultáre alicui. †
I am listening to the speaker.	{ Alicui aures dare.
Will you listen to (i. e. obey) me?	{ Audíre aliquid.
	{ Observáre aliquid.
	{ Non curáre aliquid.
	{ Quém aúdis?
	{ Cui dás aúres?
	{ Oratórem aúdio.
	{ Aúres dô oratóri.
	{ Visne míhi auscultáre?

* Tantum abest, ut . . . ut, I am so far from . . . that rather. Non modo non . . . sed etiam, not only not . . . but even. Magis (potius) . . . quam, rather than. Quum (cum) debeam, when I ought. The student should notice that the ut of the first formula, and the quum of the last, require the subjunctive. See the examples.

† Auscultare conveys the secondary notion of deference or obedience.

Do you listen to what the teacher tells you ?	Audisne (observāsne), quod (quae) praeceptor tibi dicat (impēret) ?
I do listen to it.	Audio (observo).
He listens to what I tell him.	{ Mihi auscultat. { Omnia quae ei dicam, observat.
That which.	Id quod, ea quae.
What (= that which).	Quod, quae.
He does not listen to (observe) what the master tells him.	Quae praeceptor ei impērat, nōn cūrat.
To correct.	{ Emendo, āre, āvi, ātum. { Corrigo, ěre, rexi, rectum. { (ALIQUID).
To take.	{ Sūmo, ěre, mpsi, mptum. { Cāpio, ěre, cēpi, captum. { (ALIQUID).

Lesson XXXIX. — PENSUM UNDEQUADRAGESIMUM.

OF THE AGREEMENT OF RELATIVES.

A. The relative qui, quae, quod agrees with its antecedent in gender and number, but its case depends upon the construction of the clause introduced by it. E. g.

Ego, qui (quae) lēgo, scribo, loquor.	I who read, write, speak.
Tū, quem (quā) dūligo.	Thou whom I cherish.
Puer, quem vidisti, de quō audivisti, cūjus tutor es.	The boy whom you saw, of whom you have heard, whose guardian you are.
Pueri, quōs vidisti, de quibus audivisti, quōrum tutor es.	The boys whom you saw, of whom you have heard, whose guardian you are.
Flūmen, quōd appellātur Tāmēsis.	The river which is called the Thames.
Omnia, quāc tibi dixi, vēra sunt.	All that I have told you is true.

REMARKS.

1. The word to which the relative refers, and which it serves to limit and explain, is called its Antecedent. This may be either a noun, a personal, determinative, demonstrative, or indefinite pronoun, or an entire sentence.

2. The determinatives is and idem, and the demonstratives hic, ille, iste, &c., are called the correlatives of qui. They are either employed adjectively in agreement with the antecedent, or as substantives constituting the antecedent; e. g. Loquimur de iis amicis, quos novit vita communis, We are speaking of those friends, which occur in ordinary life. Nam cum, qui palam est adversarius, facile cavendo vitare possis, For him, who is openly your adversary, you can easily avoid by being on your guard.

3. The construction of the correlative pronominals tantus quantus, talis qualis, and tot quot, is the same as that of is qui, and the remarks on the latter may in general be applied to them also.

4. The relative qui may represent any one of the three persons of either number, and its verb agrees in person with the antecedent; as, Ego, qui te confirmo, ipse me non possum, I, who am consoling you, am unable to console myself. Tu es is, qui me sepiissime ornasti, You are the man who has honored me the oftenest. Nobis quidem, qui te amamus, erit gratum, To us at any rate, who love you, it will be agreeable. Etiam is, qui omnia tenet, faret ingeniis, Even he, who now has the control of everything, favors genius. Fere libenter homines id, quod volunt, credunt, Men are always ready to believe what they desire.

5. The clause of the antecedent commonly precedes that of the relative; but this order is frequently inverted in Latin. E. g. Male se res habet, cum, quod virtute effici debet, id tentatur pecuniâ, There is a bad state of things, when that which ought to be effected by virtue is attempted with money. Quam quisque novit artem, in hac se exerceat, Let every one practise the art he may have learnt. Hoc non concedo, ut, quibus rebus gloriemini in vobis, easdem in aliis reprehendatis, I do not concede to you the right of reprehending in others what you boast of in yourselves.

6. The noun, to which the relative refers, is commonly expressed but once, and in the leading clause. Sometimes, however, it is repeated with the relative, and agrees with it in gender, number, and case; as, Tantum bellum, tam diurnum, tam longe lateque dispersum, quo bello omnes gentes premebantur, So great, so long, so wide-spread a war, by which all nations were oppressed. Cæsar intellexit diem instare, quo die frumentum militibus metiri oporteret, Cæsar understood that the day was approaching, on which the soldiers were to receive their allowance of corn.

7. The noun is sometimes expressed with the relative only, and understood in the leading clause. This is especially the case when the logical order of the clauses is inverted, as in Rem. 5. E. g. Accu- sālor non ferendus est is, qui, quod in altero vitium reprehendit, in eo ipso deprehenditur, He cannot be admitted as accuser who is himself caught in the very vice he reprehends in another. Bestiae, in quo loco natae sunt, ex eo se non commōcent, Wild animals do not remove from the locality in which they were born. Quantā vi civitates libertatem expetunt, tantā regna reges defendunt, Kings defend monarchies with the same vehemence with which states seek their liberty.

8. The antecedent is sometimes entirely suppressed, and the relative qui, quod stands in the sense of "he who," "what." E. g. Qui (= is, qui) e nuce nucleum esse vult, frangit nucem, He who wishes the nut to become a kernel breaks the nut. Est profecto deus, qui, quae (= ea quae) nos gerimus, auditque et videt, There is certainly a God, who hears and sees whatever we are doing. Maximum ornamentum amicitiae tollit, qui (= is, qui) ex ea tollit verecundiam, He robs friendship of its greatest ornament who robs it of decorum and respect. So, Sunt qui dicunt, There are those who say. Sunt quos juvat, There are men whom it delights. Nos imitatur, quos cuique risum est, We imitate whomsoever it pleases us. Non habeo quod scribam, I have nothing to write.*

9. The antecedent sometimes assumes the case of the relative, and rice versa. This is called attraction. E. g. Naucratem (= Naucratis) quem convenire volui, in navi non erat, Naucratis, whom I wanted to find, was not in the ship. Urbem (= urbs), quam statuo, vestra est, The city which I am building is yours. Hac, quā (= quam) diximus, aetate, At the age (of life) which we have mentioned. Video me desertum, a quibus (= ab iis, quibus) minime conveniebat, I see myself deserted by those to whom it was least becoming (to desert me). Judice quo (= quem) nosti populo, With the people, which you know, for a judge.

Wet, moist.

Humīdus, ūlus, madīdus, a, um.

To wet, moisten.

{ Madefacio, ēre, feci, factum.
Humecto, āre, āvi, ātum.
 (ALICUID).

To show, point out.

Monstro, āre, āvi, ātum (ALICUI ALICUID).

To show, let see.

Ostendo, ēre, ndi, nsum (ALICUI ALICUID).

Will you show me your gold ribbons?

Visne mihi ostendere taēnias tuās aūreas?

I am willing to show them to you.

Vēro, vōlo tibi ēas ostendere.

Are ye willing to show us the way?

Vultisne monstrāre nobis viām?

* So also commonly quisquis and quicunque; as, Quidquid non licet, nefas putare debemus, We ought to consider wrong whatever is unlawful. In quascunque partes velint, proficisci licet, They may go in whatever direction they please.

Certainly we are willing.

Sic est, domine, cogito.

* The Roman subdivisions of cousinship are: Patruelis, m. & f., the son or daughter of a paternal uncle. Amatinus, i, m. (fem. -a), maternal uncle's or paternal aunt's child. Sobrinus, i, m. (fem. -a), a second-cousin.

† Lēvir = mariti frater, the husband's brother.

What do they intend to do? Quid facere cōgitant?
 They are intending to write letters? Epistolas conscribere cōgitant.

To know. Scīo, ire, īci, itum.
 Not to know (to be ignorant). Nescire, non (haud) scire.

To swim. { Nō, nāre, nāvi, —.
 { Nāto, āre, āvi, ātum.
 To be able (to have the power or opportunity). { Possum, posse, potūi, —.
 { Quēo, ire, īvi (li), itum.

B. Obs. Possum is to have the physical power, or the means or influence to do anything, and is used in sentences of every kind. Queo is to have the ability or qualifications, and is only put in sentences containing a negation (non queo, nequeo). Queo is anomalous, and its present tense is as follows:—

PRES. INDIC.	PRES. SUBJ.
SING. Quēo, quis, quāt,	SING. Quēam, quēas, quēāt,
PLUR. Quimus, quītis, quēunt.	PLUR. Quēamus, quēātis, quēant.
Does this boy know Latin?	Num puer iste scit Latīne (līngūam Latīnam)?
He does not know it.	Nōn scit. Haud scit. Nēscit.
Or can he read French?	An lēgere pōtest Francogāllice?
He cannot.	Non pōtest. Nēquit.
Can you write an English letter?	Potēsne (scīsne) scrībere epistolam Anglice?
I can write one.	Pōssum. Scīo.
I cannot (am not able) to do it.	Fācere nōn pōssum (nōn quēo, nēqueo).

Lesson XL. — PENSUM QUADRAGESIMUM.

THE AGREEMENT OF RELATIVES CONTINUED.

A. 1. When the relative refers to two or more nouns, it stands in the plural, and assumes the gender of an adjective under similar circumstances (cf. Lesson XXII. B, and Lesson XXXVII. A. 10). E. g.

Pater ejus et mater, qui mortui sunt, His father and mother, who are dead. Arbitrum habebimus Civilem et Velëdam, apud quos pacta sancientur, We shall have Civilis and Velela (a woman) as arbitrators, in whose presence the compact will be ratified. Favent pietati fideique dii, per quae populus Romanus ad tantum fastigii venit*, The gods bestow their favor upon piety and faith, by which the Roman people has attained such eminent distinction. Duilius delectabatur crebro funali et tibicine, quae sibi nullo exemplo privatus sumpserat.

2. When the antecedent is a collective noun, the relative sometimes assumes the gender and number of the individuals composing it. E. g. Caesar equitatum omnem praemittit, qui videant, quas in partes hostes iter faciant, Caesar sends ahead all his cavalry, to see (lit. who may or might see) in what direction the enemy is pursuing his way. Academia, a quibus nunquam dictum est, aut calorem, aut saporem, aut sonum nullum esse, The Academy, by which (i. e. by the persons composing it) it was never maintained, that either heat or smell or sound were nonentities.

3. If the antecedent is a proper name in apposition with a generic term, the relative may agree with either. E. g. Helvetii continentur flumine Rheno, qui (i. e. Rhenus) agrum Helvetium a Germanis dividit, The Helvetii are bounded by the river Rhine, which divides the Helvetian territory from that of the Germans. Caesar ad flumen Scallem, quod (sc. flumen) influit in Mosam, ire constituit, Caesar resolved to advance towards the river Scheldt, which empties into the Moselle.

* Cf. Lesson XXII. B. 3.

4. If a noun descriptive of the antecedent is added to the relative, it agrees with that noun in preference to the antecedent. E. g. Eodem anno Cumæ, quam Graeci tum urbem tenebant, capiuntur, Cumæ, a city which the Greeks then occupied, was taken in the same year. Accidit, ut luna plena esset, qui dies maritimos aestus maximos in Oceano efficere consuevit, It happened to be full moon, which day usually gave rise to the highest tide in the ocean. Oppius negotia procurat Egnatii Rufi, quo ego uno equite Romano familiarissime utor, Oppius is managing the affairs of Egnatius Rufus, the only Roman knight with whom I am on terms of intimacy.

5. An adjective, qualifying the antecedent, is sometimes joined to the relative, and agrees with it in preference to the antecedent. E. g. Verres mitti ad Antiochum regem, rogatum vasa ea quae pulcherrima apud eum viderat, Verres sent to King Antiochus, to ask him for the handsomest vases which he had seen at his residence. Themistocles de servis suis quem habuit fidelissimum, ad Xerzem misit, Themistocles sent to Xerxes one of his servants, whom he regarded the most faithful. Consul, qui unus supererat, moritur, The only surviving consul is on his death-bed. This is the common construction when the adjective is a superlative, a comparative, or a numeral.

6. When, in connection with the verb sum, or a verb of naming, calling, esteeming,* &c., the relative clause contains a noun of a different gender from the antecedent, the relative may agree either with that noun or with the antecedent. E. g. Est genus quoddam hominum, quod Helotes vocatur, There is a class of men (which is) called the Helots. Domicilia conjuncta, quas urbes dicimus, Assemblages of dwelling-houses, which we call cities. Thebæ ipsæ, quod Boeotiae caput est, Thebes itself, which is the capital of Boeotia. Flumen, qui provinciae ejus finis erat, The river, which was the boundary line of that province.

7. The relative sometimes agrees with an antecedent implied in a possessive pronoun, an adjective, or in the context generally. E. g. Scauri dicendi genus ad senatoriam sententiam, cujus ille erat princeps, vel maxime aptum videbatur, Scaurus's style of oratory seemed to be most admirably adapted to senatorial speaking, of which (i. e. of the senate) he was the princeps. Illud quidem nostrum consilium jure laudandum est, qui . . . noluerim, That plan of mine is justly entitled to praise, who was unwilling, &c. Veiens bellum exortum, quibus Sabini arma conjunxerant, The Veian war broke out, with whom the Sabines had united their arms.

8. The neuters quod and quae sometimes refer to a noun of a different gender, especially to res. E. g. Sumptus ne parcas ullâ in re, quod ad valetudinem opus sit, Do not spare expense in anything which may be necessary for your health. Otium et abundantia earum rerum, quae prima mortales ducunt, Leisure and an abundance of those things, which men deem of the first importance. In sermonibus, quae nec possunt scribi, nec scribenda sunt, In conversations, which are neither to be written, nor can be written.

* Cf. Lesson XXXIV. C.

† I. e. with the Veii implied in the adjective Veiens.

9. When the antecedent is an entire sentence, or part of one, the relative is the neuter quod or id quod. E. g. Conclamat omnis multitudo Gallorum . . . quod facere in eo consuerunt, cujus orationem approbant, All the Gauls shouted, — a thing which they were accustomed to do to one, whose harangue they approved. Timoleon, id quod difficilius putatur, multo sapientius tulit secundam, quam adversam fortunam, Timoleon (did) what is considered the more difficult of the two, — he bore prosperity with wiser moderation than adversity. Si nos, id quod maxime debet, nostra patria delectat, If our country, as it especially ought to do, inspires us with delight.

10. The relative is sometimes employed idiomatically to denote a quality or species, in the sense of the English such, as, in consideration of, &c. It is thus used either alone or in connection with is or idem. E. g. Quae tua est prudentia, or quā es prudentiā, Such is your prudence (in consideration of your prudence).* Ego is in Dionysium sum, quem tu me esse vis, I am towards Dionysius as (or what) you wish me to be. Nos ii sumus, qui esse debemus, id est, studio digni ac litteris nostris, We are such as (or what) we ought to be, that is, worthy of our zeal and letters. So also, Quae tua natura est, In consideration of your natural kindness. Quod tuum est iudicium de hominibus, Such is your knowledge of human character. Qui illius in te amor fuit, In consideration of his regard for you. Quā est humanitate Caesar, Such is the humanity of Caesar.

11. Relative adjectives and adverbs follow the construction of the relative pronoun. E. g. Non sunt tanti ulla merita, quanta insolentia hominis, quantumque fastidium, No merits are of so much account as (to counterbalance) the insolence and haughtiness of man. Nemo orator tam multa scripsit, quam multa sunt nostra, No orator has written as much as I have. Quot orationum genera esse diximus, totidem oratorum reperiuntur, There are (found) just as many of orators, as we have mentioned styles of oratory. Quales in republica principes sunt, tales reliqui solent esse cives, As are the leaders of a republic, so are the rest of the citizens wont to be. Quam diu animus remanet in nobis, tam diu sensus et vita remanet, Sensation and life remain in us as long as the spirit remains. Crocodilus parit ova, quanta anseres, The crocodile lays eggs as large as geese.

12. The Latin relative frequently assumes the force of a demonstrative, and becomes equivalent to the English and this (these), since this, although this, &c.; as, Quae cum ita sint, Since these things are so. Res loquitur ipsa, quae semper valet plurimum, The thing speaks for itself, and this is always the most powerful argument. Magna vis est conscientiae, quam qui negligunt, se ipsi indicant, Great is the power of conscience, hence those who disregard it, betray themselves.

* Equivalent to pro tuā prudentiā, which also occurs in the same sense.

Oculorum est in nobis sensus acerrimus, quibus sapientiam non cernimus,
Our eyesight is the keenest of all our senses, and yet wisdom is not discerned by it.

Lesson XLI.—PENSUM UNUM ET QUADRAGESIMUM.

OF THE COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES.

A. The property or quality denoted by an adjective may be attributed to an object either absolutely or relatively. This difference has given rise to several distinct forms of one and the same adjective, called its Degrees of Comparison.

1. That form of the adjective by which the quality denoted by it is attributed to an object or class of objects, without any reference to other objects possessed of the same quality, is called the Positive degree. E.g. Vir audax, a bold man; mel dulce, the sweet honey; montes alti, high mountains. This is to be regarded as its general and fundamental form.

2. When the quality denoted by an adjective is attributed to an object or class of objects in a greater degree than to another or to others, the form of the adjective expressing this relation is called the Comparative degree. E.g. Vir audacior, a bolder man; mel dulcius, the sweeter honey; montes altiores, higher mountains.

3. When the quality inherent in a number of objects is attributed to one or more of them in a higher degree than to all the rest, the form of the adjective expressing this relation is said to be in the Superlative degree. E.g. Vir audacissimus, the boldest man (of a certain number of men); mel dulcissimum, the sweetest honey; montes altissimi, the highest mountains.

We have thus found three forms of adjectives:—the Positive, the Comparative, and the Superlative.

B. Comparison in its widest sense comprehends the relations of equality and of inequality. The relation of inequality is subdivided into that of inferiority or of superiority.

1. The relation of equality is in Latin expressed by the positive with tam quam, aeque ac (atque), pariter ac, &c.; as, Tam felix, quam bonus, As happy as good. Duo montes aequè alti, Two mountains equally high. Aequè altus, atque longus, As high as long.

2. The relation of inferiority is likewise expressed by the positive form of the adjective, which becomes comparative by minus quam, less than, and superlative by minime, least. E.g. Minus felix, quam bonus, Less happy than good. Minime felix, Least happy.

3. The relation of superiority is sometimes indicated by magis quam, more than, and maxime, most; as, Magis idoneus quam tu, More competent than you. Maxime idoneus, The most competent.

But it is more commonly expressed by those peculiar forms of the adjective already known as the Comparative and Superlative.

REGULAR COMPARISON.

C. The comparative degree is formed by adding the terminations ior, m. & f., and ius, n., to the root of the positive *; and the superlative by adding issimus, issima, issimum. Thus:—

POSITIVE.	COMPARATIVE.	SUPERLATIVE.
Longus,	longior,	longissimus;	long, longer, longest.
Brevis,	brevior,	brevissimus;	short, shorter, shortest.
Audax,	audacior,	audacissimus;	bold, bolder, boldest.
Felix,	felicior,	felicissimus;	happy, happier, happiest.
Iners,	inertior,	inertissimus;	sluggish, more sluggish, &c.
Diligens,	diligentior,	diligentissimus;	diligent, more diligent, &c.
Doctus,	doctior,	doctissimus;	learned, more learned, &c.

ANOMALOUS COMPARISON.

D. Some adjectives are irregular in their mode of comparison.

1. Adjectives in er form their superlative by simply adding rimus. E. g.

Acer,	acrior,	acerrimus;	sharp, sharper, sharpest.
Celeber,	celebrior,	celeberrimus;	distinguished, more d., most dis.
Pauper,	pauperior,	pauperrimus;	poor, poorer, poorest.
Pulcher,	pulchrior,	pulcherrimus;	beautiful, more beautiful, most b.
Vetus, †	——,	veterrimus;	old, older, oldest.
Nuperus,	——,	nuperrimus;	recent, more recent, most recent.

2. The following in ilis form their superlative by adding rimus to the root:—

Facilis,	facilior,	facillimus;	easy, easier, easiest.
Gracilis,	gracilior,	gracillimus;	slender, more slender, most slen.
Humilis,	humilior,	humillimus;	low, lower, lowest.
Imbecillis,	imbecillior,	imbecillimus;	feeble, feebler, feeblest.
Similis,	similior,	simillimus ‡;	like, more like, most like.

3. Compounds in dicus, ficus, and völus compare from a participial form in ens. As, —

* This root is found from the genitive singular by dropping its case-termination; as, longus — long-i, brevis — brev-is, audax — audac-is, felix — felic-is, iners — inert-is, diligens — diligent-is.

† The original form of this was veter; and the superlative of nuperus is derived from the adverb nuper.

‡ So the compounds difficilis and dissimilis. But all other adjectives in ilis have issimus.

Maledicus,	maledicentior,	maledicentissimus;	slanderous.
Munificus,	munificentior,	munificentissimus;	munificent.
Benevölus,	benevolentior,	benevolentissimus;	benevolent.

So honorificus, magnificus, maleficus, mirificus; malevölus.

4. The following derive their comparatives and superlatives from a different root:—

Bonus,	melior,	optimus;	good, better, best.
Malus,	pejor,	pessimus;	bad, worse, worst.
Magnus,	major,	maximus;	great, greater, greatest.
Parvus,	minor,	minimus;	small, smaller, smallest.
Multus,	plūs,*	plurimus;	much, more, most.

5. Several adjectives have an irregular superlative, and some a double form of the comparative or superlative:

Dexter,	dexterior,	dextimus;	to the right.
Dives,	{ divitior, ditior,	{ divitissimus; ditimus;	rich.
Extera, f.	exterior,	{ extlmus; extrēmus;	outward.
Juvenis,	{ juvenior, junior,	———; †	young.
Infērus,	inferior,	{ inflmus; imus;	low.
Postēra, f.	posterior,	{ postrēmus; postūmus;	hind.
Supērus,	superior,	{ suprēmus; summus;	high.

6. The indeclinable nēquam, bad, has nēquior, nēquissimus, and frugi, frugal, frugalior, frugalissimus.

DEFECTIVE COMPARISON.

E. The comparison of some adjectives is defective; i. e. they occur only in some of the forms of comparison.

1. The following are not used in the positive, which is either entirely obsolete, or only represented by adverbs or prepositions:—

COMPARATIVE. SUPERLATIVE.			POSITIVE.
Citerior,	citlmus,	nearer;	citer , obs. citra , this side).
Deterior,	deterrimus,	worse;	(from deter , not used).
Interior,	intlmus,	inner;	(from intus , adv., within).
Ocior,	ocissimus,	faster;	(from the Greek ὀκός).

* This form is properly the neuter comparative of multum.

† This superlative is minimus natus, as that of senex, old, is maximus natus (= the greatest by birth). So the comparatives minor natus and major natus, instead of juvenior and senior.

Potior,	potissimus,	preferable ; (from pōtis , obsolete).
Prior,	primus,	former ; (from prae , prep., before).
Proptior,	proximus,	nearer ; (from prope , adv., near).
Uterior,	ultimus,	further ; (from ultra , adv., farther.)

2. The comparative of the following adjectives and participles seldom or never occurs : —

Apricius,	apricissimus ;	sunny .
Bellus,	bellissimus ;	pretty .
Comis,	comissimus ;	affable .
Consultus,	consultissimus ;	proficient .
Diversus,	diversissimus ;	different .
Falsus,	falsissimus ;	false .
Inclutus,	inclutissimus ;	renowned .
Invictus,	invictissimus ;	unconquerable .
Invitus,	invitissimus ;	unwilling .
Novus,	novissimus ;	new .
Nup̄erus,	nuperrimus ;	recent .
Par,	parissimus ;	equal .
Persuāsus,	persuasissimus ;	persuaded .
Sacer,	sacerrimus ;	sacred .
Vetus,	veterrimus ;	old .

3. The following want the superlative : —

Adolescens,	adolescētor ;	young .
Agrestis,	agrestior ;	rural .
Alacer,	alacrior ;	sprightly .
Arcānus,	arcānior ;	secret .
Caecus,	caecior ;	blind .
Declivis,	declivior ;	steep .
Dēsēs,	dēsior ;	sluggish .
Diuturnus,	diuturnior,	long .
Jejūnus,	jejūnior,	fasting .
Juvēnis,	jūnior ;	young .
Longinquus,	longinquior ;	distant .
Opimus,	opimior ;	opulent .
Proclivis,	proclivior ;	sloping .
Prōnus,	prōnior ;	inclined forward .
Propinquus,	propinquior ;	near .
Salutāris,	salutārior ;	salutary .
Satis,	sator ; *	better .
Sātūr,	sātūrior ;	sated .
Sēnex,	sēnior ;	old .
Secus,	sequior ;	inferior .
Silvester,	silvestrior ;	woody .
Sinister,	sinisterior ;	left .
Supinus,	supinior ;	supine .

* Sator and sequior (neut. sequius or secius) are isolated comparatives, which may be referred to the adverbs satis and secus.

4. The superlative is likewise wanting in the majority of verbal adjectives in bilis, ilis, alis, and in many of those in ilis.

F. The form of many adjectives does not admit of simple comparison, and these require magis, maxime. Such are:—

1. Those ending in us preceded by a vowel; as idoneus, fit; dubius, doubtful; vacuus, empty; Comp. magis idoneus; Sup. maxime idoneus.*

2. Participles in dus† and verbals in bundus; ‡ as amandus, mori-bundus, ready to die.

3. Adjectives ending in icus, ivus, inus, imus, orus, and many in osus and entus; § as, modicus, moderate; fugitivus, fugitive; matutinus, early; legitimus, lawful; canorus, singing.

4. The following, partly on account of their form, and partly on account of their signification:—

Almus,	gracious.	Impos,	not master of.
Blaesus,	lispings.	Lacer,	maimed.
Balbus,	stammering.	Mancus,	crippled.
Cadūcus,	falling.	Mediocris,	inferior.
Calvus,	bald.	Mēmōr,	mindful.
Cānus,	white.	Mirus,	wonderful.
Cicur,	tame.	Mūtilus,	mutilated.
Claudus,	lame.	Mūtus,	mute.
Curvus,	crooked.	Nefastus,	wrong.
Compos,	possessed of.	Par,	equal.
Egēnus,	needy.	Dispar,	unequal.
Fērus,	wild.	Sospes,	safe.
Gnārus,	expert.	Trux,	grim.
Jejūnus,	hungry.	Vulgāris,	common.

G. Many adjectives admit of no comparison of any kind, from the nature of their signification. Such are:—

1. Those denoting the material of which anything is made, possession, or descent; e. g. aurēus, ferrēus, lignēus; Romanus, Atheniensis; paternus, patrius.

2. Those denoting a definite quantity or time; e. g. unīcus,

* But not those ending in the monosyllabic quus and guis, which are regularly compared; as, antiquus, antiquior, antiquissimus; pinguis, pinguior, pinguissimus. So also tenuis, tenuior, tenuissimus, and a few of those in uus and iis; e. g. assiduus, exiguus, pius, strenuus.

† Of the participles in ns and tus, many are used adjectively and regularly compared; e. g. amans, amantior, amantissimus; doctus, doctissimus, &c. But these are frequently defective.

‡ Except the two superlatives infandissimus, abominable; and nefandissimus, impious.

§ Except divinus, festivus, lascivus, rusticus, tempestivus, and vicinus, of which some of the comparative forms occur; e. g. divinior, divinissimus, &c.

single ; aestivus, of the summer ; hesternus, of yesterday ; hibernus, of the winter.

3. Those already involving a comparison, such as compounds of per, prae (= very), and sub (= somewhat) ; e. g. permagnus, very great ; praedives, very rich ; subdifficilis, somewhat difficult.*

4. Diminutives and other adjectives in lus ; as, parvulus, very little ; vetulus, a little old ; garrulus, talkative ; anhelus, out of breath, &c.

5. Compound adjectives derived from nouns ; † as, versicolor, of various colors ; dēgēner, degenerate.

DECLENSION OF THE COMPARATIVE AND SUPERLATIVE.

H. The superlative is declined like bonus, a, um, and the comparative like an adjective of one termination (Lessons V. and XIII.). Thus :—

Altior, m. & f., altius, n., higher.

	SINGULAR.		PLURAL.
	Masc. & Fem.	Neut.	Masc. & Fem.	Neut.
NOM.	altior	altius	altiores	altiorū
GEN.	altioris	altioris	altiorū	altiorū
DAT.	altiori	altiori	altioribus	altioribus
ACC.	altiorem	altius	altiores	altiorā
VOC.	altior	altius	altiores	altiorā
ABL.	altiore or -i	altiore or -i	altioribus	altioribus

So decline pulchrior, venustior, handsomer, prettier ; facilior, easier ; difficilior, more difficult ; major, greater ; longior, longer ; brevior, shorter ; rotundior, rounder ; divitior, richer, &c.

Is your book as good as mine ? Estne liber tuus tam bonus, quam meus (aëque bonus atque meus) ?

EXERCISE 80.

Is your brother taller (grandis) than mine? — He is not so tall, but better than yours. — Is thy hat as bad as that of thy father? — It is better, but not so black as his. — Are the shirts of the Italians as white as those of the Irish? — They are whiter, but not so good. — Are the sticks of our friends longer than ours? — They are not longer, but heavier. — Who have the most beautiful gloves? — The French have them. — Whose horses are the finest? — Mine are fine, yours are finer than mine; but those of our friends are the finest of all. — Is your horse good? — It is good, but yours is better, and that of the Englishman is the best of all the horses which we are acquainted with. — Have you pretty shoes? — I have very pretty (ones); but my brother has prettier ones than I. — From whom (a quo) does he receive them? — He receives them from his best friend. — Is your wine as good as mine? — It is better. — Does your merchant sell good handkerchiefs? — He sells the best handkerchiefs that I know. — Have we more books than the French? — We have more of them than they; but the Germans have more of them than we, and the English have the most of them. — Hast thou a finer garden than that of our physician? — I have a finer (one). — Has the American a finer house than thou? — He has a finer (one). — Have we as fine children as our neighbors? — We have finer (ones).

EXERCISE 81.

Is your coat as long as mine? — It is shorter, but prettier than yours. — Do you go out to-day? — I do not go out to-day. — When does your father go out? — He goes out at a quarter past twelve. — Is this man older (grandior natu) than that (man)? — He is older, but that (man) is healthier (robustus). — Which of these two children is the better? — The one who studies is better than the one who plays. — Does your servant sweep as well as mine? — He sweeps better than yours. — Does the German read as many bad books as good (ones)? — He reads more good than bad (ones). — Do the merchants sell more sugar than coffee? — They sell more of the one than of the other. — Does your shoemaker make as many boots as shoes? — He makes more of the one than of the other. — Can you swim as well as the son of the nobleman? — I can swim better than he; but he can speak German better than I. — Does he read as well as you? — He reads better than I. — Have you the headache? — No, I have the earache. — Does your cousin listen to what you tell him? — He does not listen to it. — Does the son of your bailiff go into the forest? — No, he remains at home; he has sore feet. — Do you learn as well as our gardener's son? — I learn better than he, but he works better than I. — Whose carriage is the finest? — Yours is very fine, but that of the captain is still finer, and ours is the finest of all. — Has any one as fine apples as we? — No one has such fine (ones).

Lesson XLII. — PENSUM ALTERUM ET QUADRAGESIMUM.

OF THE COMPARISON OF ADVERBS.

A. Adverbs derived from adjectives or participles, and ending in ē, ter, or ō,* are compared like their primitives.

The comparative of the adverb ends in ius, like the accusative neuter of the adjective, and the superlative assumes the termination ē. E. g.

POSITIVE.	COMPARATIVE.	SUPERLATIVE.
Longē,	longius,	longissimē;	far.
Pulchrē,	pulchrius,	pulcherrimē;	handsomely.
Facilē,	facilius,	facillimē;	easily.
Audacter,	audācius,	audacissimē;	boldly.
Lēviter,	lēvius,	lēvissimē;	easily.
Prudenter,	prudētius,	prudētissimē;	prudently.
Tūtō,	tūtius,	tūtissimē;	safely.
Rārō,	rārius,	rārissimē;	rarely.
Honorificē,	honorificentius,†	honorificentissimē;	honorably.

Dīū,	dīūtius,‡	dīūtissimē;	long.

B. Adverbs derived from adjectives of anomalous comparison follow the anomalies of their primitives. E. g.

POSITIVE.	COMPARATIVE.	SUPERLATIVE.
Bēnē,	melius,	optimē;	well.
Mālē,	pējus,	pessimē;	bad.
Pārum,	minus,	minimē;	little.
—,	māgis,§	maximē;	more.
Multum,	plūs,	plūrimum;	much.

C. The following list exhibits the adverbs of defective comparison : —

POSITIVE.	COMPARATIVE.	SUPERLATIVE.
—,	dētērius,	dētērrimē;	worse.
—,	ocīus,	ocīissimē;	swifter.

* Many of those in o, however, are not compared. On the formation of adverbs generally, see Lesson LXX.

† Compare Lesson XL. D. 8.

‡ Diu and sæpe have no corresponding adjectives. The root of the former seems to have been dīutus.

§ This is properly the comp. of magnum, which is not used adverbially. Instead of it, valde and magnopere are commonly employed.

|| The superlative of adverbs sometimes ends in o or um. So primo or primum, potissimum, meritissimo, &c.

—, prius,	primum;	before, sooner.
—, uberior,	uberrimē;	more copiously.
Nōvē,	nōvissimē;	newly, lately.
Nūper,	nūperrimē;	recently.
Paenē,	paenissimē;	almost, entirely.
Pēnitus,	pēnitius,	inwardly.
—, pōtius,	pōtissimum;*	rather.
Mērito,	mēritissimō;	deservedly.
Sātis,	sātius,	sufficiently.
Tempēri,	tempērius,	seasonably.
Valdē,	valdius,	greatly.
Sēcus,	sēcius,	differently.

The beginning. The end. Initium, i, n. Finis, m. & f.

To begin, commence.	Incipio, ēre, cēpi, ceptum. Exordior, iri, orsus sum (dep.) (ALIQUID FACĒRE). Initium facere (ALICUJUS REI FACIENDAE).
To end, finish, conclude.	Finio, ire, ivi (ii), itum (ALIQUID). Finem facere (ALICUJUS REI). Concludo, ēre, ūsi, ūsum (ALIQUID).
Will you begin to speak?	Visne incipere loqui?
I am willing to begin.	Visne initium facere loquēdi?
Is he beginning to speak (= to discourse).	Incipere nōn nōlo.
He is beginning.	Incipitne (exorditurne) dicere?
No, he is finishing.	Facitne initium dicēdi?
Are you finishing your letter?	Incipit. Facit initium.
I am not concluding it.	Immo vērō finem facit (dicēdi). Concludisne epistolam tuam?
Not yet.	Nōn concludo.
Already.	Nōndūm, haud dūm, adhūc nōn.
Before.	Jam, jamjam, jam jamque (adv.) Prius quam (priusquam). Ante quam (antequam). Antēa quam (antequam). (Conj. with the ind. and subj.)

Do you speak before you listen?	Nūm loqueris prius quā́m audis (auscūltas)?
I never speak before I listen.	Ēgo nūnquam loquor ante quā́m audio.
Do you take off your stockings before you take off your boots?	Nūm tibialia tua prius pēdibus detrahis quā́m caligas?
No, I take off my boots first.	Immo vērō caligas prius detraho.

* Also more rarely potissima.

Does your servant sweep the same room which I am sweeping?	Everritne sérvus túus ipsum concláve, quód égo evéro?
He is not sweeping the same.	Ídem nòn evérrit.
Often, frequently.	Sæpē, frequenter, crēbro.*
As often as you.	Tám sæpe quám tú.
As many times as you.	Tóties, quóties tú.
Quite as often as you.	Nòn mínus sæpe (frequenter) quám tú.
Often more than you.	Sæpius (frequēntius) quám tú.
Not as often as you.	Nòn tám sæpe, quám tú.
Early (in the morning).	Mānē (adv.), tempóre matutino.
Early (= in good time).	Matūrē (comp. matūrius).
Quite early (in the morning).	Bēnē māne, primā lūce.
Quite early (generally).	Admōdum matūre.
Late.	Sērō; tardē.
Quite late.	{ Sērō admōdum. { Pervespēri (in the evening).
Too.	Nimis, nimium.
Too late.	{ Sērō,† nimis sērō; post tempus. { Nimis tarde, tardius. ‡
Too early (in the morning).	Nimio māne.
Too early (generally).	{ Nimis matūre, maturius. ‡ { Praematūre.
Too great.	{ Nimis magnus (grandis). { Major, grandior (sc. aequo).
Too little (small).	Nimis parvulus; perparvulus.
Too much.	{ Nimis, nimium (adv.). { Nimius, a, um. { Plūs aequo, plūs justo.
To breakfast.	{ Jento, āre, āvi, ātum. { Jentācūlum sumēre.
The breakfast.	Jentācūlum, i, n.
Do you breakfast as early as I?	Jentāsne (sumísne jentācūlum) tám bēne māne quám égo?
I breakfast as early as you.	{ Jénto véro tám bēne māne quám tú. { Jentācūlum súmo aéque matūre átque tú.
I breakfast earlier, later than you.	Égo jentācūlum súmo matūrius, sérius quám tú.

* These are regularly compared: crebrius, creberrime, frequēntius, frequentissime, &c.

† Sero has often the sense of nimis sero.

‡ With these neuter comparatives it is necessary to supply aequo, justo, or opinione; i. e. "later than expected" = "too late," "earlier than usual" = "too early," &c. (Cf. Lesson XLIII. E. 2.)

Does he breakfast before he begins to work ?	Sumítne jentáculum, priúsqvam ópus fácere incipit ?
No, indeed, he works before he breakfasts.	Mínime véro ; íntíum fácit operándi, antea quam jentat.
Do I come too early ?	Veníóne praemátüre ?
No, you come rather too late.	Ímmo véro (nímis) séro vénis.
Do you speak too much ?	Núm lóqueris nímis ?
I do not speak enough.	Ímmo véro, égo nòn sátis lóquor.

EXERCISE 82.

Do you begin to speak ? — I begin to speak. — Does your brother begin to learn Italian ? — He begins to learn it. — Can you already speak German ? — Not yet, but I am beginning. — Do our friends begin to speak ? — They do not yet begin to speak, but to read. — Does our father already begin his letter ? — He does not yet begin it. — Does the merchant begin to sell ? — He does begin. — Can you swim already ? — Not yet, but I begin to learn. — Does your son speak before he listens ? — He listens before he speaks. — Does your brother listen to you before he speaks ? — He speaks before he listens to me. — Do your children read before they write ? — They write before they read. — Does your servant sweep the warehouse before he sweeps the room ? — He sweeps the room before he sweeps the warehouse. — Dost thou drink before thou goest out ? — I go out before I drink. — Does your cousin wash his hands (manus) before he washes his feet ? — He washes his feet before he washes his hands. — Do you extinguish the fire before you extinguish the candle ? — I extinguish neither the fire nor the candle. — Do you intend to go out before you write your letters ? — I intend writing my letters before I go out. — Does your son take off his boots before he takes off his coat ? — My son takes off neither his boots nor his coat.

EXERCISE 83.

Do you intend to depart soon ? — I intend to depart to-morrow. — Do you speak as often as I ? — I do not speak as often, but my brother speaks oftener than you. — Do I go out as often as your father ? — You do not go out as often as he ; but he drinks oftener than you. — Do you begin to know this man ? — I begin to know him. — Do you breakfast early ? — We breakfast at a quarter past nine. — Does your cousin breakfast earlier than you ? — He breakfasts later than I. — At what o'clock does he breakfast ? — He breakfasts at eight o'clock, and I at half past six. — Do you not breakfast too early ? — I breakfast too late. — Does your father breakfast as early as you ? — He breakfasts later than I. — Does he finish his letters before he breakfasts ? — He breakfasts before he finishes them. — Is your hat too large ? — It is neither too large nor too small. — Does our gardener breakfast before he goes into the garden ? — He goes into the garden before he breakfasts. — Do you read French as often as German ? — I read French oftener than German. — Does the physician speak too much ? — He does not speak enough. — Do the Germans drink too much wine? — They do not drink enough of it. — Do they drink more beer than cider? — They drink more of the one than of the other. — Have you much money? — We have not enough of it. — Have your cousins much corn? — They have only a little, but enough. — Have you much more brandy? — We have not much more of it. — Have you as many tables as chairs? — I have as many of the one as of the other. — Does your friend receive as many letters as notes? — He receives more of the latter than of the former. — Do you finish before you begin? — I must begin before I finish.

Lesson XLIII. — PENSUM QUADRAGESIMUM TERTIUM.

THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE COMPARATIVE.

A. RULE. — When two objects are compared with each other, and the first is the subject of the sentence, the second is frequently put in the ablative without quam. E. g.

Tullius Hostilius ferocior fuit Rómulo.*

Tullius Hostilius was more warlike than Romulus.

Vilius est argéntum aúro, virtúibus aúrum.

Silver is inferior to gold, and gold to virtue.

Quíd est in hómine ratione divinius?

What is there in man diviner than reason?

Quaë figúra, quaë spécies humána pótest esse pulchrior?

What figure or form can be more beautiful than the human?

Nihil est laudabilius, nihil mágno et praecláro víro dignius placabilitate atque clementiá.

Nothing is more commendable, nothing more worthy of a great and distinguished man, than a forgiving disposition and clemency.

Lácrimā nihil citius† aréscit.

Nothing dries faster than a tear.

Ne lóngius triduo ab cástris absit.

Not to be absent from the camp longer than three days.

Fortúna plús consiliis humánis póllet.

Fortune is stronger than human designs.

* This = quam Romulus (fuit). So the remaining ablatives of these examples: — quam aurum (est), — quam virtutes sunt, — quam ratio est. — quam humana (figúra seu species) est, — quam placabilitas atque clementia sunt, &c., and in general every ablative after a comparative.

† This, and the two following examples, show that the same rule applies also to the comparative of adverbs. But this is only so when the comparison relates to the subject of the sentence.

Neminem* Romanôrum Cicerône In the opinion of the ancients, no eloquentiorem fuisse vêtères Roman was more eloquent than judicârunt. Cicero.

REMARKS.

1. Among the most common forms of the ablative after comparatives are the neuter adjectives and participles aequo, necessario, nimio, credibili, vero, solito, justo, dicto, and the nouns spe, opinione, expectatione; as, plus aequo, more than is fair; longius necessario, further than is necessary; magis solito, more than usually; dicto citius, sooner than the word was uttered; opinione celerius, quicker than was expected; serius spe, later than was hoped; plus nimio, more than too much. But these ablatives are often omitted. (Compare E. 2.)

2. Quam is always put instead of the ablative, where the latter would give rise to ambiguity. E. g. Hibernia est dimidio minor, ut aestimatur, quam Britannia, Hibernia is supposed to be smaller by one half than Britannia.

3. The ablative after comparatives is the standard by which the object compared is measured with reference to the quality common to both. It may be considered an abridged proposition, and can be resolved into quam est, &c. Hence quam may always be employed instead of the ablative, but not vice versa. E. g.

Mélior tutiôrque est certa pax, A certain peace is better and safer quàm sperâta victôria. † than an expected victory.

Ita sentio, locupletiorem esse Latinam linguam, † quàm Graecam. It is my opinion, that the Latin language is richer than the Greek.

Nullum est certius amicitiae vinculum, quàm consensus et societas consiliorum et voluntatum. There is no surer bond of friendship than the harmony and community of plans and wishes.

Pater Tarquinius potèntior Rômae nôn fuit, quàm filius Gabiis. § Tarquin the father was no more powerful at Rome than was the son at Gabii.

B. RULE. — If the object compared with another is in an oblique case, and dependent on another word, the conjunction quam is used, and the second object is either in the nominative with est, fuit, || &c., or in the same case with the first. E. g.

* Neminem is here the subject of the infinitive fuisse, and consequently included in the rule.

† In all these examples, est, fuit, esse is understood.

‡ The subject accusative to esse.

§ In this and in the preceding example the ablative is entirely inadmissible, as it would give rise to a confusion of cases.

|| Or with the verb of the sentence understood.

Flagitii magis nos pūdet, quā errōris.*	We are more ashamed of a disgraceful act than of an error.
Nemini magis fāveo, quā tibi.	There is no one whom I favor more than I do you.
Ego hōminem calidiōrem vidi nēminem, quā Phormiōnem.	I have seen no shrewder man than Phormio.
Consilio majōres rēs gerūntur, quā fortitūdine.	Greater things are accomplished by deliberation, than by valor.
Ab Hannibale majōres rēs gēstae sūnt, quā ab Hamilcare.	Greater exploits have been achieved by Hannibal than by Hamilcar.
Drusum Germānicum minōrem nātū, quā ipse erat, frātre	He lost Drusus Germanicus, a brother younger than he himself was.
amisit.
Haec vērba sūnt M. Varrōnis, quā fuit Clāudius, doctiōris.	These are the words of Marcus Varro, a more learned man than Claudius was.
Longīnqua itinera solā dūcis patiētiā mitigabāntur, eōdem plūra, quā gregārio milite, tolerānte.	The long marches were mitigated by the patience of the leader alone, — he himself enduring more than a common soldier.

REMARKS.

1. Instead of quam with an object accusative, † the ablative sometimes occurs in prose and frequently in poetry. E. g. Est boni consulis suam salutem posteriorem salute communi ducere, It is the duty of a consul to consider his own safety secondary to that of the commonwealth. Neminem Lycurgo ‡ aut majorem aut utiliorem virum Lacedaemon genuit, Lacedaemon produced no man either greater or more useful than Lycurgus. Quid prius dicam solitis parentis laudibus? What shall I say (sing) before the accustomed praises of our parent?

2. A relative or demonstrative pronoun is commonly in the ablative where we would expect the object accusative with quam. E. g. Hic Attalo, quo § graviorem inimico non habui, sororem suam in matrimonium dedū, He gave his sister in marriage to Attalus, than whom I had no enemy more mortal. Hoc mihi gratius nihil facere potes, You could not do me a greater favor than this.

3. The comparative inferior is occasionally followed by the dative. E. g. Nullā arte cuiquam inferior est, He is not inferior to any one in any art. But commonly by the ablative or quam; as, Non inferior fuit, quam pater, He was not inferior to his father.

4. The adjective alius has sometimes the force of a comparative; as, Ne putes alium sapiente bonoque beatum, Do not consider any one but a wise and good man happy. Nec quidquam aliud libertato

* In this and the following examples the ellipsis is quam nos pūdet, quam tibi faveo, quam Phormio est, quam geruntur, quam gestae sunt.

† After transitive verbs.

‡ Instead of quam Lycurgum or quam Lycurgus fuit.

§ Better than quam quem.

communi quaesivimus, Nor did we aim at anything else but our common liberty.

5. The prepositions ante, prae, praeter, and supra serve to impart a comparative force to the positive, and to enhance that of the comparative or superlative. E. g. Felix ante alias virgo, A maiden fortunate before (= more fortunate than) others. Praeter alios doctus, Learned beyond others. Ante alios immanior omnes, More inhuman than all other men. Prae nobis beatus, Happier than ourselves.

6. Magis, minus, and potius are sometimes put emphatically with a comparative, or with malo, praecopto (I would rather, I prefer), &c. E. g. Hoc enim magis est dulcius, This is much sweeter. Potius maluit, He preferred. Non minus admirabilior illius exitus belli, The issue of that war was no less wonderful.

7. Quam pro frequently occurs after comparatives, and is equivalent to the English "than in proportion to," "than might be expected from." E. g. Minor, quam pro tumultu, caedes, Less of a massacre than one might have expected from the bustle. Species viri majoris, quam pro humano habitu, augustiorisque, The form of a man of greater than human size, and more majestic.

8. The conjunction atque occasionally takes the place of quam. E. g. Amicior mihi nullus vivit atque is est, I have no better friend alive than he is. But this does not occur in classical prose.

9. The comparative is often negative, especially in the formulas non magis (non plus) . . . quam, no more . . . than (but rather less); non minus . . . quam, no less . . . than (but rather more); non melior . . . quam, no better . . . than (but rather worse); non deterior . . . quam, no worse . . . than (but rather better). E. g. Animus in aliquo morbo non magis est sanus, quam id corpus, quod in morbo est, In sickness the mind is no more (= as little) sound, than (as) the body in disease. Patria hominibus non minus cara esse debet, quam liberi, Their country ought to be no less dear (= equally dear) to men than (as) their children. Luctus non Romae major, quam per totam Hispaniam fuit, There was as great a sorrow throughout entire Spain, as there was at Rome.

C. After the comparatives plus, amplius, minus, and longius, the conjunction quam is frequently omitted without any change of case in the second object.* E. g.

Nōn amplius erant quingenti. There were no more than (not over) five hundred.

Plūs tertia pars interfēcta est. More than (over) one third of them were killed.

Constabat non minus ducētos Carthaginiensium equites fuisse. It was manifest, that there were no less than (at least) two hundred horsemen among the Carthaginians.

* There is generally a numeral expressed or understood in this construction. The case remains the same which it would be under the same conditions without plus, &c.

Quintus tēcum plūs annum vixit.	Quintus lived with you more than (over) a year.
Revēsus est in Asiā minus diebus triginta .	He returned into Asia in less than thirty days.
Spātium, quod nōn est āmplius pēdum sexcentōrum .	A space of no more than (not over) six hundred feet.
Non longius milia passuum octo.	No farther than eight miles.

REMARKS.

1. Quam is likewise omitted after major and minor, when these words denote a definite age of life. E. g. Major (quam) quinque annis natus, Older than five years. Minor (quam) decem annos natus, Younger than ten years.

2. Sometimes, however, these comparatives are regularly construed with quam or an ablative. E. g. Plus quam quattuor milia, More than four thousand. Amplius duobus milibus, More than two thousand. Minus tribus medimnis, Less than three medimni. Plus quam annum, For more than a year.

D. When two qualities denoted by different adjectives are attributed to the same object in an unequal degree, the adjectives are either both positive with magis . . . quam, or both comparative with quam simply. E. g.

Cēler tiūs disertus magis est, quām sapiens .	Your friend Celer is rather eloquent than wise.*
Artem juris habēbitis, magis magnam atque uberem, quam difficilem atque obscuram .	You will have a science of law more comprehensive and rich than difficult and obscure.
Pestilētia mināciōr quām periculōsiōr .	A pestilence more menacing than dangerous.
Pauli Aemīlii cōncio fūit rērior, quām grātiōr pōpulo .	The address of Paulus Æmilius was not so acceptable to the people as it was true.
Impetus, nōn ācrior, quām perti-nāciōr .	An assault as obstinate as it was fierce.

REMARKS.

1. The construction of adverbs is precisely the same: — Temere magis, quam satis caute, Rather rashly than with sufficient caution. Magis honeste, quam vere, More for honor's sake than correctly. Fortius quam felicius, More bravely than successfully. Non contumeliosius quam verius, No more contemptuously than truly, &c.

2. Of these two constructions the double comparative with quam is the most common. Sometimes the second adverb is in the positive degree; as, Vehementius quam caute, More impetuously than cautiously. But this is an exception to the general rule.

* I. e. More of an eloquent than of a wise man, — he has less prudence than eloquence. Disertior est, quam sapientior, He has considerable prudence, but yet more eloquence.

E. The second member of a comparison is frequently suppressed. This happens,—

1. When the comparative serves to distinguish two objects of the same kind. E. g. Graecia major, Gallia ulterior, ex duobus filiis major seu minor (= the elder or younger of two sons), major pars hominum. So, Uter est melior? Which is the better of the two? Respondeo priori prius, I reply first to the former (of two letters).

2. When it is so general as to be readily understood from the context. E. g. Quam ceteri, solito, aequo, justo, &c.* In these cases the comparative is commonly rendered by the positive with somewhat, rather, too, or quite. As,

Si versus est syllabā unā brevior aut longior (sc. justo). If the verse is a syllable too short or too long.

Senectus est naturā loquacior (sc. quām ceterae aetates). Old age is naturally somewhat loquacious.

Themistocles liberior vivēbat (sc. aequo). Themistocles lived rather too freely.

Ocius omnes imperio laeti parent (sc. dicto).† They all obey the command with alacrity, sooner than it is uttered.

Nihil fere quondam majoris rei, nisi auspiciato, gerebatur. Scarcely any matter of importance was formerly undertaken without auspices.

Médici graviōribus morbis periculōsas curatiōnes et ancipites adhibere solent. To the acuter diseases physicians are accustomed to apply dangerous and doubtful remedies.

F. The comparative may be variously modified by other words:—

1. By the intensive etiam or adhuc, “even,” “yet,” “still.” E. g. Etiam majores varietates, A still greater diversity. Multo etiam longius, Much further even. Punctum est, quod vivimus, et adhuc puncto minus, Our life is but a moment, and even less than one.

2. By the ablative of the thing, in respect to which one object is superior to another. E. g. Quis Carthaginiensium pluris fuit Hannibale, consilio, virtute, rebus gestis? What Carthaginian was superior to Hannibal, in sagacity, in valor, or in exploits? Superior ordine, Superior in rank. Inferior fortunā, Inferior in fortune.

3. By the ablative of the measure or quantity, by which the difference is estimated. E. g. Dimidio minor, Smaller by one half. Decem annis minor, Younger by ten years. Uno die longiorem mensem aut biduo, A month longer by one day or by two days. Uno digito plus

* Compare A. 1.

† So plures (sc. quam unam) uxores habere, to have several wives. Diutius morari, to remain too long. Plura loqui, to talk too much, &c.

habere, To have one finger too many. Altero tanto longiorem esse, To be as long again (twice as long). Sesqui esse majorem, To be greater by one half. Sol multis partibus major atque amplior est, quam terra universa, The sun is many times as large as our entire globe.

4. So generally by the neuter ablatives multo, by much, much; paulo, parvo, a little; aliquanto, somewhat, considerably; quanto, by as much; tanto, by so much; quo, the (more, &c.); hoc, eo, the (more, &c.); altero, tanto, by as much again; dimidio, by one half; sesqui, by one and a half; nililo, by nothing. E. g. Paulo vehementius, A little more violently. Multo artificiosius, Much more skilfully. Aliquanto atrocius, Considerably more atrocious. Quanto superiores sumus, tanto nos geramus submissius, The greater our superiority, the more humbly let us conduct ourselves. Quo plures erant, (hoc) major caedes fuit, The greater their number, the more bloody was the massacre. Quo major est in animis praestantia et diviniior, eo majore indigent diligentia, The greater and diviner the intellectual superiority, the greater is the necessity of application. Homines quo plura habent, eo cupiunt ampliora, The more men possess, the more they desire.

5. Instead of the ablatives tanto, quanto, aliquanto, the adverbial accusatives tantum, quantum, aliquantum, are sometimes employed. E. g. Quantum domo inferior, tantum gloria superior evasit, He turned out as much superior in renown, as he was inferior by birth.

EXERCISE 84.

Is the English language richer than the French? — It is richer. — Is it as rich (locuples) as the Greek? — It is not as rich; it is less rich and less flexible (flexibilis) than the Greek. — Which language is the richest of all? — There is no language richer than the Greek. — Is there anything more valuable (praestantius) than gold? — Virtues are far (multo or longe) more valuable. — Is there anything diviner in man than reason? — There is nothing diviner or fairer (vel pulchrius). — Can any form be fairer than the human? — No figure or form can be fairer. — What is more commendable in a great man than clemency? — There is nothing more commendable. — Is your friend more learned than his brother? — He is far more learned, but not as good. — Is he more learned than our neighbor? — He is not so learned. — Who of the Romans was (fuit) the most eloquent? — Cicero was the most eloquent of Roman orators. — Do you favor any one more than me? — I favor no one more than you. — Are you loved as much by your father as by your friend? — I am loved more by the former than by the latter. — Is that man inferior to the other? — He is not inferior. — Do we seek anything else than liberty. — We seek nothing else. — Is our neighbor more fortunate than others? — He is less fortunate. — Who is happier than we? — No one. — Ought our country to be as dear to us as our children? — It should be no less dear to us. — How much money have you left? — I have more than one third left. — How much has your brother left? — He has less than ten dollars left. — How many are there of us? — There are more than fifty of us.

Lesson XLIV.—PENSUM QUADRAGESIMUM QUARTUM.

CONSTRUCTION OF THE SUPERLATIVE.

A. The Latin superlative serves to express two distinct relations :—

I. The quality denoted by it may be attributed to one of several objects in a higher degree than to any of the rest. This is called the Superlative of Comparison, and is translated by the English superlative, or by most. E. g.

Epistolæ mihi uno die trēs sūnt redditæ. Rescripsi epistolæ māximæ.

Numitorī, qui stirpis māximus erat, régnum légat.

Miltiades et gloriā majōrum et sua modēstiā unus omnium māxime florēbat.

Péssima sūt, nulli nōn sua forma plācet.

Miser homo est, qui ipsi quod edit* quaerit, et id aegre invenit; sed ille est misérrior, qui et aegre quaerit, et nihil invenit; ille misérrius est, qui, cum esse† cupit, quod edit non habet.

Three letters were handed to me in one day. I replied to the longest of them.

He bequeathed his kingdom to Numitor, the eldest of the line.

Miltiades enjoyed the very highest distinction, both for the glory of his ancestors and for his own modesty.

Every one likes his own appearance, be it never so bad.

The man is a wretched one, who has himself to seek his livelihood, and scarcely finds it; but he is more wretched, who seeks it hard and finds none; the most wretched (of all) is he, who, when he desires to eat, has nothing.

II. The quality denoted by the superlative may be attributed to an object simply in an eminent or uncommon degree. This is called the Superlative of Eminence, and is usually rendered by very, uncommonly, extremely, most, &c. As,

Gratissimæ mihi tuæ litteræ fuērunt.

Jactātur dōmi suæ vir primus et hōmo honestissimus.†

Si Aurélios honorifice liberalitér-que tractāris, et tibi gratissimos

Your letter was most (= extremely) welcome to me.

He is boasted of as the first man of his family, and a most (highly) honorable man.

If you treat the Aurelii honorably and liberally, you will oblige

* For edit, "what he may eat."

† For edēre, to eat.

‡ The superlative of eminence thus commonly occurs in titles and superscriptions. E. g. Viro fortissimo atque innocentissimo Sext. Peducaeo praetori.
De viro fortissimo et clarissimo L. Sullā, quem honoris causā nomino, &c.

optimisque adolescentes ad-jūnxeris, et mihi gratissimum féceris.

Ego miserior sum, quam tú, quæ és miserrima.*

most agreeable and excellent young men, and do me a very great favor.

I am more miserable than yourself, who are extremely misererable.

B. The superlative singular frequently occurs with quisque, every one, and the plural with quique, all. But here the singular is commonly translated by the plural. E. g.

Doctissimus quisque.

Optimi quique.†

Excellentissima quæque.

Every one of the most learned.

The best men all (as a class).

The most excellent things all (as a class).

Mars ipse ex acie fortissimum quemque pignerari solet.

Pecunia semper amplissimo quo-que, clarissimoque contempta est.

Multi mortales convenire, maxime proximi quique.

Notissimum quodque malum maxime tolerabile est.

Optimus quisque maxime poste-ritati servit.

Miltiades maxime nitebatur, ut primo quoque tempore‡ castra fierent.

Maximæ cuique fortunæ mini-me credendum est.

Mars himself is wont to elect the bravest of the battle-field.

Money was always despised by all the greatest and most illustrious of men.

Many flocked together, especially
(all) the nearest neighbors.

The most familiar evil is always † the easiest to bear.

The best man always serves posterity the most.

Miltiades made special efforts to have the camp constructed at the earliest moment possible.

The greatest prosperity is always least to be trusted.

C. The superlative is sometimes linked to another superlative of a separate clause, by means of ut . . . ita, as . . . so
(the . . . the).|| E. g.

Ut quisquis optime dicit, ita máxi- me dicendi difficultatem pertimescit.

The better any one speaks, the more he dreads the difficulty of speaking.

* The superlative of eminence alone may thus admit of a comparative.

† Quisque designates distributively every individual possessed of the same quality in its highest degree, and quique the several classes to which that quality is common.

‡ When the predicate contains an additional superlative, as in this instance, the quisque of the subject may be rendered by always. So Optimum quidque rarissimum est, The best things are always the rarest.

§ So also Primo quoque die, At the earliest possible day. And frequently in connection with an ordinal; as, Quinto quoque anno, In every fifth year. Septimus quisque dies, Every seventh day. Decimum quemque militem, Every tenth soldier.

|| Here the superlative is rendered by the comparative, as will be perceived from the examples.

Ut quisque est vir optimus, ita difficillime esse alios improbos suspicatur. The better the man, the less easily will he suspect others of being bad.

D. The superlative often appears in connection with quam, quantus, qui, ut qui,* to denote that the object admits of comparison with the most eminent of its kind. E. g.

Tam sum mitis, quam qui lenissimus. I am as mild as the most lenient man (that ever lived).

Tam gratum id mihi erit, quam quod gratissimum. It will be as acceptable to me as anything ever was.

Gratissimum mihi feceris, si huc commendationi meae tantum tribueris, quantum cui tribuisti plurimum. You will oblige me greatly, if you will attach as much importance to this recommendation of mine, as you ever did to any.

Grata ea res, ut quae maxime senatui unquam, fuit. That affair was as grateful, as any ever was to the senate.

Caesar sit pro praetore eo iure, quo qui optimo. Caesar can be propraetor with as good a right, as any one ever was.

Domus celebratur ita, ut cum maxime. The house is as much frequented, as it ever was.

Mater multos jam annos, et nunc cum maxime, filium interfecit cupit. For many years already the mother has wished her son killed, and now more than ever.

E. The force of the superlative may be increased in several ways:—

1. By the particles multo, longe (= by far), quam, or vel (= even). E. g. Multo maximum bellum, By much the greatest war. Longe humanissimus, By far the most humane. Quam gratissimus, Extremely grateful. Vel minima, Even the smallest things. Quam brevissime, With the utmost possible brevity.

2. By quam, quantus, qualis, or ut in connection with one of the forms of possum. E. g.

Caesar quam aequissimo loco potest,† castra communit. Caesar fortifies his camp in the most favorable locality he can (find).

Jugurtha quam maximas potest† copias armat. Jugurtha equips the largest force he can.

Tantis animi corporisque doloribus, quanti in hominem maximi cadere possunt. With as much suffering of mind and body as can possibly fall to the lot of man.

Sic Caesari te commendavi, ut I have recommended you to Caesar

* Here the indefinite qui = "any one."

† With possum in this construction the infinitive of the nearest verb is commonly understood, as here communit, armare.

gravissime diligentissimèque potui.

in the most earnest and urgent manner I could.

3. Sometimes (though rarely) by maxime; as, Maxime gravissimum, By far the heaviest. Hi sunt vel maxime humanissimi, These are by far the most humane.

4. Quam with the positive, or quam (quantum) volo or possum, sometimes have superlative force. E. g. quam late (= latissime), far and wide; quam magnum = maximum; quam potero dilucide atque perspicue, as clearly and perspicuously as I can.

Lesson XLV. — PENSUM QUADRAGESIMUM QUINTUM.

OF THE PERFECT TENSE.

A. The perfect tense serves to represent an action or event as completed, either just now or at some indefinite past time. As,

Amāvi ,	{ I have loved (just now), or
	{ I loved (once, yesterday).
Scriptsi ,	{ I have written (and have now done writing), or
	{ I wrote (at some past time).

1. With the former of these significations it is called the perfect definite, and corresponds to the same tense in English. With the latter, it is called the perfect indefinite, and corresponds to the simple form of the English imperfect.*

2. The perfect indefinite occurs most frequently as the tense of historical narration. E. g. Cato, quoad vixit, virtutum laude crēvit, Cato increased in reputation for virtue, as long as he lived. Lepidus ad me heri vesperi litteras misit, Lepidus sent me a letter last evening.

3. Examples of the perfect definite are: — Filiū unicūm adolescentulū habeo. Ah! quid dixi, me habere? imo habui, — I have an only son. Alas! What, did I say "I have one"? No, I have had one. Fuimus Troes, fuit Ilium, We Trojans have been, Ilium has existed (but is now no longer). Ferus omnia Juppiter Argos transtulit, Cruel Jupiter has transferred everything to Argos (and it is there now).

FORMATION OF THE PERFECT ACTIVE.

B. The terminations of the perfect tense for the respective conjugations are: 1. āvi, 2. ūi (ēvi), 3. i, 4. īvi (īi). E. g.

* I. e. to the form I loved, wrote, &c., but not to I was loving, writing, which is the Latin Imperfect.

1. Amāvi, laborāvi, apportāvi, lāvi (= lavāvi).
2. Monūi, habūi, studūi, — delēvi, complēvi.
3. Lēgi, scripsi, dilexi, attūli, misi.
4. Audivi, scīvi, īvi, prodīi, sitīvi.

REMARKS.

1. The perfect tense contains the second root of the verb, which serves as the basis for the formation of several other parts. (Cf. Lesson XXVIII. C. 1-5).

2. The second root of the first, second, and fourth conjugations is formed from the first or general root (am, mon, aud), by adding, 1. āv, 2. ēv (ū),* 4. iv; as amāv, delēv (monū), audiv.

3. The second root of the third conjugation is either the same as the first,† as lēg, exū, bib, or is formed by adding s,‡ as scrips (= scrib + s), dix (= dic + s), dux (= duc + s).

4. Some verbs of the second conjugation form their second root according to the analogy of the third, and, vice versa, several of the third assume ūi. E. g. augeo — auxi, fulgeo — fulsi, video — vidi; § alo — altūi, colo — colūi, pōno — pōsūi, &c.

5. Many verbs form their second root irregularly; as, 1. Seco — secūi, lavo — lavī, velo — vetūi, &c. 2. Jubeo — jussi, haereo — haesi, audeo — ausus sum, &c. 3. Arcesso — arcessivi, cresco — crevi, cupio — cupivi, fēro — tūli, mitto — misi, nosco — nōvi, quaero — quaesivi, sperno — sprēvi, uro — ussi, verro (everro) — verri, &c. 4. Aperio — aperūi, farcio — farsi, salio — salūi, sarcio — sarsi, venio — vēni, &c. A list of these is given at the end of the Grammar.

6. A number of verbs reduplicate the initial consonant in the second root; as, do — dēdi, sto — stēti, || curro — cucurri, disco — didici, posco — poposci, mordeo — momordi, &c.

7. Compounds generally form the second root like their simple verbs; as, affero (adfero) — attūli (= ad + tuli), conficio — confēcī, exaudio — exaudivī, &c.

* Most verbs of the second conjugation have u, but the original termination was ev, which by dropping e becomes v or u.

† Always the same when the root ends in a vowel; as, minūo — minūi, acūo, — acūi, metūo — metūi, &c.

‡ This s, preceded by c, g, h, or qu, gives rise to the compound consonant x; as, dico — dixi, ago — gixi, traho — traxi, coquo — coxi.

When preceded by b, the latter is changed into p; as nubo — nupsi, scribo — scripsi, &c.

When preceded by d, either d or s is dropped (most commonly the latter); as, edo — ēdi, defendo — defendi; claudio — clausi, lūdo — lūsi.

An s in the first root is frequently dropped in the second, and the root-vowel prolonged; as, frango — frēgi, fundo — fūdī, rinco — vinī, relinquo — reliqui.

§ The prolongation (and change) of the root-vowel is quite frequent; as, cōpio — cipi, ago — ēgi, fūcio — fēcī, lēgo — lēgi, vēnio — vēni, &c.

|| Sto and spondeo drop the second s: spononāi. This reduplication includes the vowel following the consonant, which sometimes, however, is changed into e; as fallo — fefelli.

8. The perfect subjunctive is formed from the perfect indicative, by changing i into ērī, as, amāvi — amāvērim, monūi — monuērim, &c.

INFLECTION OF THE PERFECT ACTIVE.

C. The following paradigms exhibit the inflection of the perfect, indicative and subjunctive : —

FIRST CONJUGATION.

INDICATIVE.	SUBJUNCTIVE.
Amāvi, I loved, have loved.	Amāvērim, that I may have loved.
SING. āmāvi āmāvisti āmāvit,	SING. āmāvērim āmāvēris āmāvērit,
PLUR. āmāvimūs āmāvistis āmāvērunt or -re.*	PLUR. āmāvērimūs āmāvērtis āmāvērint.

SECOND CONJUGATION.

INDICATIVE.	SUBJUNCTIVE.
Monūi, I reminded, have reminded.	Monuērim, that I may have reminded.
SING. mōnūi mōnūisti mōnūit,	SING. mōnūērim mōnūēris mōnūērit,
PLUR. mōnūimūs mōnūistis mōnuērunt or -re.	PLUR. mōnūērimūs mōnūērtis mōnūērint.

THIRD CONJUGATION.

INDICATIVE.	SUBJUNCTIVE.
Lēgi, I read, have read.	Lēgērim, that I may have read.
SING. lēgi lēgistī lēgit,	SING. lēgērim lēgēris lēgērit,
PLUR. lēgimūs lēgistis lēgērunt or -re.	PLUR. lēgērimūs lēgērtis lēgērint.

FOURTH CONJUGATION.

INDICATIVE.	SUBJUNCTIVE.
Audīvi, I heard, have heard.	Audivērim, that I may have heard.
SING. audīvi audīvistī audīvit,	SING. audivērim audivēris audivērit,

* The form in ērunt is the more common of the two.

PLUR. *audivimūsaudivistisaudivērunt or -re.*PLUR. audivērmūsaudivērtisaudivērint.

So conjugate apportāvi, I have brought; lāvi, I have washed; curāvi, I have ordered; — vidi, I have seen; vēni, I have come; habūi, I have had; secūi, I have cut; jussī, I have commanded; — fēci, I have made; refēci, I have mended; misī, I have sent; volūi and nolūi, I have been willing, unwilling; — cupiui, I have desired; ivi (exiī, prodiī), * I have gone (out, forth); quaesivi, I have sought, &c.

REMARKS.

In the tenses derived from the second root, the syllables āvi, ēvi, īvi are frequently contracted.

a.) In the first conjugation, āvi followed by an s, and ave followed by an r, are changed into ā; as, amāsti, amāstis, amāssem, amāsse, for amavisti, amavistis, amavissem, amavisse, &c., and *amārun*t, amārim, amāram, amāro, instead of amavērunt, amāvēram, amāvēro, &c.

b.) The same takes place with ēvi of the second and third conjugations; as, complēsti, complēsse, nēsti, nēstis, for complevistis, complevisse, nevisti, nevistis, and delēram, consuērunt, nērunt, instead of delevēram, consuevērunt, nevērunt. So decrēssem, decrēsse, quiessem sis, for decrevissem, &c. The termination ōvi of novi and its compounds, and also of the compounds of moveo, suffers a similar contraction; as, nōrunt, nōsse, cognōram, commōssem, instead of novērunt, novisse, &c.

c.) In the fourth conjugation ivi before s frequently experiences a similar change; as, audisti, audissem, audisse, for audivistis, audivissem, audivisse, &c. But most verbs of this conjugation have a second form in ii, which sometimes occurs in poetry, and, when an r follows, also in prose; as, auditiit, impeditiit, abtiisse, for audivit, impedivit, abivisse, and (more frequently) audieram, quaesierat, definierant, instead of audiveram, &c.

d.) The syllable is, when preceded by an s or x, is sometimes syn-copated in the perfect tense of the third conjugation; as, dixti, surrexe, evasti, divisse, for dixisti, surrexisse, erastis, divisisse, &c. But this contraction is antiquated, and used sometimes only by the poets.

e.) Antiquated forms of the perfect subjunctive are those in assim, essim, and sim (for averim, uerim, erim), which frequently occur in Plautus and Terence. E. g. imperassit, licessit, occisit, instead of imperaverit, licuerit, occiserit. Among these forms are included fazit, fazint (for fecerit, fecerint),† and ausim, ausit (for ausus sim, ausus si), which have remained in use among the later writers.

Lesson XLVI.—PENSUM QUADRAGESIMUM SEXTUM.

OF THE PERFECT PASSIVE.

A. The perfect tense of the passive voice is composed of the perfect participle and sum or fui. Thus:—

INDICATIV	SUBJUNCTIVE.
Amātus sum or fui, I have been loved, or I was loved.	Amātus sim or fuërim, that I may have been loved.
SING. amātus sum or fui amātus es or fuisti amātus est or fuit,	SING. amātus sim or fuërim amātus sis or fuëris amātus sit or fuërit,
PLUR. amāti sūmus or fuīmus amāti estis or fuistis amāti sunt or fuērunt.*	PLUR. amāti simus or fuerīmus amāti sitis or fueritis amāti sint or fuërint.

So inflect monitus sum, I have been admonished; lectus sum, I have been read; auditus sum, I have been heard. To these add laceratus sum, I have been torn; lavatus sum, I have been washed; servatus sum, I have been preserved; laudatus sum, I have been praised; vituperatus sum, I have been blamed; ornatus sum, I have been adorned; doctus sum, I have been taught; habitus sum, I have been held; jussus sum, I have been commanded;—dilectus sum, I have been cherished; ductus sum, I have been led; fractus sum, I have been broken; missus sum, I have been sent; scriptus sum, I have been written; sublatus sum, I have been taken away; eruditus sum, I have been instructed; munitus sum, I have been defended; punitus sum, I have been punished; vestitus sum, I have been clothed.

REMARKS.

1. The perfect participle employed in the formation of this tense is derived from the supine in um, which is usually termed the third root of the verb. (Cf. Lesson XXIV. C. Rem. 1.)

2. The third root of the first, second, and fourth conjugations is derived from the first or general root (am, mon, aud) by annexing, 1. āt, 2. ūt (ēt), 4. ū; as, amātum, monitum (delētum), auditum.

3. The third root of the third conjugation is formed by annexing t to the general root; as, dictum, exūtum, lectum. This t of the third root, like the s of the second (p. 237, note †), gives rise to several modifications of the consonants preceding it. Thus:—

a.) When the first root ends in g, h, or qu, these letters are changed into c; as, rego — rectum, traho — tractum, coquo — coctum.

* So if the subject is feminine, Sing. amāta sum, es, est; Plur. amāte sūmus, estis, sunt; and when neuter, Sing. amātum est; Plur. amāta sunt.

b.) B is changed into p; as, scribo — scriptum, nubo — nuptum.

c.) Sometimes the root is changed before the addition of t; as, colo — cultum, frango — fractum, gero — gestum, rumpo — ruptum, sperno — spretum, sterno — stratum, uro — ustum, vinco — victum.

d.) When the first root ends in d or t, the third adds s instead of t, and those letters are either dropped or converted into s; as, edo — esum, defendo — defensum, ludo — lusum, discedo — discessum.

e.) A number of other verbs add likewise s and modify the root; as, excello — excelsum, fallo — falsum, pello — pulsum, premo — pressum, spargo — sparsum, verro — versum.

f.) Some verbs in sco drop sc before the t of the third root; as, cresco — cretum, nosco — notum, quiesco — quietum, pasco — pastum.

g.) A number of verbs form their third root in it or it, as, bibo — bibitum, vomo — vomitum, pōno — positum, arcesso — arcessitum, cupio — cupitum, quaero — quaesitum, &c.

4. The reduplication (p. 237, Rem. 6) does not extend to the third root. E. g. do — dātum, stō — stātum, curro — cursum, mordeo — morsum, &c.

5. Verbs which are irregular in the second root are generally likewise so in the third; as, seco — sectum, lavo — lavātum (but lavus or lūtus), fero — latum, aperio — apertum, mitto — missum, salio — salsum, venio — ventum, &c.

6. Inceptive verbs in sco generally want the third root, and so many others. For these, and other irregularities of verbs, the student may consult the list of irregular verbs at the end of the book, or his lexicon.

Have you been loved ?	Êsne (fuistine) amātus ?
I have been loved.	Amātus sum.

No one has been punished.	{ Nemo punitus est.
	{ Nemo quisquam poenā affēctus est.
Who has been rewarded ?	Quis est præmio ornātus ?
The young man has been re- warded.	Adolescēntulus præmio ornātus est.
Have we been despised ?	Nūm nōs contēpti sūmus ?
We have not been despised.	Nōn sūmus
Have they (fem.) been repre- hended ?	Ān illae reprehēnsae sūnt ?
They have been reprehended.	Vērō quidem, reprehēnsae sūnt.
Have ye been sent ?	{ Êstis missi ?
	{ Nūm estis missi ?
We have not been sent.	Missi nōn sūmus.

PERFECT OF DEPONENT VERBS.

B. The perfect tense of deponent verbs is formed like that of the passive voice (cf. A.). Thus:—

INDICATIVE.

Hortātus sum or fui, I have exhorted, I exhorted.

SING. hortātus sum or fui
hortātus es or fuisti hortātus est or fuit,

PLUR. hortāti sumus or fuimus
hortāti estis or fuistis hortāti sunt or fuerunt.

SUBJUNCTIVE.

Hortātus sim or fuerim, that I may have exhorted.

SING. hortātus sim or fuërim
hortātus sis or fuëris hortātus sit or fuërit,

PLUR. hortāti simus or fuërimus
hortāti sitis or fuëritis hortāti sint or fuerint.

So veritus sum or fui, I have feared; locutus sum or fui, I have spoken; blanditus sum or fui, I have flattered. To these add arbitratus sum, I have thought; comitatus sum, I have escorted; moratus sum, I have delayed;—meritus sum, I have earned; miseritus sum, I have pitied; tultus sum, I have defended;—lapsus sum, I have fallen; oblitus sum, I have forgotten; profectus sum, I have departed; secutus sum, I have followed;—expertus sum, I have experienced; largitus sum, I have lavished, &c. Lesson XLVII. — PENSUM QUADRAGESIMUM SEPTIMUM.

OF THE SUPINES.

A. The supine in um always implies a purpose (to, in order to, for the purpose of), and is chiefly used after verbs of motion, such as eo, abeo, venio, mitto, missus sum, do, &c. As,

Éo cúbítum, saltátum, venátum, ésum.	I go to sleep, to dance, to hunt, to eat.
Ábeo exulátum, pátriam defénsum, pácem petítum.	I go off into exile, to defend my country, to sue for peace.
Vénio quéstum, sciscitátum, gratulátum.	I come to complain, to inquire, to congratulate.
Rédeo spectátum, obsecrátum, hiemátum.	I return to see, to beseech, to winter.
Missus sum bellátum, cónsúltum.	I have been sent to wage war, to consult.
Dô álicui áliquam núptum.	I give some one in marriage.

B. RULE. — Supines in um have an active sense, and govern the same cases as their verbs.* E. g.

Divitiácus Rômam ad senátum vénit, auxiliúm postulátum.	Divitiacus came to Rome to the senate, in order to ask for aid.
Vénérunt quéstum injúrias, ét ex foédere rés repelítum.	They came to complain of injuries, and to demand restitution according to the treaty.
Nôn égo Graiis servítum mátribus íbo.	I shall not go to serve Grecian matrons.
Hánnibal invíctus pátriam defénsum revocatús est.	Hannibal was recalled unconquered to defend his country.
Cóctum égo, nôn vapulátum conductús súm.	I was employed to cook, not to be flogged.
Missus ést sciscitátum, quíbus précibus supplicíisque déos póssent placáre.	He was sent to inquire by what prayers or offerings they might appease the gods.

REMARKS.

1. The verb ire with the supine in um is sometimes equivalent to the English I will, I am about; as, Cur te is perditum? Why will you make yourself unhappy? Fuere cives, qui seque remque publicam perditum irent, There were citizens, who were engaged in ruining both themselves and the republic. But ire with the supine is frequently nothing more than a circumlocution for the same tense of the verb; as, ultum ire = ulcisci, to revenge; raptum eunt = eripiunt, they plunder; perditum eamus = perdamus, we may ruin.

2. The supine in um retains its active signification with a passive verb. E. g. Contumeliam mihi per hujusce petulantiam factum itur, They are insulting me with the petulance of this man.

3. In connection with the passive infinitive iri, the supine in um serves to form the future infinitive passive; as, amatum iri, to be about to be loved; auditum iri,* to be about to be heard, &c. (Cf. Lesson XLVIII. B.)

4. Many verbs want the supine in um. In these cases (and often also where the supine exists), the purpose implied in the verb of motion may be indicated by various other constructions; as, Venio spectatum, ad spectandum, spectandi causâ, spectaturus, ut spectem, or spectare, I come to see, for the sake of seeing, about to see, &c. In general, the use of the supine is not extensive, and the best writers more frequently prefer the gerund with ad or causâ, or the future participle in urus. (Cf. Lesson XXX. D.)

C. The supine in u is used in a passive sense after fas, nefas, opus, and after adjectives signifying good or bad, pleasant or unpleasant, worthy or unworthy, easy or difficult, and the like. E. g.

Si hoc fûs est dictu.

Nefas est dictu.

Ita dictu opus est.

Honestum, dignum, tûrpe, mirabile est dictu.

Facile, difficile, melius, optimum est factu.†

Quid est tam jucundum cognitu atque auditu, quam sapientibus sententiis gravibusque verbis ornata oratio?

Sapiens vitatu, quidque petitu sit melius, causas reddet tibi.

Hernici nihil usquam dictu dignum ausi sunt.

If it is right to say so.

It is impiety to say so.

Thus we must say.

It is honorable, worthy, disgraceful, wonderful to tell or to be told.

It is easy, difficult, better, best, to do or to be done.

Is there anything so delightful to know and to hear as a discourse replete with sage sentiments and weighty arguments?

The philosopher will render you an account of what it is best to avoid, and what best to seek.

The Hernici never achieved anything worth mentioning anywhere.

* The passive infinitive iri in this connection is used impersonally.

† So likewise dulce auditu, sweet to hear; mollissimum tactu, of the softest touch; facile inrentu, easy to find, or to be found; speciosa dictu, plausible to be said; foedum inceptu, foul to be undertaken, &c.

REMARKS.

1. The supine in u does not govern any case, and is hence put with the passive voice. It is commonly rendered like the infinitive passive, but frequently better translated actively. The supines thus employed are not numerous. The principal are dictu, auditu, cognitu, factu, invenitu, memoratu.

2. The adjectives most frequently found in connection with this supine are bonus, parrus, magnus, dulcis, gravis, levis, fidus, durus, deformis, speciosus, dignus, indignus, proclivis, facilis, difficilis, mirabilis, and others in lis; also rārus, necessarius, acerbus, vehemens, turpis, foedus, &c.

3. The supine in u sometimes (though rarely) occurs with a verb; as, Pudet dictu, It is shameful to be said. Prīnus cubitu surgat, postrēnus cubitum eat, Let him (the steward) be the first to rise and the last to go to bed. Priusquam ego obsonātu redeo, Before I return from the purchase of food.*

4. Instead of the supine in u, especially after facilis and difficilis, the following constructions frequently occur:—

a.) The infinitive present; as, Facile est vincere non repugnantēs, It is easy to conquer where there is no resistance. Id dicere obscœnum est, It is obscene to say so.

b.) The gerund with ad; as, Facillimus ad concoquendum, The easiest to cook. Jucundum ad audiendum, Delightful to hear or to be heard.

c.) The passive voice and the adjectives facile, difficile, &c. as adverbs. E. g. Non facile dijudicatur amor verus et fictus, Real love and feigned are not easily distinguished.

d.) Sometimes the present participle, and more rarely a supine in um; as, Decemviri colloquentibus erant difficiles, The decemviri were difficult of access. Optimum factum, Best to do.

e.) Quite frequently a verbal noun in the case required by the adjective; as, Iustae causae facilis est defensio, The defense of a just cause is an easy one. Difficilis est animi, quid aut qualis sit, intelligence (= Difficile est intellectu, quid, &c.), It is difficult to understand the nature of the mind. So jucunda potui (for potu), Delightful to drink. Facilis divisui, Easy to divide. Erant rari aditus, They were rarely to be seen (rare of access). Cognitione dignum, Worth knowing.

	INF.	PERF.	SUPINE.†
To do — done.	Agĕre	— ēgi ,	actum .
To make (do) — made.	Facĕre	— fēci ,	factum .
To make (manufacture) — made.	Conficĕre	— confēci ,	confectum .
To take off — taken off.	Exuĕre	— exūi ,	exūtum .

* In these cases the supine appears really as the ablative of a verbal substantive. But here the verbals in io are by far more common; e. g. a frumentatione redire, to return from a foraging expedition.

† The forms actum, factum, &c. may either be regarded as the supine "to act," "to do," or as the neuter of the perfect participle "acted," "done," &c.

to him six times. — Has the nobleman ever spoken with you? — He has never spoken with me. — Have you often spoken with his son? — I have often spoken with him. — Have you spoken with him oftener than we? — I have not spoken with him so often as you (have). — To which son of the nobleman have you spoken? — I have spoken to the youngest (minimus natu). — To which men has your brother spoken? — He has spoken to these. — What has your gardener's son cut? — He has cut trees. — Has he cut (messuitne) corn? — He has cut some. — Has he cut as much hay as corn? — He has cut as much of the one as of the other. — Have you picked up my knife? — I have picked it up. — What have you picked up? — We have picked up nothing. — Have you burnt anything? — We have burnt nothing. — Hast thou burnt my fine ribbons? — I have not burnt them. — Which books has the Greek burnt? — He has burnt his own. — Which ships have the Spaniards burnt? — They have burnt no ships. — Have you burnt paper? — I have not burnt any. — Has the physician burnt notes? — He has burnt none. — Have you had the courage to burn my hat? — I have had the courage to burn it. — When did you burn it? — I burnt it yesterday. — Where have you burnt it? — I have burnt it in my room. — Who has torn your shirt? — The ugly boy of our neighbor has torn it. — Has any one torn your books. — Nobody has torn them. — Is it right to do so? — It is wrong. — Is it wonderful to be told? — It is very wonderful (permirabile). — What is best to be done? — It is best to depart (set out). — Is there any so delightful to know and to hear as the Latin tongue? — There is nothing more delightful (jucundius). — What has he achieved? — It is not worth mentioning what he has achieved.

Lesson XLVIII. — PENSUM DUODEQUINGAGESIMUM.

OF THE INFINITIVE MOOD.

A. The infinitive mood expresses the action of the verb in an indefinite or general manner, but at the same time represents it either as completed or uncompleted, i. e. as present, past, or future.

Hence the infinitive of Latin verbs has three tenses: the present, perfect, and future. For each of these the active and the passive voices both have separate forms. They are:—

1. The present infinitive active, derived from the first root of the verb; as, amāre, monēre, lĕgĕre, audire, to love, admonish, read, hear.*

* Compare Lesson XXIV. B. C.

2. The present infinitive passive, likewise derived from the first root; as, amāri, monēri, legi, audiri, to be loved, admonished, read, heard.*

3. The perfect infinitive active, formed from the second root by adding isse; as, amāvisse (amāsse),† monūisse, lēgisse audivisse (audisse), to have loved, admonished, read, heard.

4. The perfect infinitive passive, formed by combining esse or fuisse with the perfect participle; as, amātum (am, um)‡ esse or fuisse, to have been loved, &c.

5. The future infinitive active, formed by adding esse to the future participle active; as, amātūrum (am, um)§ esse, to be about to love, &c.

6. The future infinitive passive, formed by adding the passive infinitive of ire to the supine in um; as, amātum iri, to be about to be loved, &c.

B. The following paradigms exhibit all the forms of the infinitive mood, both active and passive.

FIRST CONJUGATION.

INFINITIVE ACTIVE.

PRES. amāre, to love.

PERF. amāvisse (amāsse), to have loved.

FUT. amātūrum esse, to be about to love.

INFINITIVE PASSIVE.

amāri, to be loved.

amātum esse or fuisse, to have been loved.

amātum iri, to be about to be loved.

SECOND CONJUGATION.

PRES. monēre, to remind.

PERF. monūisse, to have reminded.

FUT. monitūrum esse, to be about to remind.

monēri, to be reminded.

monitum esse or fuisse, to have been reminded.

monitum iri, to be about to be reminded.

THIRD CONJUGATION.

PRES. lēgere, to read.

PERF. lēgisse, to have read.

FUT. lectūrum esse, to be about to read.

lēgi, to be read.

lectum esse or fuisse, to have been read.

lectum iri, to be about to be read.

FOURTH CONJUGATION.

PRES. audire, to hear

PERF. audivisse (audisse), to have heard.

FUT. auditūrum esse, to be about to hear.

audiri, to be heard.

auditum esse or fuisse, to have been heard.

auditum iri, to be about to be heard.

* Compare Lesson XXXIII. B.

† See page 289, Remarks.

‡ And when it occurs in the nominative, amātus (a, um) esse or fuisse, &c.

§ And in the nominative amāturus (a, um) esse, &c.

REMARKS.

1. Instead of the future infinitive active or passive, the periphrastic forms fore,* ut, or futūrum esse, ut, with the subjunctive, are often employed, especially when the verb has no supine or participle in urus. E. g. Spēro fore (or futūrum esse), ut venias, for Spēro te ventūrum esse, I hope that you will come. Crēdo fore ut epistola scribātur, instead of Crēdo epistolam scriptum iri, I think that the letter will be written. So also in the past tenses: Sperābam fore, ut venires, I hoped that you might come. Credēbam fore, ut epistola scriberētur, I thought that the letter would be written. And of an act completed at some future time: Spero fore, ut vērīs (perf. subj.), I hope that you will have come. Sperābam fore, ut vērisses, I hoped that you might have come. Crēdo (Credēbam) epistolam scriptam fore, I think (thought) that the letter will be (would be) written.

2. Neuter verbs (unless they are used impersonally) have generally the infinitives of the active voice only. Many of this class want the supine and future participle, and have consequently fore ut. E. g.

Irē,	ivisse,	Itūrum esse.
Vēnirē,	vēnisse,	ventūrum esse.
Esse,	fuisse,	futūrum esse.
Posse,	pōtuisse,	fore, ut possim.
Velle,	vōluisse,	fore, ut velim, &c.

Lesson XLIX. — PENSUM UNDEQUINQUAGESIMUM.

OF PARTICIPLES.

A. Of the four participles of the Latin verb, the present active and the future passive are formed from the first root of the verb, and the future active and perfect passive from the third. (Cf. Lesson XXVIII. B. 8, 9, and D. 1, 2.) The terminations of these participles for the respective conjugations are: —

PRES. ACT. 1. ans, 2. ens, 3. ens (iens), 4. iens.
 FUT. ACT. 1. ātūrus, 2. ītūrus, 3. tūrus, 4. ūtūrus.
 PERF. PASS. 1. ātus, 2. ītus, 3. tus,* 4. ītus.
 FUT. PASS. 1. andus, 2. endus, 3. endus (ēendus), 4. ēendus.

B. The following paradigms exhibit the participles of the several conjugations in regular order: —

FIRST CONJUGATION.

ACTIVE.		PASSIVE.
PRES.	āmans , loving .	PERF.	āmātus , a, um, loved .
FUT.	āmātūrus , a, um, about to love .	FUT.	āmandus , a, um, to be loved .

SECOND CONJUGATION.

PRES.	mōnens , reminding .	PERF.	mōnītus , a, um, reminded .
FUT.	mōnītūrus , a, um, about to remind .	FUT.	mōnendus , a, um, to be reminded .

THIRD CONJUGATION.

PRES.	lēgens , reading .	PERF.	lectus , a, um, read .
FUT.	lectūrus , a, um, about to read .	FUT.	lēgendus , a, um, to be read .

* On the irregularities of the third root of the second and third conjugations, see Lesson XLVI. A. Rem. 1–6.

PRES. cāpiens, taking.	PERF. captus, a, um, taken.
FUT. captūrus, a, um, about to take.	FUT. cāpiendus, a, um, to be taken.

FOURTH CONJUGATION.

PRES. audīens, hearing.	PERF. auditus, a, um, heard.
FUT. audītūrus, a, um, about to hear.	FUT. audīendus, a, um, to be heard.

C. Deponent verbs generally have all the participles. Of these the future in dus is passive, like that of other verbs, but the perfect participle in tus has commonly an active sense. E. g.

PRES.	hortans, vīrens, sēquens, blandiens, exhorting, fearing, following, flattering.
PERF.	hortātus, verītus, secūtus, blandītus, having exhorted, feared, followed, flattered.
FUT. ACT.	hortatūrus, verītūrus, sectūrus, blandītūrus, about to exhort, fear, follow, flatter.
FUT. PASS.	hortandus, verendus, sequendus, blandiendus, to be exhorted, feared, followed, flattered.

REMARKS.

1. The present participle in ns is declined like an adjective of one termination (cf. page 21), and the participles in us, a, um, like bonus.

2. Participles sometimes drop the distinction of time and assume the character of adjectives or nouns. E. g. amans, loving (in love), or a lover; doctus, learned; nātus, a son. When employed as adjectives, they become susceptible of comparison. (Cf. Lesson XLI. C. and F.)

3. Neuter verbs generally have only the participles of the active voice. Of some, however, the future passive participle in dum is used impersonally.* Others again have also a perfect participle, which sometimes has a passive and sometimes an active sense.

4. The perfect participle of deponent verbs is generally active. The following sometimes occur also in the passive sense: adeptus, comitātus, commentātus, complexus, confessus, contestātus and detestātus, populātus and depopulātus, dimensus and emensus, effātus, ementitus, emerītus, expertus and inexpertus, execrātus, interpretātus, meditātus, metātus, moderātus, opinātus, pactus, partitus, perfunctus, periculātus, stipulātus, testātus. E. g. Depopulatus agrum, Having devastated the field. Partitus exercitum, Having divided the army. Partito exercitu, The army having been divided.

5. The following perfect participles, though from active verbs, are also employed in an active sense: juratus, having sworn; pransus, having taken lunch; coenātus, having dined; pōtus, having drunk. To these add ausus, gavisus, soltus, fsus, confsus; ezsus, perōsus, and pertaesus.

* Compare page 118, note *.

6. The English perfect participle active, of which Latin verbs generally are destitute, is commonly rendered either by a separate clause, or by the ablative of the passive participle. E. g. "When he had exterminated the kings," is either Quum reges exterminasset, or passive, Regibus exterminātis, The kings having been exterminated. The latter is called the Ablative Absolute, on which see Lesson LXXIII.

7. The genitive plural of participles in rus rarely occurs, except that of fuūrus.

8. The present participle of the verb sum is wanting, the obsolete ens occurring only in the compounds ahsens, praesens, and potens. The present participle of eo, I go, is iens, gen. euntis.

CONJUGATIO PERIPHRASTICA.

D. The participles in rus and dus, with the auxiliary sum, give each of them rise to a new conjugation, called the conjugatio periphraistica. In this connection the participle in rus denotes an intention, and that in dus, necessity or propriety. (Cf. Lesson XXV. C. D.) E. g.

1. Amātūrus sum, I am about to love (on the point of loving).*

INDICATIVE.	SUBJUNCTIVE.
PRES. amātūrus sum	amātūrus sim
IMP. amātūrus eram	amātūrus essem
PERF. amātūrus fui	amātūrus fuērim
PLUP. amātūrus fuēram	amātūrus fuisset.
FUT. amātūrus ero.†

INFINITIVE.

PRES. amātūrum esse.	PERF. amātūrum fuisse.
----------------------	------------------------

2. Amandus sum, I am to be loved, or must be loved ‡

INDICATIVE.	SUBJUNCTIVE.
PRES. amandus sum	amandus sim
IMP. amandus eram	amandus essem
PERF. amandus fui	amandus fuērim
PLUP. amandus fuēram	amandus fuisset.
FUT. amandus ero
FUT. PERF. amandus fuēro.

INFINITIVE.

PRES. amandum esse.	PERF. amandum fuisse.
---------------------	-----------------------

* And so in the remaining tenses, INDIC. I was, have been, had been, shall be, about to love. SUBJ. that I may be, might be, may have been, might have been, about to love.

† The Future Perfect amatus fuero does not occur.

‡ And so in the remaining tenses: — IND. I was to be loved, I shall have to be loved, &c., always with the agent in the dative. E. g. tibi, hominibus, nemini, by you, by men, by no one. See Lesson XXV. C. D.

OF THE USE OF PARTICIPLES.

E. Participles as such do not express any absolute determination of time, and can only be said to be present, past, or future, with reference to the time of the action denoted by the verb of the sentence in which they stand. Hence the verb with which they are connected may itself be either present, past, or future.

Participles have the agreement of adjectives. The noun with which they are in concord may be either in the nominative, as the subject of the sentence, or in one of the oblique cases governed by another word.

Participles govern the same cases as their verbs. E. g.

Hic adolescentulus ést (érat, érit) jussis tuis obédiens.

This youth is (was, will be) obedient to your commands.

Abituræ congregántur (congregábantur, congregabúntur) in loco certo.

When about to leave (just before leaving) they collect (did collect, will collect) together in a particular place.

Cæsar hostem profligátum perséquitur (persecútus est, perséquétur).

Cæsar pursues (has pursued, will pursue) the routed enemy.

Cæsar póntem in Arári faciéndum cûrat (curávit, curábit).

Cæsar orders (did order, will order) a bridge to be constructed over the Arar.

Léx est récta râtio, ímperans honesta, próhibens contrária.

The law is plain reason, commanding what is just, and prohibiting the contrary.

Jácet corpus dormiéntis, ut mortui.

The body of one sleeping (asleep) is like that of a dead man.

Prodiçãois ínsimulátus, ad ómnia crimina respóndit.

Accused of treason, he replied to all the charges brought against him.

Brundísium vénimus, úsi tuâ felicitáte navigándi

Having had your own good luck on our voyage, we arrived at Brundisium.

Magna párs hóminum est, quæ navigatúra de tempestáte nōn cōgitat.

There are many men, who never think of the weather, when they are about to sail.

Magna pars peccatórum tollitur, si peccatúris testis assistat.

A great many offences are prevented, if (where) there is a witness near those (who are) about committing them.

Equidem beátos puto, quibus Dórum múnere dátum est, aut fácere scribēda, aut scribere loquēda.

I consider those happy, to whom it is vouchsafed either to achieve things destined to be recorded, or to record events destined to be repeated.

F. Participles are frequently employed instead of subordinate clauses introduced by a relative pronoun, or by one of the conjunctions while, when, if, because, although, &c. E. g.

Plátó scribens mórtuus est.	Plato died while (in the act of) writing.
Dionýsius, Syracús expúlsus , Corinthi púeros docébat.	Dionysius, after having been expelled from Syracuse, was engaged in teaching at Corinth.
Tibérius, trajectúrus Rhénúm, commeátum ómnem transmissit.	Tiberius, when about crossing the Rhine, sent over all his supplies.
Sunt divítiae cértae, in quá-cúnque sórtis húmánae levitáte permansúrae .	There are certain riches, which will remain in every vicissitude of human fortune.
Pisistrátus primus Homéri líbros, confúsos ántea, sic disposuísse dúcitur, ut nunc habémus.	Pisistratus is said to have first arranged the poems of Homer, which were confused before, in the order in which we have them now.
Níhil affírmó, dúbítans plerúmque et míhi ípse díffídens .	I do not positively affirm anything, since I am myself uncertain and distrustful of myself.
Ut óculus, sic ánimus, sê non vídens , ália cérnit.	Although the mind, like the eye, does not see itself, it yet perceives other things.
Sócratis mórti illacrimáre sóleo, Platónem légens .	I always weep over the death of Socrates, as often as (whenever) I read Plato.
Epicúrus nón erubescens voluptátes perséquitur ómnes nominátim.	Epicurus enumerates the entire catalogue of pleasures without blushing .*

REMARKS.

1. Participles employed adjectively modify merely the noun, and not the entire sentence. E. g. Terra sitiens, The thirsting earth. Bene tolerata paupertas, Poverty well borne. Metus magni mali impendentis, The fear of a great impending evil. Poenae merita remisso, The remission of a merited punishment.

2. The perfect and future passive participles often supply the place of a verbal substantive. E. g. Hac literae recituae, The reading of this letter. Ab urbe condita, Since the founding of the city. Post Christum natum, After the birth of Christ. Propter Africam delendam, On account of the destruction of Africa. Consilium urbis delendae, The design for the destruction of the city.

* So also non loquens, without speaking, &c. But the English without (with verbs) is also expressed by the ablative of the perfect participle; as, non expectato auxilio, without expecting any help, &c.

3. After verbs of seeing, hearing, or representing, the present participle may stand, as in English, instead of the infinitive. E. g. Socratem audio dicentem, I hear Socrates say. Catonem vidi in bibliothecā sedentem, I saw Cato sitting in the library. Xenophon facit Socratem disputantem, Xenophon represents Socrates as maintaining.

4. After habeo, teneo, possideo, and similar verbs, and also after volo, nolo, cupio, facio, oportet, do, reddo, and curo, the perfect participle is used to designate a past event of which the result or consequences are still remaining. E. g. Cognitum habeo, I (have learnt and still) know. Clausum teneo, I keep shut. Me excusatum volo, I wish myself excused. Perfidiam perspectam habebat, He perceived the perfidy. Exercitum coactum habebat, He kept the army subjected. Missos faciant honores, Let them resign their claim to places of trust or honor. Inventum tibi curābo, I'll see him found for you.

5. The participle in rus is used by the later writers of the language (instead of the supine in um), after verbs of motion, to denote the purpose. E. g. Catūla ad exercitum proficiscitur, signa illatūrus urbi, Catiline goes to the army in order to invade the city. (Cf. Lesson XXX. D. Obs.) The present participle is sometimes put in the same sense; as, Canes alium rogantes regem misere ad Jovem, The dogs sent to Jupiter to ask for another king.

6. An intended effect or purpose is also indicated by the future participle in dus, after curāre (to order or get anything done), and also after dāre, tradere, mittere, concedere, permittere, accipere, and suscipere, locare, conducere, and similar verbs. E. g. Conon muros dirutos Athenarum reficiendos curavit, Conon ordered the demolished walls of Athens to be repaired. Vita data est utenda, Life is given us to be enjoyed. Fabius saucios milites curandos dividit patribus, Fabius distributes the wounded soldiers to be provided for by the senators. Aedem Castoris P. Junius habuit tuendam, P. Junius had the temple of Castor to guard. Patriam vel diripiendam vel inflammandam reliquimus, We have left our country either to be plundered or destroyed by fire.

EXERCISE 96.

Are you about to love? — I am about to love. — Are they going to read (lecturus)? — They are not going to read; they are going to write (scripturus). — Are we going to learn (disciturus) Latin? — We are going to learn it. — Were you about to read the book which I have lent you? — I was about to read it. — Were they about opening (aperturus) the window? — They were on the point of opening it. — Is he about to sell (going to sell, venditurus) his books? — He is not going to sell them. — Am I about going (iturus) to the theatre? — You are not going. — Was he going to give (daturus) you money? — He was about to give me some. — Was the physician about to come (venturus)? — He was on the point of coming. — Must you be loved (amandus)? — I must be loved. — By whom (cui) is your little boy to be loved? — He must be loved by his parents and teachers. — Must the letter be read (legendus)? — It must be read. — By whom?

— It must be read by his friends and neighbors. — Must the fire be lighted? — It is not to be lighted (accendendus): it is to be extinguished. — Must you set out on a journey*? — I must set out. — When was he obliged to set out? — He was obliged to set out this morning. — Must you go (eundum) into the garden? — I am not obliged to go there. — Must we breakfast (jentandum) now? — We are not to breakfast yet. — What is to be done by us? — We must speak Latin, and write letters to our friends.

EXERCISE 97.

Have you seen any one writing? — I have seen my father writing and reading by the fire. — Did they hear us speaking (loquentes)? — They did not hear us. — Where have you seen our friend? — I have seen him standing (stantem) by the window. — Where was your little brother last evening? — He was in his room, reading (legens) the book which you gave him. — Is our servant in the field? — No, he is in the garden cutting (secans) trees. — Does he keep the window open (apertam)? — No, he keeps it shut. — Do you wish to be excused? — I do wish to be excused. — Will you resign your claim (missos facere) to posts of honor? — I cannot resign it. — Do you not perceive the treachery (perfidiam)? — I do perceive it. — Did he give you the letter to read (to be read = legendus)? — He did give it (to me). — To whom did you give the shirts to be washed? — I have given them to my servant. — Did they lend us the books to be torn (discindendus)? — No; on the contrary, they have lent them to us to be read and remembered (memoriā tenendos). — Will you send me your gloves to mend (to be mended)? — I am unwilling to send them. — Has the tailor received coats to mend? — He has received coats and shirts to mend (reficienda). — Where have you left your hat to be repaired? — I have left it with (apud) the hatter. — Is the stranger coming to our house? — He is coming in order to bring you (tibi allaturus) the tobacco you have bought of him. — Did that happen (evenit) before (ante) or after the building of the city? — It happened after (post). — Did Socrates live (vixitne Socrates) after the birth of Christ? — No, he lived before it. — Was your brother rewarded? — No; on the contrary, he suffered (affectus est) a merited punishment. — Do you see the sailors coming? — I do not see them coming, but going away (abeuntes). — Where did you find your gloves? — I found them lying on the table. — Did you find your neighbor sitting by the fire? — No, I found him walking (ambulantem) in his garden.

* Profiisciendumne tibi est? And so the rest, according to Lesson XXV. D.

Lesson L.—PENSUM QUINQUAGESIMUM.

OF THE IMPERFECT TENSE.

A. The imperfect tense represents an action or state as incomplete, and going on at some past time. As,

Amābam,	{ I was loving (was engaged in loving).
	{ I loved, did love.*
Scribēbam,	{ I was writing (was occupied with writing).
	{ I wrote, did write.
Amābar,	{ I was (being) loved.
	{ I was the object of continued love.
Litterae scribēbantur,	{ A letter was being written.
	{ Some one was engaged in writing a letter.

B. The imperfect tense always involves a reference (either direct or indirect) to the time of another past action or event, which was either simultaneous with or antecedent to it. Hence, in narration, it frequently exchanges with the perfect indefinite, which, as the leading tense, then indicates the principal event, while the imperfect serves to point out the accessory circumstances connected with it. In its grammatical construction, however, the imperfect may either stand as the leading verb of an independent sentence, or subordinate in clauses introduced by a conjunction or a relative. It is thus used, —

I. With direct reference to another past action or event simultaneous with it. E. g.

Quūm Cæsar in Gálliam vénit, altérius factiōnis principes erant Aédui, altérius Sequáni.

When Cæsar arrived in Gaul, the Ædui were the leaders of the one party, and the Sequani of the other.

Quā tempestāte Carthaginiēses pleraēque Áfricae imperitābant Cyrenēses quōque magni atque opulēnti fuēre.

At the time when the Carthaginians were ruling nearly all Africa, the Cyrenians were also a great and opulent people.

Cimon celeriter ad principātum pervēnit. Habēbat† enim satis eloquēntiae, súmmam liberalitatem, mágnam prudéntiam.

Cimon rapidly advanced to the highest office of the state. For he had sufficient eloquence, the highest degree of liberality, and great sagacity.

* The Latin imperfect always implies duration or continuance of action (in the indicative at least), and has consequently the sense of the English I was loving. Sometimes, however, it is convenient to render it like the perfect indefinite: I loved, did love.

† The imperfect here denotes a permanent quality or characteristic, in opposition to the momentary event indicated by the perfect pervēnit.

Æqui sē in oppida receperunt murisque sē tenebant.

The Æqui retreated into their towns, and kept themselves within their walls.

*Cæsar Alésiam circumvallare instituit. Erat oppidum in colle summo, cujus rādices duo duābus ex partibus flūmina subleuēbant. Ante id oppidum planities patēbat; reliquis ex omnibus partibus colles oppidum cingebant.

Cæsar began to invest Alesia. The town was situate on the top of a hill, whose base was washed on two sides by two rivers. In front of this town a plain extended; on all the remaining sides the town was surrounded by hills.

II. To denote frequently repeated past action, as exhibited either in individual habits, or in manners, customs, and usages. E. g.

L. Cassius identidem in causis quaerere solēbat, cui bono fuisset.

L. Cassius, in hearing causes, was accustomed to inquire frequently for whose advantage it had been.

Dicēbat melius, quam scripsit, Hortensius.

Hortensius was wont to speak better than he wrote.

Majores nostri libertis non multo secus ac servis imperabant.

Our ancestors were accustomed to command their freedmen very nearly like slaves.

Anseres Romae publice alebantur in Capitolio.

It was customary at Rome to support geese at public expense in the Capitol.

Socrates dicēbat (= dicere solēbat), omnes in eo, quod scirent, satis esse eloquentes.

Socrates was accustomed to say, that all men were eloquent enough in what they knew.

III. To denote an event, in which the narrator participated as an eyewitness. E. g.

Uno die sex proeliis factis . . . ad duorum millium numero ex Pompejanis cecidisse reperiebamus.†

Six battles having been fought in one day, we found that nearly two thousand of Pompey's party had been killed.

Eodem fere tempore pons in Ibero prope effectus nuntiabatur, et in Sicori vadum reperiebatur.

About the same time it was reported (to us) that a bridge over the Ebro was nearly completed, and a ford over the Segre found.

REMARKS.

1. The imperfect sometimes expresses merely a conatus, i. e. an attempt, effort, or intention. E. g. Consules sedabant tumultus, sedan-

* The imperfect (erat, subleuēbant, &c.) of this example denotes permanent situation, in opposition to the comparatively momentary event indicated by the perfect instituit. So the tenebant of the preceding example.

† The language of Cæsar, who was himself engaged in the events described.

do interdum morēbant, The consuls were attempting to quell the insurrection, but in doing so they sometimes only excited it. Cato pro lege, quae abrogabatur, ita disseruit, Cato spoke in favor of the law, which it was attempted to abolish, in the following manner.

2. The imperfect is sometimes used to represent an action or condition as past, though still existing at the time of the narrator. E. g. Manus etiam data est elephantis, quia propter magnitudinem corporis difficiles aditus habēbant ad cibos, Elephants were furnished with a trunk, because, owing to the hugeness of their structure, they had (at the time they were thus furnished) a difficult access to their food.

3. In epistolary correspondence, the Romans frequently employ the imperfect or the perfect where in English we put the present. E. g. Haec scribēbam mediā nocte, I wrote (= I write) this at midnight. Novi nihil nunc erat apud nos. Quae ad eam diem, quum haec scribēbam, audiverāmus, inanīs rumor videbatur, — There is at present nothing new with us. What we had (have) heard up to the day I wrote (write), appeared (appears) to be an empty rumor.

4. Instead of the imperfect indicative, the historians frequently use the present infinitive, in order to impart animation to the narrative. E. g. Neque post id locorum Jugurthae dies aut nox ulla quiescere; neque loco neque mortali cuiquam aut tempori satis credere; cives, hostes juxta metuere; circumspectare omnia et omni metu pavescere; alio atque alio loco saepe contra decus regum noctu requiescere, &c. Subsequently to that time Jugurtha had not a single quiet day or night; nor did he exactly trust any place or occasion, or any of his fellow-men: he dreaded citizens and enemies alike; he suspected everything, and trembled under the influence of every species of apprehension, &c. This is called the Infinitivus Historicus.

5. The above remarks concerning the use of the imperfect apply to the indicative alone. On the sense of the imperfect subjunctive, see D. and E. of this Lesson.

FORMATION OF THE IMPERFECT TENSES ACTIVE.

C. The imperfect indicative active is formed from the root of the indicative present (am, mon, leg, aud), by adding the terminations, 1. ābam, 2. ēbam, 3. ēbam (īēbam), 4. īēbam; and the imperfect subjunctive from the present infinitive, by adding m. E. g.

1. { IND. amābam, lavābam, apportābam, dābam.
SUBJ. amārem, lavārem, apportārem, dārem.
2. { IND. mōnēbam, habēbam, studēbam, egēbam.
SUBJ. monērem, habērem, studērem, egērem.
3. { IND. legēbam, scribēbam, mittēbam, faciēbam.
SUBJ. legērem, scriberem, mitterem, facerem.
4. { IND. audiēbam, sciēbam, sitiēbam, esuriēbam.
SUBJ. audirem, scirem, sitirem, esurirem.

INFLECTION OF THE IMPERFECT ACTIVE.

D. The inflection of the imperfect active is exhibited by the following paradigms :—

FIRST CONJUGATION.

INDICATIVE.	SUBJUNCTIVE.
Amābam, I was loving.	Amārem, that I might, could, would, should love.
SING. āmābām āmābās āmābāt,	SING. āmārēm āmārēs āmārēt,
PLUR. āmābāmūs āmābātīs āmābant.	PLUR. āmārēmūs āmārētīs āmārēnt.

SECOND CONJUGATION.

INDICATIVE.	SUBJUNCTIVE.
Mōnēbam, I was reminding.	Mōnērem, that I might, could, would, should remind.
SING. mōnēbām mōnēbās mōnēbāt,	SING. mōnērēm mōnērēs mōnērēt,
PLUR. mōnēbāmūs mōnēbātīs mōnēbant.	PLUR. mōnērēmūs mōnērētīs mōnērent.

THIRD CONJUGATION.

INDICATIVE.	SUBJUNCTIVE.
(1.) Lēgēbam, I was reading.	Lēgērem, that I might, could, would, should read.
SING. lēgēbām lēgēbās lēgēbāt,	SING. lēgērēm lēgērēs lēgērēt,
PLUR. lēgēbāmūs lēgēbātīs lēgēbant.	PLUR. lēgērēmūs lēgērētīs lēgērent.
(2.) Fāciēbam, I was doing.	Fāciērem, that I might, could, would, should do.
SING. fāciēbām fāciēbās fāciēbāt,	SING. fāciērēm fāciērēs fāciērēt,
PLUR. fāciēbāmūs fāciēbātīs fāciēbant.	PLUR. fāciērēmūs fāciērētīs fāciērent.

FOURTH CONJUGATION.

INDICATIVE.	SUBJUNCTIVE.
Audīebam, I was hearing.	Audīrem, that I might, could, would, should hear.
SING. audīebām	SING. audīrēm
audīebās	audīrēs
audīebāt,	audīrēt,
PLUR. audīebāmūs	PLUR. audīrēmūs
audīebātīs	audīrētīs
audīebant.	audīrent.

So conjugate, — 1. Apportābam, I was bringing; curābam, I was ordering; dābam, I was giving; lavābam, I was washing; secābam, I was cutting. 2. Audēbam, I was daring; egēbam, I was needing; habēbam, I was having; jubēbam, I was commanding; vidēbam, I was seeing. 3. Arcessēbam, I was calling (fetching); convalescēbam, I was getting better; diligēbam, I was cherishing; frangēbam, I was breaking; mittēbam, I was sending; ponēbam, I was placing; scribēbam, I was writing; — capīebam, I was taking; cupīebam, I was desiring; fugīebam, I was fleeing. 4. Apertēbam, I was opening; esurīebam, I was desirous of eating; salīebam, I was salting; venīebam, I was coming, &c.

E. The following are more or less irregular in the formation of the imperfect:—

1. Ēram, I was. — Essem, that I might be.

IND. S. ērām, ērās, ērāt; P. ērāmūs, ērātīs, ērant.

SUBJ. S. essem, essēs, essēt; P. essēmūs, essētīs, essent.

2. Potēram, I was able. — Pōssem, that I might be able.

IND. S. pōtērām, pōtērās, pōtērāt; P. pōtērāmūs, pōtērātīs, pōtērant.

SUBJ. S. possēm, possēs, possēt; P. possēmūs, possētīs, possent.

So the remaining compounds of sum, viz.: adēram — adessem and interēram — interessem, I was present; prodēram — prodessem (from prōsum), I was conducing; praeērat — praeessem, I was presiding over; superēram — superessem, I was left, &c.

3. Ibam, I was going. — Irem, that I might go.

IND. S. ibām, ibās, ibāt; P. ibāmūs, ibātīs, ibant.

SUBJ. S. irēm, irēs, irēt; P. irēmūs, irētīs, irent.

So all the compounds of eo, viz.: adibam — adirem, I was approaching; antēbam — antēirem, I was going before; inibam — inirem, I was going in; praeteribam — praeterirem, I was going by; subibam — subirem, I was undergoing; transibam — transirem, I was going beyond. The compound ambio has ambibam or ambiēbam.

4. Völēbam, I was willing. — Vellem, that I might be willing.

IND. S. völēbām, völēbās, völēbāt; P. völēbāmūs, völēbātīs, völēbant.

IND. S. vellēm, vellēs, vellēt; P. vellēmūs, vellētīs, vellent.

So the compounds of volo: malēbam — mallem, I was preferring, and nölēbam — nollem, I was unwilling.

5. Fērēbam, I was bearing. — Ferrem, that I might bear.

IND. S. fērēbām, fērēbās, fērēbāt; P. fērēbāmūs, fērēbātīs, fērēbant.

SUBJ. S. ferrēm, ferrēs, ferrēt; P. ferrēmūs, ferrētīs, ferrent.

In like manner the compounds of féro: affērēbām — afferrēm, I was bringing; aufērēbām — auferrēm, I was carrying off, &c.

6. Fīēbam, I was becoming. — Fīērem, that I might become.

IND. S. fīēbām, fīēbās, fīēbāt; P. fīēbāmūs, fīēbātīs, fīēbant.

SUBJ. S. fīērēm, fīērēs, fīērēt; P. fīērēmūs, fīērētīs, fīerent.

So also the compounds of fio, viz.: calefīēbam — calefīērem, I was (being) warmed; frige fīēbam — frige fīērem, I was made cold; labefīēbam — labefīērem, I was shaken, &c. (Compare Lesson XXXIII. F. Remark.)

7. Edēbam, I was eating. — Edērem, that I might eat.

IND. S. ēdēbam, ēdēbās, ēdēbat; P. ēdēbāmūs, ēdēbātīs, ēdēbant.

SUBJ. S. ēdērēm or essem, ēdērēs or esses, ēdērēt or esset; P. ēdērēmūs or essēmūs, ēdērētīs or essētīs, ēdērent or essent.

8. The imperfect of queo, I can, and nequeo, I cannot, resembles that of a compound of eo. Thus, quibam — quirem; nequibam — nequirem. Of āio, I say, the indicative only occurs, āiēbam, as, at, &c. Inquam, I say, has only inquibam (inquibam) and inquibant.

9. The preteritives ōdi, I hate; memīni, I remember; nōvi, I know (am acquainted with); and consuēvi, I am accustomed, having a present signification in the perfect, employ the pluperfect in the sense of the imperfect. Thus,

Odēram — odissem,* I was hating.

Meminēram — meminissem, I was remembering.

Novēram — novissem, I knew (was acquainted with).

Consuēvēram — consuēvissem, I was accustomed.

Was I loving?

Egōne amābam?

You were not loving.

Nōn amābas.

What did he bring us?

Quid nōbis apportābat?

* The pluperfect is inflected like the imperfect of sum. Thus IND. odēram, ās, at; āmus, ātis, ant. SUBJ. odissem, ēs, et; ēmus, ētis, ent. So the rest.

He was bringing us wine, bread, and meat.	Apportābat nobis vinum, pānem, et cārnem.
Were ye opening the window?	Aperiebatisne fenestram?
We were opening it.	Aperiebāmus.
Were they sending us anything?	Nūquid nobis mittēbant?
They were sending (you) nothing (whatever).	(Vobis) nihil quidquam mittēbant.

When, while (conjunction). Quum, cum (c. Ind. and Subj.).

Do you listen when (while) I speak?	Auscultāsne, quūm ego loquor?
Does he stay at home when his father goes out?	Tenētne se dōmi, quūm pater ejus in publicum prōdit?
He does stay at home.	Tēnet sē vērō dōmi.
Did you write when (while) I was reading?	Scriptistine (eo tempore), quūm ego legēbam?
I was writing when you were reading (when you read).	Ego vērō scribēbam, quūm tū le- gisti (légeres).

F. Obs. The conjunction quum or cum, denoting a relation of time (in the sense eo tempore, quum, or tum, quum), is commonly followed by the indicative; but when the verb is in the imperfect or pluperfect, it may also stand in the subjunctive.

Did he stay at home when you went out?	Tenuitne sē dōmi, quūm tū in pū- blicum prodības (prodīres*)?
He did remain at home.	Tenēbat sē dōmi.
Did they study when they were at Leipsic?	Dederūntne operam litteris, quūm Lipsiae† dégerent (degēbant)?
They did study.	Dederunt.
What was he doing when you returned home?	Quid faciēbat, quūm dōmum re- vertisti?
He was playing.	Ludēbat.
Were you at Berlin when I was there?	Erāsne Berolīni eōdem tempore, quum et ego ibi eram (éssem)?
I was not there then.	Ego ibi eo tempore nōn fūi.
Was our friend sleepy when he came home?	Cupidūsne sōmni erat amicus nō- ster, quūm domum vēnit (vē- neret)?
He was sleepy.	(Sōmni cupidus) nōn erat.
What did your brother intend to do?	Quid facere frater tuus cogitābat?
He was intending to go into the country.	Rūs ire cogitābat.

* But the imperfect subjunctive thus employed does not express duration or continuance of an action or state (as does the indicative), but a mere statement of what has occurred (like the perfect indefinite). Compare B. Rem. 5, and also F.

† On the genitives Lipsiae, Berolīni, Lutetiae, &c., see Lesson LVI. B.

Were they hearing what we said?	Núm éa, quae diximus, audiebant?
They were not hearing (them).	Nôn audiebant.
Where were those men going whom we saw yesterday?	Quò ibant víri illi, quòs héri vídimus?
They were going into the garden.	Íbant in hórto.
Was he accustomed to write better than he spoke? (Cf. B. II.)	Scribebátne mélius quáml locútus est?
He did not write as well.	Scribêbat nôn acéque béne.
What was Socrates wont to say?	Quíd dicere solêbat Sócrates?
He was wont to say that we should know ourselves.	Dicêbat, nòs debêre nòsmet ípsos cognóscere.
Did our ancestors speak Latin?	Núm majóres nostri Latíne loquebántur (lóqui solêbant)?
No, they spoke English and German.	Nôn véro; Ánglice et Germánice loquebántur.
Did you come in order to see?	Venístine, ut víderes?

G. Obs. When the perfect indefinite is followed by a clause introduced by the conjunction ut, or by a relative, the verb of that clause stands in the imperfect subjunctive.*

I did come in order to see.	Égo véro véni, ut víderem.
Had he anything to eat?	Habuítné, quod éderet (éssét)?
He had nothing either to eat or to drink?	Nôn habuítné, quód éderet aut bíberet.
The boy fell from the roof, so as to break his leg.	Púer de técto décidit, ut crús frínget.†

EXERCISE 98.

Was he reading? — He was reading. — At what time? — He was reading this morning, between (inter) seven and eight o'clock. — Were you writing when I came home? — I was writing a letter to my brother. — Was he studying when I went out? — He was not studying when you went out, but when you were at the theatre. — Were you working while I was playing? — No, I was playing while you were working. — When was he writing the letter? — He was (engaged in) writing it at midnight. — Was he getting better when you saw him? — He was not getting (any) better. — Where were you, when I was calling the physician? — I was in my garden. — Were you opening the window when I was passing (praeteribam)? — I was opening it. — Were the children breaking our glasses? — They were not breaking them. — What did you do when I was going home? — I was reading the book which our friend has lent me. — What did your brother say when you entered his room? — He said nothing. —

* Not by the perfect subjunctive, which is generally used only with reference to an action just completed (with the perfect definite).

† The perfect frégerit would convert this into a statement of what has just occurred: — "The boy has (just now) fallen from the roof, so that he has broken his leg."

Were you present at the ball? — I was not present. — Was the boy diligent? — He was both diligent and well behaved. — Was he able to walk out this morning? — He was not able. — Were you at home when I received my money? — I was not at home. — Did he desire to see his father? — He was desiring to see him very much (valde). — Was the coffee (being) warmed? — It was not being warmed. — Was he willing to learn Latin? — He was unwilling to do so. — Who was eating? — Our neighbor was eating and drinking. — Did he come to see you? — He came in order to see me, and to give me a new book. — Had you anything to write to your friend, when you were in the country? — I had many things to write to him. — Have you nothing to eat this morning? — I have nothing. — Were they accustomed to write as well as they spoke? — They were accustomed to write better. — Did you speak French when you were in Paris (Lutetiae)? — I spoke French and Latin.

Lesson LI.—PENSUM UNUM ET QUINOUAGE-SIMUM.

OF THE IMPERFECT PASSIVE AND DEPONENT.

A. The imperfect tense of the passive voice is formed from the active, by changing m into r. E. g.

1. { IND. amābar, lavābar, apportābar, dūbar.
SUBJ. amārer, lavārer, apportārer, dūrer.
2. { IND. monēbar, habēbar, jubēbar, delēbar.
SUBJ. monērer, habērer, jubērer, delērer.
3. { IND. legēbar, scribēbar, mittēbar, caplēbar.
SUBJ. legērer, scribērer, mittērer, caplērer.
4. { IND. audiēbar, aperiēbar, erudiēbar, puniēbar.
SUBJ. audīrer, aperīrer, erudīrer, punīrer.

B. The inflection of the imperfect passive is exhibited by the following paradigms: —

So conjugate, — 1. Apportābar, I was brought; dābar, I was given; lavābar, I was washed; secābar, I was cut. 2. Habēbar, I was held (considered); delebar, I was destroyed; jubebar, I was commanded; videbar, I was seen (I seemed). 3. Arcessēbar, I was called; diligē- bar, I was cherished; frangēbar, I was broken; mittēbar, I was sent; ponēbar, I was put; scribēbar, I was written. 4. Aperīēbar, I was opened; erudīēbar, I was instructed; punīēbar, I was punished, &c.

REMARK. — Of the irregular verbs given on pp. 270 and 271, sum, possum, volo, and their compounds, have no passive voice. Of eo, the third person singular ibātur, irētur occurs impersonally.* Fēro and its compounds have fērēbar — ferrer regularly. The compounds of facio, which change the radical a into i, have a regular imperfect; as, interficiēbar — interficērer, while those which retain a generally take fiēbam — fiērem; as, calefiēbam — calefiērem. Edo has edēbar — edērer regularly, except in the third person singular subjunctive, where essētur may stand for edērētur.

Was I (being loved) ?	Egōne amābar ?
You were not loved, but your brother.	Tū nōn amabāris, sed frāter tūus.
Were you and he loved ?	An tū atque ille amabāmini ?
We were not loved.	Nōn amabāmur.
Were they despised ?	Ecquid illi despiciātui habebāntur ?
They were despised.	Sāne quidem, habebāntur.
Was the book (being) read ?	Legebaturne liber ?
It was read.	Sic est; legebatur.
Did they give you the book to be read ?	Dederūntne tibi librum, ut legeretur ?
No, they gave it to me to be torn.	Immo vērō mibi eum dederunt, ut laceraretur.
Was the bread brought to be eaten ?	Apportatusne est pānis, ut ederetur (essetur) ?
Did ye speak in order to be heard ?	Estisne locūti, ut audirēmini ?
No, we spoke in order to be understood.	Nōn vērō; locūti sumus, ut intelligeremur.
Were they (being) killed ?	Nūm illi interficiēbantur ?
They were (being) killed.	Nōn interficiēbantur.
Was the coffee (being) warmed ?	Calefiēbātne coffea ?
It was done.	Factum est vērō.

IMPERFECT OF DEPONENT VERBS.

C. The imperfect of deponent verbs follows the analogy of the imperfect passive. Thus : —

	INDICATIVE.	SUBJUNCTIVE.
1st CONJ.	Arbitrābar — arbitrārer, I was thinking.
	Comitābar — comitārer, I was escorting.
	Dominābar — dominārer, I was ruling.
	Hortābar — hortārer, I was exhorting.
	Morābar — morārer, I was staying.

* But the transitive compounds adeo, anteo, ineo, praetereo, subeo, and transco, have a regular passive voice; as, adībar — adīrer, &c.

- 2d CONJ. Fatēbar — fatērer, I was confessing.
Merēbar — merērer, I was earning.
Miserēbar — miserērer, I was pitying.
Tuēbar — tuērer, I was defending.
Verēbar — verērer, I was fearing.
- 3d CONJ. Fungēbar — fungērer, I was performing.
Labēbar — labērer, I was falling.
Loquēbar — loquērer, I was speaking.
Obliviscēbar — obliviscērer, I was forgetting.
Sequēbar — sequērer, I was following. ●
- 4th CONJ. Blandiēbar — blandirer, I was flattering.
Experiēbar — experirer, I was experiencing.
Largiēbar — largirer, I was lavishing.
Mentiēbar — mentirer, I was lying.
Partiēbar — partirer, I was dividing.

REMARK. — All these are inflected precisely like the examples furnished under B. The following phrases will illustrate them still further.

Whom were you exhorting ?	Quém hortabáris ?
I was exhorting my son.	Égo méum fílium hortábar.
Was he escorting his friend ?	Núm ille amicum síum comitabá- tur ?
He did not escort him.	Éum nōn comitabátur.
Where were ye staying ?	Úbi morabámini ?
We were staying in Paris.	Morabámur Lutétiae.
Were you earning (gaining) any good ?	Merebátisne quídquam bóni ?
No, I was acquiring less favor than hatred.	Ímmo véro mínus égo favôris quám ódii merēbar.
Were we defending your brother ?	Écquid nōs frátre[m] túum tuebá- mur ?
Ye were defending him really.	Vós éum tuebámini profécto.
When did they speak to the tailor ?	Quô témpore cum sartôre colloque- bántur ?
They spoke to him last evening.	Loquebántur cum éo héri vésperi.
Did ye follow any one ?	Núm quém (álicu[m]) sequebámini ?
We did not follow any one.	Núllum (néminem) sequebámur.
Were you flattering any one ?	Écquid álicui (cuíquam) blandie- báris ?
I was flattering no one.	Blandiēbar némini (núlli).
Were those men lying ?	Núm víri illi mentiebántur ?
Not at all, they were not lying.	Nōn véro ; mínime mentiebántur.
Did he come in order to talk with us ?	Núm ille vénit, út nobiscum loque- rétur ?
No, he rather came to flatter us.	Ímmo véro vénit, ut nobis blandi- rétur.
Did he say when he would come ?	Dixítne, quô témpore veníret ?
He did say so.	Dixit véro.

At first, in the beginning.

Afterwards, then.

Hereupon, upon this.

Did he say yes or no ?

At first he said yes, afterwards
no.

At first he worked, but afterwards
he played.

He came afterwards.

Upon this (then) he said.

Lesson LII. — PENSUM ALTERUM ET QUINGAGESIMUM.

OF THE USE OF THE INFINITIVE.

A. The infinitive may be regarded as a verbal substantive of the neuter gender singular number, and may as such stand either as the subject of a finite verb in the nominative, or as its object in the accusative.

REMARK. — The infinitive differs from regular verbal substantives, a) by admitting after it the case of the finite verb, and b) by indicating, at the same time, the completion or non-completion of the action denoted by the verb, i. e. by representing it as present, past, or future.

I. The infinitive is in the nominative, when it stands as the subject of an intransitive predicate. E. g.

Bene sentire recteque facere satis est ad bene beatæque vivendum.

Hoc exitiosius erat quam Vespasianum sprevisse.

Apud Persas summa laus est pulchre vendi.

Invidere (= invidia) non cadit in sapientem.

Ignoscere amico humanum est.

Nihil est aliud, bene et beate vivere, nisi honeste et recte vivere.

Good sentiments and correct conduct suffice to constitute a well-regulated and a happy life.

This was more pernicious than to have despised Vespasian.

Among the Persians, to excel in hunting is a matter of the highest praise.

Envy is below the character of a philosopher.

To pardon one's friend is human.

To live well and happily is tantamount to living honorably and correctly.

II. The infinitive stands as the object accusative after transitive or auxiliary verbs, and sometimes after prepositions. E. g.

Incere scis, Hannibal, victoriâ uti nascis.

Cupio te consulem videre.

Multum interest inter dare et accipere.

Quod crimen dicis, praeter amasse, meum?

A Graecis Galli urbes moenibus cingere didicerunt.

You know how to conquer, Hannibal, but not how to use your victory.

I desire to see you consul.

There is a great difference between giving and receiving.

What charge have you to make, besides my having loved?

The Gauls learnt the art of surrounding their cities with walls from the Greeks.

Solent diu cogitare omnes, qui magna negotia volunt agere.	All who wish to accomplish great objects, are accustomed to deliberate long.
Suos quisque debet tueri.	Every one is bound to defend his own (friends, &c.).
Sallustius statuit res gestas populi Romani perscribere.	Sallust resolved to write the exploits (history) of the Roman people.
Pompéium et hortari et orare et monere . . . non desistimus.	We do not cease to exhort and to beseech and to admonish Pompey.
Amicos neque armis cogere, neque auro parare quædas; officio et fide pariuntur.	You can neither make friends by force of arms, nor procure them with gold; they are made by an obliging disposition and by fidelity.

OBSERVATIONS.

1. The verbs most commonly followed by the simple infinitive are those signifying, — a.) WILLINGNESS OR UNWILLINGNESS, DESIRE, and the like; as, volo, nolo, malo, cupio, studeo, opto, &c.

b.) ABILITY OR INABILITY, KNOWLEDGE OR IGNORANCE; as, possum, queo, nequeo; scio, nescio; valeo; to which add disco and debeo.

c.) COURAGE OR FEAR; as, audeo; dubito, metuo, paveo, timeo, vereor.

d.) HABIT OR CUSTOM; as, assuesco, consuesco, insuesco, soleo.

e.) TO BEGIN, CONTINUE, CEASE, OR REFRAIN; as coepi, incipio; pergo, persevero; desino, desisto, intermitto, praetermitto; recuso, &c.

f.) PURPOSE OR ENDEAVOR; as, curo, cogito, decerno, constituo, instituo, statuo, paro; aggredior, conor, contendo, maturo, nitor, tendo, tento, &c.

g.) Passive verbs signifying TO BE SAID, REPORTED, CONSIDERED, BELIEVED, &c.; as, audior, credor, dicor, existimor, feror, negor, nuntior, perhibeor, putor, trador, &c.; also cogor, jubeor, videor.

REMARK. — Many of the verbs here enumerated are also followed by the subjunctive, with one of the conjunctions ut, ne, quo, quominus, &c. With some of them the latter construction is even the most common. (Cf. Lesson LIV.)

2. The infinitive is sometimes put after certain nouns, adjectives, and verbs, instead of an oblique case of the gerund. This construction occurs, —

a.) After nouns like tempus, consilium, studium, animus, ars, &c. (Cf. page 116.) E. g. Tempus est majora conari (= conandi), It is time to make greater attempts. Consilium erat hiemando continuare (= continuandi) bellum, The design was to continue the war by going into winter quarters. Fuerat animus Cheruscis juvare (= juvandi) Cattos, The Cherusci had the intention of aiding the Catti.

b.) After the adjectives parātus, insuētus, contentus, and some others.* E. g. Parātus audire, Prepared to hear. Vinci insuetus, Unaccustomed to be conquered. Contentus retinēre, Content to retain.

c.) After the verbs habēre, dāre, and ministrāre, in expressions like Nihil habeo ad te scribēre, I have nothing to write to you. Ut bibēre sibi jubēret dari, That (something) should be given them to drink. Ut Jōvi bibere ministraret, That he might give Jove to drink.

3. After the auxiliary verbs volo, malo, nolo, cupio, incipio, and others enumerated under Obs. 1, the noun or adjective of the predicate is in the nominative, when the quality denoted by it is regarded as already existing in the subject; but when the quality is not present, or missing, the infinitive following these verbs has a subject of its own in the accusative,† and the noun or adjective is likewise in the accusative. E. g. Volo et esse et haberi gratus, It is my wish both to be grateful and to be considered so. Vos liberi esse non curatis? Do you not care to be free? Judicem me esse, non doctorem, volo, I wish myself to be a judge, and not a teacher. Ego me Phidiam esse malle, quam vel optimum fabrum tignarium, I would rather be a Phidias, than the best joiner in the world. Timoleon maluit se diligi, quam metui, Timoleon wanted himself to be loved rather than feared. Gratum se videri studet, He strives to have the appearance of being grateful.

4. In historical narration, the infinitive is sometimes used instead of the imperfect indicative. (Cf. Lesson L. B., Rem. 4.)

The coin.	Nummus, i, m.
The copper coin.	Nummus cūprēus, i, m.

I do put it out.	Íta ést, expóno.
Have they put their stockings to dry?	Ecquid in sóle exposuérunt tibi- alia súa, ut siccécèrent?
They have not.	Nôn exposuérunt.

EXERCISE 100.

Hast thou promised anything? — I have promised nothing. — Do you give me what you have promised me? — I do give it to you. — Have you received much money? — I have received but little. — How much have you received of it? — I have received but one crown. — When have you received your letter? — I have received it to-day. — Hast thou received anything? — I have received nothing. — What have we received? — We have received long letters. — Do you promise me to come to the ball? — I do promise you to come to it. — Does your ball take place to-night? — It does take place. — How much money have you given to my son? — I have given him fifteen crowns. — Have you not promised him more? — I have given him what I have promised him. — Have our enemies received their money? — They have not received it. — Have you Roman money? — I have some. — What kind of money (quid nummórum) have you? — I have asses, sesterces, denarii, and aurei. — How many asses are there in a sesterce? — There are four. — What is the value of an aureus? — An aureus is worth a hundred sesterces. — Have you any German money? — I have crowns, florins, kreuzers, groshes, and deniers. — How many groshes are there in a florin? — A florin contains sixteen groshes, or sixty kreuzers. — Have you any oboles? — I have a few of them. — How many oboles are there in a drachma? — A drachma contains six oboles. — The silver mina (mina argenti) of the Greeks had the same value as the Roman denarius. — How many minas are there in a talent? — The talent contains sixty minas. — Will you lend your coat to me? — I will lend it to you; but it is worn out. — Are your shoes worn out? — They are not worn out. — Will you lend them to my brother? — I will lend them to him. — To whom have you lent your hat? — I have not lent it; I have given it to somebody. — To whom have you given it? — I have given it to a pauper.

EXERCISE 101.

Does your little brother already know how to spell? — He does know. — Does he spell well? — He does spell well. — How has your little boy spelt? — He has spelt so so. — How have your children written their letters? — They have written them badly. — Do you know Spanish? — I do know it. — Does your cousin speak Italian? — He speaks it well. — How do your friends speak? — They do not speak badly (non male). — Do they listen to what you tell them? — They do listen to it. — How hast thou learnt English? — I have learnt it in this manner. — Have you called me? — I have not called you, but your brother. — Is he come? — Not yet. — Where have you wet your clothes? — I have wet them in the country. — Will you put them to dry? — I will put them to dry. — Where have you put my hat? — I have put it upon the table. — Hast thou seen my book? — I have seen it. — Where is it? — It lies upon your brother's trunk. — Does my handkerchief lie upon the chair? — It does lie upon it. — When have you been in the country? — I was there the day before yesterday. — Have you found your father there? — I have found him there. — What has he said? — He has said nothing. — What have you been doing in the country? — I have been doing nothing there.

Lesson LIII. — PENSUM QUINQUAGESIMUM TERTIUM.

OF THE ACCUSATIVUS CUM INFINITIVO.

A. The infinitive may have a subject of its own in the accusative, but is then rendered into English by a separate clause introduced by the conjunction "that." E. g.

Orpheum poëtam docet Aristoteles nūquam fuisse.

An nesciebam vitæ brevem esse cūsum, gloriæ sempiternum?

Spéro nostram amicitiam nō egēre tēstibus.

Egōne mē audivisse aliquid et didicisse nō gaudeam?

Aristotle informs us, that the poet Orpheus never existed.

Or was I not aware, that the career of life is short, and that of glory eternal?

I hope, that our friendship does not stand in need of any witnesses.

May I not rejoice, that I have heard and learnt something?

B. The accusativus cum infinitivo may, like the simple infinitive, stand either as the subject of a finite verb in the nominative, or as its object in the accusative.

I. The accusative with the infinitive stands as the subject of a sentence, when the predicate is an impersonal verb, or the copula est, fuit, &c. with a noun or adjective. E. g.

Lêgem brevem esse oportet, quô facilius ab imperitis teneatur.	A law should be brief, so that it may be more easily remembered by the uneducated.
Omibus bonis expedit salvam esse rempublicam.	It is for the advantage of all good citizens, that the republic should be safe.
Fâcinus est, vinciri civem Românum; scelus, verberari; prope parricidium, necari.	It is audacity to have a Roman citizen bound;* it is a crime to have him beaten; it is almost parricide to have him killed.
Têmpus est, nôs de illâ perpétuâ jam, nôn de hâc exiguâ vitâ, cogitare.	It is time that we should already think of that perpetual life, and not of this brief one.
Aliud est iracundum esse, aliud iratum.	It is one thing to be irascible, and another to be angry.
Necesse est legem haberi in rebus optimis.	The law must be reckoned among our best possessions.
Victorem parcere victis æquum est.	It is just that the conqueror should spare the conquered.
Constat profecto ad salutem civium inventas esse léges.	It is manifest, that the laws were invented solely for the safety of the citizens.

REMARKS.

1. The accusative, with the infinitive thus used as the subject of a sentence, is equivalent to a noun in the nominative case, and may sometimes be converted into one. E. g. Salvam esse rempublicam = salus reipublicae. Lêgem brevem esse oportet = legum brevis necessaria est, &c.

2. The predicates most frequently employed in this construction are:—apertum, consentaneum, æquum, justum, verisimile, &c. est, it is manifest, proper, fair, just, probable (i. e. that such a thing should happen or be done);—tempus, mos, facinus, fas, &c. est, it is time, customary, a crime, right, &c.;—the impersonal verbs apparet, it is apparent; constat, it is agreed; licet, it is lawful; oportet, it behooves; opus est, there is need; necesse est, it is necessary;—or the third person singular of passive verbs, as intelligitur, it is understood; perspicitur, it is perceived, &c.

II. The accusativus cum infinitivo stands as the object-accusative after the following classes of verbs:—

1. As the object of a sensation, perception, or emotion, after verbs signifying to see, hear, feel, perceive, understand, think,

* Literally, "That a Roman citizen should be bound," &c. But in this construction it is often preferable to use the active infinitive in English: to bind a Roman, &c.

know, believe, hope, and the like, and also those denoting joy, sorrow, shame, anxiety, and wonder.* E. g.

Vultis nōs, si ita sit, privāri spē beatiōris vitæ. You see that, if that is so, we are deprived of the hope of a better life.

Sēnit ānimus sē suā vi, nōn ali-enā, movērī. The mind feels that it is moved by its own energy, and not by an extraneous one.

Pompēios desedisē terræ motū audivimus. We have heard that Pompeii was destroyed by an earthquake.

Eum tē ēsse fingē, qui ego sūm. Imagine yourself to be the person, which I am.

Ego illum periisse dūco, cui pēriit pūdor. I consider him lost, whose shame is gone.

Spērant, sē maximum fructum ēsse captiros. They hope that they will get the greatest advantage.

Cōscius mihi eram, nūll a mē commissum ēsse, quōd bōni cujusquam offēderet ānimum. I was conscious that nothing had been done by me to offend the mind of any honorable man.

Mēum factum probāri abs tē tri-umpho gaudiō. I triumph with joy that my deed is approved by you.

Doleo, nōn mē tuis lītteris certiōrem fieri. I am sorry that I am not informed by your letter.

Mīnime mirāmur, tē tuis praeclāris opēribus laetāri. We do not at all wonder that you exult in your distinguished deeds.

2. As the object of a volition, after verbs signifying to wish, desire, resolve, permit, command, compel, prohibit, or prevent. E. g.

Tibi favēmus, tē tuā frui virtūte cupimus. We favor you, and desire you to enjoy your virtue.

Ūtrum cōrporis, an tibi mālles vires ingēniū dāri? Which would you prefer (to be given you), strength of body or of intellect?

Rēm ad arma dedūci studēbat. It was his endeavor that the matter should be decided by force.

Postulābimus nobis illud concēdi. We will demand that that should be conceded to us.

Jūbet nōs Pythius Apōllo nōscere nōsmet ipsos. Pythian Apollo commands us to know ourselves.

Germani vīnum ad sē omnīno importāri nōn sinunt. The Germans do not allow, on any account, the importation of wine among them.

Aristōteles vērsūm in oratiōne vē-tat ēsse, nūmerum jūbet. Aristotle prohibits the use of verse in a discourse, but commands the rhythm.

* As, for example, audio, video, sentio, animadverto, cognosco, intelligo, percipio, disco, scio, duco, statuo, memini, recorder, obliviscor, and in general all the verba sensuum et affectuum.

3. After verba declarandi, or those signifying to say, write, report, confess, deny, pretend, promise, prove, convince, &c.* E. g.

Thales Milesius aquam dixit esse initium rerum.

Heródotus scribit Croesi filium, cum esset infans, locutum (sc. esse).

Solon sē fūre simulavit.

Confiteor, mē abs tē cupisse laudari.

Dicæarchus vult efficere, animos esse mortales.

Pollicetur Piso, sese ad Cæsarem itūrum (sc. esse).

Māgnū sōlem esse philosophus probabit, quāntus sit, mathemāticus.

Isócratem Plato . . . laudari fecit a Sócrate.

Thales, the Milesian, said that water was the first principle of things.

Herodotus writes that the son of Cræsus spoke when he was an infant.

Solon pretended to be a madman. I confess that I desired to be praised by you.

Dicæarchus wants to make out that souls are mortal.

Piso promises that he will go to Cæsar.

The philosopher will prove that the sun is large, but the mathematician (will show) how large it is.

Plato represents Isocrates as commended by Socrates.

C. The infinitive, either with or without a subject accusative, may stand as the appositum of a noun, adjective, or demonstrative pronoun. E. g.

Hæc benignitas etiam rei publicæ est utilis, redimi e servitūdine cāptos, locupletari tenuiores.

In cognitiōe et sciētiā excellere, pulchrum putāmus.

Illud sōleo mirari, nōn me tōties accipere tuas litteras, quōties a frātre méo afferantur.

Id injustissimum ipsum est, justitiæ mercēdem quaerere.

This is also a bounty of advantage to the commonwealth: to redeem captives from servitude, and to enrich the poorer classes.

We consider it honorable to excel in knowledge and learning.

I am accustomed to wonder at it (at this), that I should not hear as often from you, as I do from my brother.

It is the highest degree of injustice to make a trade of justice.

D. In impassioned exclamations and interrogations the accusative with the infinitive sometimes stands independently as the object of the emotion or passion expressed by it. E. g.

Mēne incepto desistere victum? Shall I, vanquished, desist from my purpose?

* The principal verbs of this class are dico, trado, prodo, scribo, refero, nuntio, confirmit, nego, ostendo, demonstro, perhibeo, polliceor, promitto, spondeo, &c. To these add facere, "to represent," and efficere, "to make out or prove."

Mē nōn cum bōnis esse ?

I not among the good and patriotic !

Tūne hōc, Atti, dicere, tāli prudentiā praeditum ?

You say this, Attius, a man of prudence like your own !

O spectāculum miserum atque acerbū ! Ludibrio esse urbis glōriam et pōpuli Romāni nōmen !

O wretched and mortifying sight ! The glory of the city, the name of the Roman people, an object of derision !

REMARKS.

1. After verbs of seeing and hearing, the present participle* or ut ("how"), with the subjunctive, is sometimes put instead of an infinitive, and the verbs of joy, sorrow, &c. are also followed by the subjunctive, with quod ("that" or "because").†

2. After verbs of seeing and hearing, the present infinitive may frequently be rendered into English by the present participle. E. g. Mugire (= mugientem) videbis sub pedibus terram, You will perceive the earth quaking beneath your feet. Majores natu audivi dicere (= dicentes), I have heard those older than myself say. Incustoditam lente videt ire (= euntem) juvencam, He sees the untended heifer walking slowly.

3. After one of the past tenses, the accusative with the present infinitive is equivalent to the English imperfect, and the accusative with the perfect infinitive to the English pluperfect. E. g. Vidi te scribere, I saw that you were writing. Vidi te scripsisse, I saw that you had written. Dixit Cajum laudari, He said that Cajus was (then) praised. Dixit Cajum laudatum esse, He said that Cajus had been praised.

4. The verb memini, "I remember," is commonly followed by the present infinitive, even when the act denoted by the latter is already completed. E. g. Memini Pamphilum mihi narrare, I remember Pamphilus telling me (that Pamphilus told me). Memini Catōnem mecum disserere, I remember Cato discussing the question with me (to have discussed, &c.). — But also by the perfect: Meministi me ita distribuisse initio causam, You remember that in the beginning I have made this distribution of my argument.

5. After the expressions satis mihi est, satis habeo, contentus sum, and also after me juvat, me pudet, melius erit, volo caveo, &c., the perfect infinitive is put to denote the result and estimate of a completed action, where the English idiom more commonly has the present. E. g. Contenti simus, id unum dixisse, Let us be content to have said (to say) this one thing. Melius erit quiescere, It will be better to have rested (= to rest). Sunt qui nolint tetigisse, There are those who are unwilling to have touched (= to touch). Commisisse cavet, He bows to commit, &c.

6. The present infinitive is sometimes put instead of the future. E. g. Nervii, quae imperarentur, facere † dixerunt, The Nervii said, that they would do whatever they were commanded. Cato affirmat, se rivo Pontinium non triumphare,* Cato affirms that, while he is alive, Pontinius shall not triumph.

* See Lesson XLIX. F. Rem. 3.

† Instead of se futuros (esse).

† Cf. Lesson LIV. H.

7. The infinitive passive of neuter verbs may stand impersonally without a subject, precisely like the third person singular passive of that class of verbs. E. g. His persuaderi non poterat, They could not be persuaded. Quum posses jam suspicari, tibi esse successum, When you might already suspect that you had been supplanted.

8. When, instead of the future infinitive, the formula futurum esse, ut, or fore, ut† is employed, the perfect and imperfect subjunctive following the ut represent the future action as incomplete or going on, while the perfect and pluperfect represent it as completed. E. g. Credo fore, ut scribas, I think that you will write. Credēbam fore, ut scriberes, I thought that you would be writing. Credo fore, ut scripsēris, I think you will have written. Credēbam fore, ut scripsisses, I thought you would have written.

9. The majority of the verba sentiendi et declarandi (cf. B. II. 1 and 3), which in the active voice are followed by the accusativus cum infinitivo, are in the passive voice followed by the infinitive alone, with the subject accusative in the nominative. But when they are employed impersonally, the subject accusative remains as in the active. E. g. Active: Dico te esse patrem patriae. Passive: (Tu) dicēris esse pater patriae. Pass. Impers: Dicitur, te esse patrem patriae (It is said, that you are the father of your country). Pass. Personal: Numa Pythagorae auditor fuisse creditur (Numa is supposed to have been a hearer of Pythagoras). Impers.: Creditur,† Pythagorae auditorem fuisse Numam (It is supposed that, &c.).

10. When the infinitive, preceded by a subject-accusative, is followed by another accusative of the object, it is liable to give rise to an ambiguity, which may be avoided by converting the infinitive active into the passive. Thus the oracular Aio, te Romānos vincere posse (I say, that you can conquer the Romans, or that they can conquer you), loses its ambiguity in Aio, te a Romanis vinci posse, or Aio, Romanos a te vinci posse.

11. The infinitive esse is frequently left unexpressed, especially in the compound infinitives amatum, amatūrum, and amandum esse. (Cf. Lesson XLVIII. A. and B.) E. g. Lycurgus auctorem (sc. esse) legum Apollinem Delphicum fingit, Lycurgus makes Delphic Apollo the inventor of laws.

12. The pronominal subject accusatives me, te, se, eum, nos, vos, eos, and the indefinite aliquem, are frequently omitted when they can be readily understood from the context. E. g. Ea, quae dicam, non de memetipso, sed de oratore dicere (= me dicere) putatis, I wish you to think, that what I have to say I do not say with reference to myself, but with reference to the orator. Subduc cibum unum diem athletae, ferre non posse (= se non posse) clamabit, Deprive an athlete of his usual food for a single day, and he will declare that he cannot endure it. Negāto sane, si voles, pecuniam acceperisse (= te acceperisse), Deny then, if you will, that you have received money. Hos clam Xerzi remisit, simulans ex vinculis publicis effugisse (= eos effugisse), These he sent back to Xerxes, under the pretence that they had escaped from prison.

* Non triumphaturum.

† Compare Lesson XLVIII. B. Rem. 1.

‡ The verbs of this class thus used impersonally are comparatively few. The most conspicuous of them are nuntiatur, traditur, creditur, intelligitur; dicitur, narratur, fertur, proditur, memoratur, cernitur, videtur.

EXERCISE 102.

Is it just that I should write (for me to write)? — It is just. — It is not proper that you do this. — It is manifest that he has written the letter. — Is it probable (verisimile) that he has sent us the book? — It is not probable. — Is it time that we should leave (abire)? — It is not yet time to leave; it is time to breakfast. — Is it right for me to go to the ball? — It is not right. — Was it a crime to have a Roman citizen bound? — It was a most audacious (audacissimum) crime. — Is it apparent that he was wrong (erravisse)? — It is not apparent. — It is agreed (constat) that you have been wrong, and I right. — Did it behoove you to work? — It did not behoove me to work, but it behooved you to write. — Is it necessary for us to learn Latin? — It is necessary. — Is it lawful for us to go the theatre? — It is now lawful. — Is it understood that he has arrived (advenisse)? — It is understood that he arrived the day before yesterday. — It is understood that he will arrive (adventurum esse) to-morrow. — Is it necessary for me to write? — It is necessary, but our letter should be brief.

EXERCISE 103.

Do you see that I am writing? — I do see (it). — Did he see that we were coming? — He did not see it. — Did they hear that I was reading (me reading)? — They did not hear you. — Does he hear that I have written to you? — He does hear (it). — Do you wonder that I should exult in your deeds? — I do not wonder at all. — Does he feel that he is mortal (mortalis)? — He does feel it. — Does he hope that you will come? — He hopes that I will remain at home. — Do you believe that he will read your book? — I do not believe that he will read it. — Do you know that that is so (rem ita se habere)? — I do not know it positively (non certe), but I believe it to be so. — Are you glad that he has recovered his health? — I am very glad (of it). — I am sorry that he is ill. — Does he desire you to send him the book? — He does not desire me to send the book, but the paper. — Do you wish me to go off (abire) into the country? — No, I wish you to remain in the city (in urbe). — Does he command us to write? — He does not command us to write, but to read the books which he has lent us. — Does he forbid you (vetāne te) to go to the theatre? — He does not forbid me. — Do you command me to know myself? — I do command (you). — Did he say that he was ill? — He said that he was thirsty. — Do they write that we have arrived? — They do not write (it). — Do you deny (negāsne) that I am right? — I do not wish to deny it. — Do you confess that you were wrong? — I deny that I was wrong. — Did he pretend to be asleep (se dormire)? — He did pretend (it). — Did he promise to come (se venturum)? — He could not promise (it).

Lesson LIV.—PENSUM QUINQUAGESIMUM QUARTUM.

VERBS WITH THE INFINITIVE OR SUBJUNCTIVE.

A. Many Latin verbs admit of a double construction, being sometimes followed by the accusativus cum infinitivo, and sometimes by the subjunctive, with one of the conjunctions ut (ut), ne, or quod, &c. With some of these the subjunctive is the rule and the infinitive the exception; with others the reverse is true. The construction of these verbs is elucidated in the following rules:—

B. Of the verbs signifying willingness, desire, or permission, vôlo, nôlo, mâlo, patior, and sîno are commonly followed by the accusative with the infinitive, and sometimes only by ut; but opto, concedo, and permitto may have either the infinitive or ut. Verbs of demanding or compelling (posco, postûlo, flagito, and côgo) are more frequently construed with ut. E. g.

Vôlo, uti mihi respondeas (instead of Vôlo te mihi respondere). I wish you to reply to me.

Ópto, te hoc facere, or ut hoc facias. I desire you to do this.

Augústus dñinum se appellari ne a liberis quidem passus est. Augustus did not suffer it, even from his children, to be called master.

Tribúni plêbis postulant, ut sacrosancti habeantur. The tribunes demand the privilege of being regarded sacrosanct.

Senátus P. Léntulum, ut se abdicaret præturâ, coëgit. The senate compelled Publius Lentulus to resign his prætorship.

REMARK. — Volo ut and malo ut may thus be employed instead of the infinitive; but nôlo ut is never said. The verb recusare, to refuse, (the opposite of concedo,) may have either the infinitive or ne.

C. Verbs denoting a resolve or endeavor to accomplish or prevent anything, are followed by the subjunctive with ut or ne, when a new subject is introduced; but when the subject remains the same, they generally have the infinitive, and sometimes only ut or ne.

Verbs of this class are statuo, constituo, decerno, tento, paro, meditor, curo, nitor, contendo, and the expressions consilium capio, in animum dūco or animum induco. But opēram do, I endeavor; id (hoc, illud) ago, I aim at, strive; nihil antiquius habeo (or dūco), quam, I have (consider) nothing more important than; and vidēo, in the sense of curo, have commonly ut only. E. g.

- Statuit ad tē litteras dāre* (or ut litteras ad tē dēt). He resolves to write to you.
- Statuit, ut filius ejus tibi responderet*. He resolves that his son shall reply to you.
- Qui sapientes appellari vult, inducant animum divitias, honores, opes contemnere*. Let those who wish to be called philosophers make up their minds to despise wealth, honors, and influence.
- Opera danda est, ut verbis utamur quam usitatissimis et quam maxime aptis*. It should be our study to employ the most familiar and (at the same time) the most suitable terms.
- Omne animal se ipsum diligit, ac simul ut ortum est, id agit, ut se conservet*. Every animal loves itself, and as soon as it is born aims at the preservation of itself.
- Id studuisti, isti formae ut mores consimiles forent*. It has been your endeavor, that your character should be like your appearance.
- Vulendum est igitur, ut ea liberalitate utamur, quae prosit amicis, noceat nemini*. We must see to it, that the liberality we indulge in be such, as will be a benefit to our friends and an injury to no one.

D. Verbs of requesting, exhorting, persuading, and commanding generally have the subjunctive with ut or ne; but sometimes also the infinitive.

The most common of these verbs are rogo, oro, precor, pelo; monēo, admonēo, commonēo, hortor, adhortor, cohortor, exhortor; suadeo, persuadeo, impello, perpello, excito, incito, impero. So also nuntio, dico, scribo, when they imply an order or command. E. g.

- Tē et oro et hortor ut diligens sis*. I beseech and exhort you to be diligent.
- Tē illud admoneo, ut quotidie meditare, resistendum esse iracundiae*. I advise you to consider every day that passion must be resisted.
- Monēo obtestorque, uti hōs, qui tibi genere propinqui sūnt, cāros habeas*. I remind and conjure you to cherish those who are akin to you by birth.
- Senātus imperāvit decēmviris, ut libros Sibyllinos inspicerent*. The senate ordered the committee of ten to inspect the Sibylline records.
- Caesar Dolabellae dixit, ut ad mē* Caesar told Dolabella to write to scriberet, ut in Italiā quā primum venirem.

Themistocles persuāsit pópulo, ut pecuniā públicā clássis céntum návium aedificarētur.

me (requesting me) to come to
Italy as soon as possible.

Themistocles prevailed upon the people to construct a fleet of a hundred ships at the expense of the public treasury.

REMARKS.

1. With the verbs of this class, the longer construction with ut is preferred by the prosaists of the best period, but later writers have more frequently the briefer infinitive.

2. Monēo, admonēo, and persuadēo, when they signify "to remind or to persuade that something is so" (and not "that something should be done") have the Acc. cum Inf.

3. The verbs of commanding (i. e. imperāre, mandāre, praescribere, edicere, decernere, &c.) that anything should be done, have generally ut according to the rule. The only exceptions are jubeo and vēo, which are commonly followed by the accusative with the infinitive (either active or passive). E. g. Jubeo te scribere, I command you to write. Vetat eum abire, He tells him not to leave. Librum legi jussit, He ordered the book to be read (i. e. that it should be read). Vetuit castra muniri, He prohibited that the camp should be fortified.*

E. Verbs signifying to effect, cause, or bring about, are regularly followed by the subjunctive with ut or ne.

Such are facio, efficio, perficio, evinco, pervinco, impetro, assequor, and consequor. E. g.

Fácito ut scíam.

Let me know.

Sol effícit, ut ómnia flóreant.

The sun causes all things to flourish.

Epaminóndas perfécit ut auxílio sociórum Lacedaemónii privaréntur.

Epaminondas caused the Lacedaemonians to be deprived of the aid of the allies.

A sólo impetrat, ut aliénas árbores álát.

He prevails upon the soil to grow exotic trees.

Quā in rē níhil áliud assequéris, nísi ut ab ómnibus audácia túa cognoscátur.

By which you will gain nothing else, except that your audacity will be known by all.

REMARKS.

1. The expression facere ut is sometimes a mere circumlocution for the same tense of the verb following it. E. g. Fécit, ut dimitteret milites, instead of dimisit milites, He dismissed his men.

2. Fac, in the sense of "imagine" or "suppose," and efficere, "to

* Yet jubeo ut hoc facias (or without the ut: — jubeo tibi hoc facias) and veto ne hoc facias likewise occur in harmony with the general rule.

make out" or "to prove," have the Acc. cum Inf.* But efficitur, "it follows," has sometimes ut; as, Ex quo efficitur, ut, From which it follows that, &c. Facere, "to represent," is usually connected with the present participle or the infinitive passive.†

F. Among the verbs regularly followed by the subjunctive with ut, are a number of impersonal expressions. They are,—

1. Those signifying "it remains," "it follows"; as, restat, relinquitur, superest, reliquum (proximum, prope, extrēmum, futurum) est, and sequitur. To these may be added accedit ut,* "add to this, that."

2. Those signifying "it happens," "it comes to pass"; as, accidit, incidit, fit, fieri non potest, evenit, usu venit, occurrit, contingit, est, "it is the case," and esto, "grant it, that."

Restat, ut his respondeam.

It remains now for me to reply to these.

Si haec enuntiatio nōn v̄ra est, sequitur, ut falsa sit.

If this proposition is not true, it follows that it is false.

Relinquitur, ut, si vincimur in Hispaniā, quiescāmus.

If we are vanquished in Spain. the only thing left us is to keep quiet.

Forte evenit, ut in Privernāte essemus.

It so happened that we were on the Privernan estate.

Fieri nōn potest, ut quis Rōmae sit, quum est Athēnis.

It is not possible for any one to be at Rome when he is at Athens.

Quādo fuit, ut, quod licet, nōn liceret?

When was it the case, that that which is lawful was unlawful?

REMARKS.

1. Like reliquum est, ut, we sometimes find other expressions with ut. Such are novum est, rarum, naturale, mirum, singulare, usitatum, necesse est, ut; verisimile, verum, falsum est, ut; aequum, rectum, utile est, ut. But the majority of these are more commonly construed with the infinitive. (Cf. Lesson LIII. B. I.)

2. Mos or moris est, and consuetudo est, "it is customary," "it usually happens," are often followed by ut, like accidit, &c.

3. Contingit not unfrequently occurs with the infinitive, sometimes even with the dative of the predicate. E. g. Mihi fratrique meo destinari praetoribus contigit, I and my brother happened to be chosen praetors.

G. Verbs denoting willingness, unwillingness, or permission, and also those of asking, demanding, advising, and reminding, are sometimes followed by the subjunctive WITHOUT ut or ne.

Such are volo, nolo, malo, permitto, licet; oro, precor, quaeso, rogo, peto, postulo; suadeo, censeo, moneo, admoneo, hortor. To these add curo, decerno, jubeo, mando; the imperatives fac, "see that," and cave, "beware," and the impersonal oportet and necesse est.

* Compare page 290.

† Compare page 290, note.

Velim fieri posset, ut, &c.	I wish it were possible that, &c.
Milo, te sapiens hostis metuat, quam stulti cives laudent.	I prefer an intelligent enemy fearing you to stupid citizens praising you.
Sine, te exorem, mi pater.	Allow me to entreat you, my father.
A te peto, me absentem diligas atque defendas.	I ask of you to love and to defend me in my absence.
Postulo, Appi, etiam atque etiam consideres.	I beseech you, Appius, to consider again and again.
Suadeo vultas, tanquam si tua res agatur.	I advise you to look, as if your own interests were at stake.
Herus me iussit Pamphylum hodie observare.	My master commanded to watch Pamphylus to-day.
Fac sciam (= facito ut sciam).	Pray let me know (inform me).
Cave credas.	Do not believe.
Frémant omnes licet	Every one is allowed to murmur.
Philosophiae servias oportet, ut tibi contingat vera libertas.	You should serve philosophy in order to acquire true liberty.
Virtus voluptatis aditus intercludat necesse est.	Virtue necessarily prevents the access of pleasure.

H. Verbs signifying joy, sorrow, surprise, or wonder are followed either by the accusative with the infinitive, or by quod ("that" or "because") with the indicative or subjunctive.

Such verbs are gaudeo, delector, doleo, succenseo, angor, poenitet; miror, admiror, glorior, gratulor, gratias ago, queror, indignor, &c. E. g.

Gaudeo, quod te interpellavi.	I am glad that I have interrupted you.
Dolebam, quod consortem glorioſi laboris amiseram.	I was sorry to have lost the sharer of the glorious enterprise.
Mirari se aiebat, quod non rideret haruspex.	He was accustomed to express his surprise, that the soothsayer did not laugh.
Tibi ago gratias, quod me omni molestia liberaſ.	I thank you for liberating me from inconvenience of every kind.
Gratulor tibi, quod ex provincia saluum te ad tuos receptisti.	I congratulate you for having safely returned from the province to your friends.
Queris super hoc etiam, quod expectata tibi non mittam carmina.	You also complain of this, that I do not send you the expected poems.

REMARKS.

1. Quod is chiefly employed in connection with past tenses. Quod with the indicative denotes a fact, and with the subjunctive a supposition or the opinion of another.

2. Quod is also frequently employed instead of the Acc. cum Inf. after substantives, and after expressions like "it is pleasant" or "unpleasant," "it pleases" or "displeases," magnum est, accēdit (= "add to this"), &c. It is thus frequently preceded by one of the pronouns hoc, id, illud, and is often equivalent to the English "the fact or circumstance that." E. g. Augēbat iras, quod soli Judaei non cessissent, The fact (or circumstance) that the Jews alone had not surrendered, augmented the indignation. Inter causas malorum nostrorum est, quod vivimus ad exempla, Among the causes of our miseries is the fact that we are living after the examples of others. Quod victor victis peperciit, magnum est, That the conqueror spared the conquered is great. In Caesare mitis est clemensque natura. Accēdit, quod mirifice ingeniis excellentibus delectatur, Cæsar is of a gentle and mild nature. Add to this, that (in addition to this) he takes the greatest delight in intellectual pre-eminence.

3. Quod is always put, instead of the Acc. cum Inf. or ut, in explanatory or periphrastic clauses, which (generally) refer to an oblique case of the demonstratives hoc, id, illud, or istud. E. g. Hoc uno preestamus vel maxime feris, quod colloquimur inter nos, et quod exprimere dicendo sensa possumus, We excel the brutes chiefly in this, that we converse with each other, and are able to express our sensations in language. Phocion non in eo solum offenderat, quod patriae male consulērat, sed etiam quod amicitiae fidem non praestitulerat, Phocion had not only given offence by the fact that he had mismanaged the interests of his country, but also because he had exhibited a want of faith in friendship.

4. Quod stands also in expressions like adde, quod, or adde huc, quod (add to this that, besides), and after facere in connection with an adverb like bene, male, &c. E. g. Bene facis, quod me mones, You do well to remind me. Humaniter fecit, quod ad me venit, He acted humanely by coming to me.

5. Quod stands with several different senses in constructions like the following:—

a.) At the beginning of a sentence, in the sense of "as to," "with respect to." E. g. Quod scribis te velle scire, qui sit reipublicae status, summa dissentio est, As regards your expressing a desire to know the state of the republic, (I have to report) the greatest dissension. Quod mihi de nostro statu gratulāris, minime miramur te tuo opere laetāri, As to your congratulating me on my present condition, I am not at all surprised that you rejoice in your own work.

b.) In the sense of "as far as." E. g. Tu, quod potēris, ut adhuc fecisti, nos consiliis juvābis, Do you assist us, as far as you can, and as you have done heretofore, with your advice and influence. Epicurus se unus, quod sciam, sapientem profiteri est ausus, Epicurus is the only one, as far as I know, who has dared to profess himself a sage.

c.) Instead of ex quo or quum, "since." E. g. Tertius dies est, quod audiui, &c., It is now three days since I have heard, &c. To these may be added tantum quod, "scarcely." E. g. Tantum quod ex Arpinati venēram, quum mihi litterae a te reddūae sunt, I had but just returned from Arpinum, when a letter from you was handed to me.

EXERCISE 104.

Do you wish me to go to the theatre with you? — I do not wish you, but your brother, to go with me. — Do you desire me to write to your father? — I do wish that you would write to him. — Do you allow (sinisne) me to go to the ball? — I do not allow you to go there. — Does he suffer (patitur) letters to be written by us? — He does not suffer it. — Did they compel you to resign your office (munēre)? — They were not able to compel me (me cogere). — Did he urge (flagitavitne) you to go out with him? — He did urge me. — Does he refuse to come to us? — He does refuse. — Have you determined to learn Latin? — I have not determined (to do so). — Has he resolved (decrevitne) to study French? — He has resolved (to do so). — What is he aiming at (Quid agit)? — He is exerting himself (Id agit ut) to commit this book to memory. — Do you endeavor (studēsne) to become diligent? — I do strive to be diligent and good. — Must we see to it, that we love our neighbor? — We must see to it by all means (quam maxime).

EXERCISE 105.

Do you ask me to remain at home? — No; on the contrary, I beseech and exhort you to go out. — Did he exhort you to go into the country? — No, he exhorted me to write a letter. — Do you advise me to resist passion (ut iracundiae resistam). — I do advise you. — I remind and conjure you to cherish those who love you. — Did he remind you that that was so (rem ita se habuisse)? — He reminded and persuaded me (mihi) that that was really (re vera) so. — Did they order any one to be killed? — They ordered the soldier to be killed. — Does he prohibit (vetatne) the reading of the book? — He does, on the contrary, order it to be read. — Did your father write you to come home? — He, on the contrary, wrote me to remain in the country. — Did you tell your servant to bring you the book? — I did tell him. — Does your master command you to attend to your studies? — He does command me. — Did you persuade him to read my book? — I could not persuade him. — Can it be that I am wrong? — It is not possible that you are wrong. — When was it the case that I was wrong? — Allow me to entreat you to write. — Pray let me know when you are coming. — Do not believe that he is your friend. — Are you glad that I have written to your friend? — I am delighted (delector) that you have done it. — Are you sorry that you have lost your book? — I am very sorry that I have lost it. — Is he surprised that I did not bring the doctor? — He is surprised that he does not come. — Do you thank me for having liberated you from trouble (molestiā)? — I do thank you with all my heart (toto pectore). — Do you congratulate me for having recovered? — I do congratulate you. — Why does his master complain? — He complains of this, that he is negligent and idle.

Lesson LV. — PENSUM QUINQUAGESIMUM QUINTUM.

OF IMPERSONAL VERBS.

A. Impersonal verbs are those which are used in the third person singular only, and without reference to any definite subject. They are in English commonly introduced by the pronoun it. E. g. Tonat, it thunders; pluit, it rains; oportet, it behooves.

REMARKS.

1. Impersonal verbs thus occur in all the conjugations, and in all the moods and tenses of complete verbs. E. g. 1. Constat, it is manifest; 2. nocet, it is hurtful; 3. accidit, it happens; 4. convēnit, it is agreed upon. — Constāre, to be manifest; tonūit, it thundered; nocēat, let it be hurtful, &c.

2. The majority of the impersonal verbs of the Latin language are also used personally, but generally with a modified or different signification. Many again admit a subject of the neuter gender, such as an infinitive (either with or without a subject accusative) or a clause used substantively, and sometimes a pronoun of the neuter gender. (Cf. Lesson LII. A. 1; LIII. B.)

3. Impersonal verbs generally want the imperative, except licet, which has licēto (let it be lawful). The rest employ the present subjunctive imperatively; as, Tonet, Let it thunder! Pudeat te, Be ashamed of yourself!

4. The majority want also the participles, gerunds, and gerundives. The only exceptions are the following, of which some, however, have acquired the force of adjectives: — decens, becoming; libens, willing; licens, free, bold; poenitens, penitent; — licitūrus, poenitūrus, pulchūrus, about to be lawful, to repent, to be ashamed; — pigendus, pulendus, poenitendus, to be regretted, ashamed of, repented of. To these add the gerunds poenitendi, pudendo, ad pigendum.

B. Impersonal verbs may be divided into several classes. They are: —

I. Those serving to designate the ordinary phenomena of nature, or the state of the weather. As, —

PRESENT.	PERFECT.*	INFINITIVE.
Diluculat,	diluculavit,	diluculāre,	it dawns.
Fulgurat,	fulguravit,	fulgurāre,	it lightens.
Fulminat,	fulminavit,	fulmināre,	it thunders.
Gelat,	gelavit,	gelāre,	it freezes.
Grandinat,	grandinavit,	grandināre,	it hails.

* Of some of these verbs the second root is not used.

PRESENT.	PERFECT.	INFINITIVE.
Lapidat,	{ lapidāvit, lapidātum est,	lapidāre,	it rains stones.
Lucescit,	{ luxit, illuxit, ninxit,	lucescere,	{ it grows light.
Luciscit,		luciscere,
Illucescit,		illucescere,
Ningit,	{ ———— noctescit,	ningere,	it snows.
Noctescit,		noctescere,	it grows dark.
Pluit,	{ plūvit, plūit,	pluere,	it rains.
Regelat,	regelāvit,	regelare,	it thaws.
Rorat,	rōrāvit,	rōrare,	it dew, dew falls.
Tonat,	tōnūit,	tonāre,	it thunders.
Vesperascit,	vesperāvit,	vesperare,	{ it becomes evening.
Advesperascit,	advesperāvit,	advesperare,

REMARK. — These verbs sometimes (though rarely) occur in connection with a personal subject. E. g. Jupiter tonat et fulgurat. Dies or coelum vesperascit. Lapides pluunt. Lapidibus pluit. Sanguinem pluit, &c. But this use is chiefly confined to the third person, and rather the exception than the rule. It is consequently unnecessary to supply a personal subject (e. g. Jupiter, Coelum, &c.) to account for the ordinary construction of these verbs.

II. The following verbs, denoting an affection of the mind, an obligation, or permission : —

PRESENT.	PERFECT.	INFINITIVE.
Miseret (me),	{ misērūit (rarely), misēritum est, misertum est,	misērere,	{ it moves me to pity, I have pity.
Piget (me),	{ pigūit or , pigūitum est,	pigere,	it chagrins, irks.
Poenitet (me),	poenitūit,	poenitēre,	it repents me, I repent.
Pudet (me),	{ pudūit, or pudūitum est,	pudere,	{ it shames me, I am ashamed.
Taedet (me),	{ taedūit (rarely), pertaesum est,	taedere,	it wearies, disgusts.
Oportet (me),	oportūit,	oportere,	it behooves.
Libet (libet),	{ libūit, or libūitum est,	libere,	it pleases.
Licet (mihi),	{ licūit, or licūitum est,	licere,	it is lawful, allowed.
Decet (me),	decūit,	decere,	it becomes.
Dēdecet (me),	dēdecūit,	dēdecere,	it misbecomes.
Liquet (mihi),	licūit,	liquere,	it is manifest.

REMARKS.

1. The subject of the emotion denoted by some of the foregoing verbs is put in the accusative ; as, Miseret me, te, illum, It moves me, you, him, to pity (i. e. I pity, you pity, &c.). Pudet nos, ros, illos, We, you, they are ashamed. So also oportet me, te, illum; deceat (dedecet) nos, vos, &c. But libet and licet are followed by the dative (mihi, tibi, &c.).

2. The verbs libet, licet, deceat, dedecet, and liquet sometimes occur in the third person plural, and assume a personal subject.

III. The third person singular of a number of complete verbs, which is frequently employed impersonally, but in a sense more or less different from the ordinary signification of these verbs. Thus : —

PRESENT.	PERFECT.	INFINITIVE.
Accidit,	accidit,	accidēre,	} it happens, occurs, comes to pass.
Contingit,	contigit,	contingēre,
Evenit,	evēnit,	evēnīre,
Fit,	factum est,	fiēri,	} it belongs to, pertains.
Attinet,	attinuit,	attinēre,
Pertinet,	pertinuit,	pertinēre,
Accedit,	accessit,	accēdere,	} there is to be added.
Conducit,	conduxit,	conducēre,
Constat,	constitit,	constāre,
Convēnit,	convēnit,	convēnīre,	} it is agreed on.
Debet,	dēbuit,	dēbere,
Displicet,	{ displicuit,	} displicēre,	} it displeases.
	{ displicitum est,
Dolet,	doluit,	dolēre,	} it pains (grieves).
Est (= licet),	fuit,	esse,
Expedit,	expēdivit,	expēdire,
Prodest,	profuit,	prodesse,	} it is expedient, advantageous.
Fallit (me),	fefellit (me),	fallere,
Fugit (me),	fugit (me),	fugere,
Praetērit (me),	praetērit (me),	praetērīre,	} it escapes my notice.
Incipit,	incēpit,	incipere,
Interest,	interfuit,	interesse,
Rēfert,	rētulit,	rēferre,	} it concerns.
Juvat,	jūvit,	jūvare,
Delectat,	delectavit,	delectare,
Nocet,	nōcuit,	nōcere,	} it hurts.
Obest,	obfuit,	obesse,
Pātet,	pātuit,	pātēre,
Placet,	{ placuit,	} placere,	} it pleases.
	{ placitum est,
Praestat,	praestitit,	praestare,	} it is preferable, better.
Restat,	restitit,	restare,
Solet,	sōlitum est,	sōlere,
Assolet,	assōlitum est,	assolere,	} it is usual.
Stat,	stētit,	stare,
Succurrit,	succurrit,	succurrere,

PRESENT.	PERFECT.	INFINITIVE.
Sufficit,	sufficit,	sufficere,	it suffices.
Suppedit,	suppedit,	suppeditare,	there is on hand (left).
Vacat,	vacavit,	vacare,	there is leisure ; it pleases.

REMARK. — The subject of these verbs thus used impersonally can only be an infinitive (either with or without a subject accusative) or an entire clause, but sometimes also the nominative of a neuter pronoun. (Cf. Lessons LII., LIII., LIV.)

IV. The third person singular passive, especially of intransitive verbs denoting motion, and which otherwise do not admit of the passive voice. E. g.

Curritur, there is running.	Dicitur, it is said.
Itur, there is going.	Traditur, it is related.
Aditur, there is approaching.	Scribitur, it is written.
Ventum est, some one has come.	Pugnatur, there is fighting.
Clamatur, there is calling.	Peccatur, there is sinning.
Favetur, there is favoring.	Persuadetur, there is persuading.
Fletur, there is weeping.	Certatur, it is contended.
Ridetur, there is laughing.	Sentitur, it is perceived.
Bibitur, there is drinking.

REMARKS.

1. The agent, by which the activity denoted by these verbs is exercised, is either left indefinite, or expressed by the ablative with a or ab (e. g. ab aliquo, a me, te, nobis, ab hominibus, &c.). It is most frequently to be inferred from the context. Thus: Ubi eo ventum est (sc. ab iis), When they had come there. His persuaderi non proterat (sc. ab aliquo), They could not be persuaded (by any one). Curritur ad praetorium (sc. a militibus), There is a rush towards the general's tent (on the part of the soldiers). Pugnatur omnibus locis, There is a general battle.

2. Among the verbs employed impersonally we must include the neuter of the future passive participle with est, erat, fuit, erit, &c.; as, amandum est, there must be loving (some one must love, it is necessary to love); scribendum fuit, it was necessary to write; currendum erit, it will be necessary to run. That this construction requires the dative of the agent (e. g. alicui, mihi, tibi, hominibus, &c.) is already known from Lesson XXV.

Does it thunder ?
It does thunder and lighten.
Does it not hail ?
It does hail.
Does it rain ?

Lesson LVI. — PENSUM QUINQUAGESIMUM SEXTUM.

CONSTRUCTION OF NAMES OF PLACES.

A. In answer to the question Whither? the name of the place is put in the Accusative with in or ad; but before the proper names of cities, these prepositions are commonly omitted. E. g.

In hórto, in theátrum, ad lócum públicum, ad urbem ire.	To go into the garden, into the theatre, to the public square, towards the city.
In Itáliam, in Germániam, in Americam, Lésbum proficisci.	To set out for Italy, for Germany, for America, for Lesbus.
Róman, Lutétiam, Londínum, Cartháginem, Athénas contendere.	To be on one's way to Rome, to Paris, London, Carthage, Athens.

B. RULE. — In answer to the question Where? the name of the place is put in the Ablative with in; but if the place is a city, the name, when of the first or second declension and singular number, stands in the Genitive; and when of the third declension or plural number, in the Ablative without a preposition. E. g.

In hórto, in theátro, in lóco público, in urbe ésse.	To be in the garden, in the theatre, in the public square, in the city.
In Itáliā, in Germániā, in Áfricā demorári.	To stay in Italy, in Germany, in Africa.
Rómae, Lutétiae, Londíni, Bero-líni, Lésbi vívere.	To live at Rome, in Paris, London, Berlin, on Lesbus.
Athénis, Syracúsis, Carthágine, Neápoli nātum ésse.	To be born at Athens, in Syracuse, Carthage, Naples.

C. In answer to the question Whence? the name of the place is put in the Ablative with ex or ab, but before the proper names of cities the preposition is commonly omitted. E. g.

Ex hōrtis, ex theātro, a lōco pū- blico, ab ūrbe venire.	To come out of the garden, out of the theatre, from the public square, from the city.
Ex Itāliā, ex Asiā, ab Āfrica fū- gere.	To flee out of Italy, out of Asia, from Africa.
Rōmā, Lutētiā, Athēnis, Carthā- gine expūlsū esse.	To be banished from Rome, Paris, Athens, Carthage.

REMARKS.

1. The names of cities sometimes occur with the prepositions in, ex, or ab, and the names of countries without them.* E. g. Ab Epheso in Syriam profectus, Having started from Ephesus for Syria. Ab Epidauro Piræum advectus, Conveyed from Epidauros into the Piræus. But this is an exception to the general rule.

2. The preposition ad may stand before names of cities only in the sense of "towards" or "in the vicinity of." E. g. Iter dirigere ad Muſinam, To direct one's course towards Modena. Tres viæ sunt ad Muſinam, There are three roads to Modena. Pugna ad Trebiam, The battle of (= near) Trevi. Istos libros lægit ad Misenum, He read these books near Misenum.

3. The names of countries rarely occur in the genitive, instead of in the ablative with in. E. g. Graeciae, Lucaniae = in Graeciā, in Lucaniā. Romae Numidiaequæ = et Romae et in Numidiā.

4. If the name of the city has an adjective or an appositum connected with it, then the Romans put a.) In answer to the question Whither? and Whence? the accusative and ablative with and without the usual prepositions. E. g. Doctas Athenas or ad doctas Athenas, To learned Athens. (In) Carthaginem Novam, To New Carthage. Ipsā Samo, From Samos itself. De vitiferā Viennā, From vine-bearing Vienne.

b.) In answer to the question Where? the ablative with in, where the genitive would otherwise be required, and the ablative without in in all other cases. E. g. In ipsā Alexandriā, In Alexandria itself. In Albā Helviā.† But without in: — Athenis tuis, In your Athens. Carthagine Novā, in New Carthage.

c.) When one of the words oppidum, urbs, locus, &c. stands in apposition with the proper name of the town, it is commonly preceded by the preposition; but in answer to the question Where? these

* The in, however, is regularly omitted in connections like the following: — Terrā marique, "by land and by sea," and before loco and locis, when these words occur in the sense of "state" or "situation"; as, hoc loco, multis locis, meliore loco, &c. So likewise before toto or tota, "the entire or whole"; as tota urbe, toto mari, totis campis, and never in tota, &c. Hoc libro, primo libro, &c. are said when the entire book is meant; but in hoc (primo, &c.) libro, when a particular passage is referred to.

† And never Albae Helviae; rather without in, simply Albā Helviā like the Albā Longā of Virg. Aen. VI. v. 766. Hence also In Novo Eborāco, or simply Novo Eborāco, and not Novi Eborāci, New York, which is as unusual as the Teani Apollis of Cic. pro Cluent. 9.

words are always in the Ablative. E. g. Tarquinius, in urbem Etruriae florentissimam, To Tarquinius, the most flourishing city of Etruria. Neapōli, in celeberrimo oppido, At Naples, a most celebrated town. But Antiochiae nātus est, celebri quondam urbe et copiosā, He was born at Antioch, a city formerly celebrated and wealthy.

d.) If the word urbs or oppidum precedes the name of the city, the preposition is always put, and the proper name stands as appositum in the same case. E. g. Ad urbem Romam ex oppido Thermis, in urbe Romā (not Romae), in oppido Adrumēto (not Adrumēti).

5. The poets frequently answer the inquiry Whither? by the simple accusative, where in prose a preposition is required. E. g. Italiam Lavinaeque vēnit litōra (sc. in), He came to Italy and the Lavinian coast. Speluncam eandem (sc. in) deveniunt, They come into the same cave. Verba refert aures (= ad aures) non pervenientia nostras, You utter words which do not reach our ears.

So likewise the question Where? by the ablative without in. E. g. Silvisque agrisque vūsque corpora foeda jacent, The foul bodies lie scattered through the woods, and in the fields and on the ways. This poetical license is imitated by the prose writers of the silver age, who frequently omit the in; as, medio agro, Gabinā viā, regione for in regione, &c.

6. The construction of the names of cities is adopted, — a.) By the names of the smaller islands, of which some have cities of the same name. E. g. Rhodi, Cypri, Corcyrae, in Rhodes, Cyprus, Corcyra. Rhodium, Cyprum, Corcyram, to Rhodes, Cyprus, Corcyra. Thus also, Chersonesum redire, To return into the Chersonesus. Chersonesi habūāre, To live in the Chersonesus. To these add Delos, Samos, Lesbos, and Ithaca. But the larger islands (e. g. Britannia, Creta, Euboea, Sardinia, and Sicilia) are commonly construed like names of countries.

b.) By domus and rūs, on the construction of which see page 132 and page 157.

c.) By the words hūmus, bellum and militia, which, in answer to the question Where? stand in the genitive. Thus, hūmi, on the ground.* But belli and militiae (in war, in the field) occur thus only in connection with dōmi; e. g. belli domique, in war and at home; dōmi militiaeque, at home and in the field; nec belli nec domi, neither in the field nor at home. To these add vicinae for in viciniā, in the neighborhood; foras and foris, out of doors; the last of which, however, have assumed the character of adverbs.

Almost, nearly.

Fērē, fērē; prōpe, prōpēmōdum.
(Adverbs.)

About.

Circūter, circa; fērē.

Scarcely, hardly.

Vix, paene. (Adverbs.)

* But in connection with a verb of motion, in hūmum, never hūmus, but rather hūmi instead of in hūmum. Hūmo occurs in the sense of from the ground. So also in bellum, ex bello.

How old are you (What is your age) ?	{ Quotum annum ágis ? Quot annos hábes ?
I am ten years old.	{ Décimum annum ago. Décem annos hábeo.
How old is your brother ?	Quotum annum ágit fratérculus túus ?

* Lit. "greater by or with respect to birth." So also grandior, either with or without natus.

† This is literally I am older than a man of twenty years. Instead of the genitive, the ablative may also be put, with or without quam. E. g. Major (or minor) quam decem annis, Over (or under) ten years of age. Major tribus annis, Over three years old.

‡ Accipere is "to hear and understand," more or less perfectly; intelligere

Do you understand me (i. e. what I say) ?	Núm intelligis, quid dicam ? (Lesson XXX. C. 2.)
I do not understand you.	Nón intéllico (comprehéndo), quid dicas.
Have you understood the man ?	Intellexistine, id quod dixit hómo ?
Yes, I have understood him.	Síne quidem, intelléxi.
Do you comprehend that man (i. e. his motives, &c.) ?	Intelligísne istum hóminem ?
I comprehend him but little.	Párum (mínus) intéllico.
I hear you, but I do not understand you.	Accípío quídem éa quae dicis, sed mínus comprehéndo.
The noise.	Streptus, ūs, m.
The wind.	Ventus, i, m.
To bark.	Latro, āre, āvi, ātum.
The barking.	Latrātus, us, m. ; gannitio, ōnis, f.
To hear, perceive.	Audire, percipere, excipere auri- bus (ALIQUID).
Do you perceive the noise of the wind ?	Percipísne ventōrum strépítum ?
I do perceive it.	Égo véro percípío.
Have you heard the barking of the dogs ?	Audivistine latrātum cánum ?
I have heard it.	Audívi.
Have they heard what we have said ?	Núm exceperunt, quae nós diximus ?
They have not heard them.	Nón exceperunt.
Do you seize my opinion ?	Cápisne méam senténtiam ?
I do seize it.	Cápio véro.
Whose dog is this ?	Cújus ést cánis hícce ?
It is the Englishman's.	Cánis ést Ángli.
To read.	Lēgo, ěre, lēgi, lectum.
To read through.	Perlēgo, ěre, lēgi, lectum.
To remain, stay.	{ Māneo, ěre, nsi, nsum.
	{ Permāneo, ěre, nsi, nsum.
	{ Mōror, āri, ātus sum.
To stay, abide.	{ Dēmōrāri, commorāri.
	{ Sūmo, ěre, mpsi, mptum.*

Has the son of my gardener taken anything from you? — He has taken my books from me. — What hast thou taken from him? — I have taken nothing from him. — Has he taken money from you? — He has taken some from me. — How much money has he taken from you? — He has taken from me almost two crowns.

Lesson LVII. — PENSUM QUINQUAGESIMUM SEPTIMUM.

OF THE CONSTRUCTION OF TIME.

A. In answer to the question How long? the noun denoting the duration of time is put in the Accusative, sometimes with the preposition per, “through.” E. g.

Unum tantum diem vivere.	To live for one day only.
Duas hebdomades, tres menses in urbe demorari.	To stay in the city for two weeks, three months.
Tres horas, sex menses, per triennium cum aliquo habitare.	To live with any one three hours, six months, for three (entire) years.
Noctes diésque alicui assidere.	To sit by one's side night and day.
Annum jam tertium et vicésimum regnat.	He is already reigning the twentieth year.
Multa saecula vixit Pythagoreorum nomen.	The name of the Pythagoreans was in vogue for many centuries.
Urbs Vêji decem aestates hîmésque continuas circumsessa est.	The city of Veji was besieged for ten successive summers and winters.

REMARKS.

1. Duration of time is sometimes also expressed by the Ablative. E. g. Triginta annis vixisse, To have lived for thirty years. Quattuordecim annis exilium tolerare, To suffer exile for fourteen years. But this is rather an exception peculiar to writers of the silver age.

2. The question How old? is commonly answered by natus, "born," with the accusative of the time elapsed since the birth of the individual in question. E. g. Unum tantum mensem natus est, He is but one month old. Decem annos natus sum, I am ten years old. On these expressions, compare page 311.

B. In answer to the question When? the point or period of time is expressed by the Ablative, without the preposition in. E. g.

Hoc die, hoc anno, hac hora, hac hebdomade.	This day, this year, this hour, this week.
Vere, aestate, autumno, hieme.	In the spring, summer, autumn, winter.
Die, nocte, vespere (vespere).	By day, at night, in the evening.
Anno post Christum natum milésimo octingésimo quadragésimo séptimo.	In the year one thousand eight hundred and forty-seven after the birth of Christ.
Pýrrhi temporibus jam Apóllo vérsus facere desierat.	In the times of Pyrrhus, Apollo had already ceased to make verses.
Timóleon proelia máxima natáli die suo fécit ómnia.	Timoleon won all his greatest victories on his birthday.

REMARKS.

1. In before the ablatives anno, die, hora, &c. rarely occurs. In tempore can only be said when tempus has the sense of "emergency"; as, hoc in tempore, in this emergency; in tali tempore, under such circumstances. The English "betimes" ("in time," "in season") is in Latin either tempore or in tempore. In this sense the adverbial tempori and temperi are also used, from which the comparative temperius, more seasonably, earlier.

2. The English "by day," "in the night," may also be expressed by interdiu and noctu, especially in connections like die ac noctu or die noctūque, by day and by night; nocte et interdiu, by night and by day.

3. Substantives which do not of themselves denote any division of time, but are still used to express that relation, are put in the ablative partly with in, but frequently without it. So initio and principio, in the beginning; (in) comitiis, at the time of the election; (in) tumultu, in an insurrection; (in) bello,* in the war; ejus adventu or discessu, at the time of his arrival or departure. So also ludis (without in) for tempore ludorum, at the time of the public games; and Saturnaliis, gladiatoriis, Latinis (sc. ludis), at the time of the Saturnalian, gladiatorial, and Latin exhibitions.

C. The time within which anything is done is expressed by the Ablative, generally without in, and sometimes by the Accusative with intra. E. g.

Ūrbes Africæ annis prope quingenta nullum Romanum exercitum viderant.

The cities of Africa had not seen a Roman army in nearly fifty years.

Quattuor tragoedias sexdecim diebus absolvisti.

You have finished four tragedies in sixteen days.

Frētum Eurīpi septies die reciprocatur.

He makes the sound of Euripus ebb seven times a day.

In† hōra sæpe ducētos vērsum dictābat.

He frequently dictated two hundred verses in an hour.

Intra decimum diem, quam (= postquam) vénérat.

Within ten days after his arrival.

D. The question How long ago? is answered by the Accusative or Ablative, with abhinc, "before this time," and sometimes by the Accusative with ante and the pronoun hic. E. g.

Abhinc dies trēs.

Abhinc tribus diebus.

Ante hōs trēs dies.

Abhinc annos sex

Abhinc viginti hōras.

Ante hōs sex mēses.

Three days ago. (Three days before this. These three days ago.)

Six years ago.

Twenty hours ago.

These six months ago.

* But when bello has an adjective, or a noun in the genitive, connected with it, the in is never put. E. g. bello Punico secundo, in the second Punic war; bello Latinorum, in the war of the Latins. So Senensi proelio, pugnā Cænensi, without in. Thus also in pueritiā, in boyhood, but pueritiā extremā, towards the end of boyhood; inesunte adolescentiā, at the beginning of youth.

† The preposition in is sometimes put in answer to the question How much or how often in a given time? But even in this instance the ablative may stand without it.

REMARK. — The question How long ago? is sometimes also answered by the simple ablative; e. g. paucis his diebus, a few days ago, within a few days before this time.

E. In answer to the questions How long before? and How long after? the time is expressed either by the Accusative or Ablative, with ante, "before," and post, "after." E. g.

Ante sex menses. }	Six months before (any given event).
Sex mensibus ante. }
Post quinque diebus. }	Five days after (that event).
Quinque diebus post. }

NOTE. — The words ante and post are usually put before the Accusative and after the Ablative. But they may also stand between the numeral and noun. The numeral may be either a cardinal or an ordinal. Thus the English "Three days before," and "Ten years after," may be expressed as follows:—

ACCUSATIVE.

Ante très dñes.
Ante tertium dñem.
Très ante dñes.
Tertium ante dñem.
Post decem annos.
Post decimum annum.
Decem post annos.
Decimum post annum.

ABLATIVE.

Tribus diebus ante.
Tertio dñe ante.
Tribus ante diebus.
Tertio ante dñe.
Decem annis post.
Decimo anno post.
Decem post annis.
Decimo post anno.

Fabius tertio anno ante consul fuerat.

Fabius had been consul three years before.

M. Volscius Fictor ante aliquot annos tribunus plebis fuerat.

A few years before that time Marcus Volscius Fictor had been tribune of the people.

Nèque ita multo post Seleucus a Ptolemæo dolo interfectus est.

But a short time after that, Seleucus was treacherously killed by Ptolemæus.

Homerus annis multis fuit ante Rómulum.*

Homer lived many years before Romulus.

Consul factus est annis post Rómam conditam trecentis duodecaginta.

He was made consul three hundred and eighty years after the founding of Rome.

REMARKS.

1. Post and ante are usually put after their ablatives, or between them, as above. Sometimes, however, they occupy the first place;

* This and the next following examples show that ante and post may (as prepositions) be followed by an accusative, indicative of the time before or after which the event has taken place. When this is the case, the preposition usually comes after the words diebus, annis, &c.

as, ante annis octo, post paucis diebus. So also post aliquanto, some time afterwards; post non multo, shortly after; post paulo, a little while after that; ante paulo, a little while before; instead of the more common aliquanto post, &c.

2. The word ante may also stand in the sense abhinc, "ago," "before the present time" (cf. D.), but not vice versa.

3. Ante and post, followed by quam with a verb, give rise to the same variety of expression. E. g. Anno ipso, antequam natus est Ennius, An entire year before Ennius was born. Numa rex annis permultis ante fuit, quam Pythagoras, Numa was king many years before the time of Pythagoras. Non multo post, quam tu a me discessisti, Shortly after you left me. Nono anno postquam in Hispaniam venerat, Nine years after his arrival in Spain. Cimon post annum quintum, quam expulsus erat, in patriam revocatus est, Cimon was recalled into his country five years after he had been expelled from it.*

4. After the ablative of time, and also after pridie and postridie, the words ante and post are sometimes omitted, especially before quam. Thus: Quemadmodum tertio anno rapuere (sc. ante), As they had plundered three years before. Anno trecentesimo aliëro, quam (= postquam) condita erat Roma, Three hundred and two years after the founding of Rome. Pridie quam (= antequam) occideretur, The day before he was killed. Postridie ad me venit, quam (= postquam) expectaram, He came to me the day after I had expected him.†

5. The point of time at which anything begins is expressed by the ablative, with ab or ex. Thus: ab urbe condita, from the foundation of the city; ab adolescentia, from youth up; ex eo tempore, from (since) that time; ex Metello consule (= ex consulatu Metelli), since the time of Metellus's consulship.

6. Relations of time are also expressed by ad or usque ad, "until"; in (cum Acc.), "till"; de, "at," or "during"; and sub, which cum. Acc. = "towards," or "about," but cum. Abl. "at," "by," "during." E. g. Ab hora octava usque ad vespem collocuti sumus, We conversed from the eighth hour until evening. De nocte surgere, To rise during the night. De multa nocte vigilare, To watch late at night. Sub lucem, Towards daylight. Sub luce, By daylight. Sub exitu anni, At the close of the year. Sub tempus edendi, Towards (near) dinner-time.

To bite, to wound by biting.	{ Mordëo, ëre, mïmordi, morsum.
	{ Morsu vulnerare (ALIQUEM).
Why? on what account?	Cur? quamobrem? quapropter?
	quã de causã?

* Thus the English "Two hours before (or after) he had died," may in Latin be expressed as follows: Duabus horis antequam (postquam) decesserat = Ante (post) duas horas, quam decesserat = Aliëra hõra antequam (postquam) decesserat = Ante (post) aliëram hõram, quam decesserat.

† Instead of quam, ex quo and quum, "since," may also be used, with post omitted; e. g. Triduo, quum has dabam litteras, Three days after writing this. So also the mere ablative of the relative; e. g. Octo diebus, quibus has litteras dabam, Eight days after the date of this.

ing the summer. — How long have your brothers remained in town (in urbe)? — They have remained there during the winter. — How much do I owe you? — You do not owe me much. — How much do you owe your tailor? — I only owe him fifty crowns. — How much dost thou owe thy shoemaker? — I owe him already seventy crowns. — Do I owe you anything? — You owe me nothing. — How much does the Frenchman owe you? — He owes me more than you. — Do the English owe you as much as the Spaniards? — Not quite so much. — Do I owe you as much as my brother? — You owe me more than he. — Do our friends owe you as much as we? — You owe me less than they. — Why do you give money to the merchant? — I give him some because he has sold me handkerchiefs. — Why do you not drink? — I do not drink because I am not thirsty? — Why do you pick up this ribbon? — I pick it up because I want it. — Why do you lend this man money? — I lent him some because he is in want of some. — Why does your brother study? — He studies because he desires to learn Latin. — Are you thirsty? — I am not thirsty, because (quippe quia) I have drunk. — Has your cousin already drunk? — Not yet; he is not yet thirsty. — Does the servant show you the room which he is sweeping? — He does not show me that which he is sweeping now, but that which he swept yesterday. — Do you breakfast before you go out? — I go out before I breakfast. — What does your brother do before he writes his letters? — He buys paper, ink (atramentum), and pens, before he writes them.

Lesson LVIII. — PENSUM DUODESEXAGESIMUM.

SYNTAX OF THE ACCUSATIVE.

A. The accusative serves to designate the direct object of transitive verbs, active or deponent, and stands in answer to the question Whom? or What? (Cf. Lesson XXIV. G.) E. g.

Filius patrem amat.

The son loves the father.

Déus mundum aedificávit.

God created the world.

Miltiades Athénas totámque

Miltiades liberated Athens and entire Greece.

Graeciam liberávit.

Glória virtutem tanquam umbra sequitur.

Glory follows valor like a shade.

REMARKS.

1. When the verb is changed into the passive voice, the object-accusative becomes the subject of the verb. E. g. Pater a filio amâ-

tur. — Mundus a Deo aedificatur. — Athenae totaque Graecia a Milittade liberatae sunt. This conversion into the passive voice may always take place without any material alteration of the sense.

2. In addition to the accusative of the immediate object, many active verbs admit of another noun in the Genitive, Dative, or Ablative. These verbs are then said to govern two cases. E. g. Pater filio (dat.) librum dedit. — Me civitatis morum piget taedetque, I am weary of, and disgusted with, the morals of the city. Democritus oculis (abl.) se privavit, Democritus deprived himself of his eyes. Cf. Lessons LXI., LXVII., LXXI.

3. The object of an active verb is frequently an infinitive, with or without a subject-accusative, or a clause introduced by a relative or one of the conjunctions ut, ne, quo, &c. (Cf. Lessons LII., LIII., LIV.) E. g. Ennius deos esse censet, Ennius is of opinion that the gods exist. Ante senectutem curavi, ut bene viverem, Before old age, my aim was to lead a good life.

4. The accusative after transitive verbs is sometimes entirely suppressed. This is the case, — a.) When the object is designedly left indefinite, in order to render the act alone conspicuous. E. g. Ego semper amavi, et si quid faciam nunc quoque quaeris, amo, I have always loved, and if you inquire what I am doing now, my answer is, "I love." Non sine summo dolore scribo, I write with the deepest sorrow. Tarquinius Delphos mittere statuit, Tarquin resolves to send to Delphi.

b.) When it has already been expressed, and can easily be understood from the context. E. g. Complexus Coriolanus suos dimisit, sc. eos, Coriolanus, having embraced his family, dismissed them. Et scribo aliquid et lego; sed cum lego, ex comparatione sentio, quam male scribam, I write and read something at the same time; but when I read, I perceive from the comparison how badly I write. So frequently the pronouns me, te, se, eum, nos, &c.

c.) In certain technical expressions, such as movère, sc. castra, to decamp; appellère, conscendère, solvère, sc. navem, to land, embark, set sail; ducère, sc. exercitum, to march (an army); merère, sc. stipendia, to serve as a soldier; obire, sc. diem supremum, to die; agère, sc. vitam, to live. In the same manner the object-infinitive is often omitted; as, In Pompejanum statim cogito, sc. proficisci, I contemplate going to my estate near Pompeii immediately. Ut solet, sc. fieri, As it commonly happens.

5. The verb itself is sometimes omitted. This occurs, — a.) In expressions like Quid multa? (See page 154.) Quid? quod . . . for quid dicam de eo, quod, What shall I say to the fact that. Quae cum dixisset Cotta, finem, sc. fecit, When Cotta had said this, he concluded his speech. Sus Minervam, sc. docet, The dunce instructs the sage.

b.) After the formulas nihil aliud (amplius or minus) quam, "only," "nothing more or less than," "nothing but," where one of the tenses of facere may be supplied. Nihil aliud (sc. fēcū) quam bellum comparavi, His only thought was the preparation of a war. Illā nocte nihil aliud (sc. factum est) quam vigilātum in urbe, That night there was nothing but watching in the city (i. e. every one kept awake).

c.) In a sentence left unfinished by aposiopesis.* E. g. Quos ego . . . Whom I will . . .

6. A transitive verb with its object may frequently be converted into a single verb denoting the same thing. E. g. opus facere = operāri; auxilium ferre = auxiliāri; lachrimas fundere = lachrimāri; navem agere = navigāre, &c.

7. The accusative sometimes depends upon a verbal noun or adjective, as the case governed by the verbs from which they are derived. Such are, — a.) A few verbal nouns in tio; as, domum itio or reditio, a going or returning home. Quid tibi hanc curatio est rem? What is this business to you? But this usage is confined to Plautus.

b.) Verbal adjectives in bundus. E. g. Populabundus agros ad oppidum pervenit, Pillaging the fields, he came into the vicinity of the city. Mirabundi velut somnii vanam speciem, As if wondering at the fleeting visions of a dream. Sometimes also those in lus; as, Facta consultiæque ejus æmulus erat.

c.) The verbals ōsus, exōsus, and perōsus, "hating," "detesting," and pertaesus, "weary of," "disgusted with." E. g. Quum exosus arma in otio ageret, When, from a dislike for war, he lived in retirement. Pertaesus ignaviam suam, Weary of his own want of energy.

B. A number of neuter verbs are sometimes followed by an object-accusative derived from the same root, and of a signification similar to their own.

Such are cursum currere, dolorem dolere, furorem furere, gaudium gaudere, jusjurandum jurare, insaniam insanire, pugnam (or proelium) pugnare, risum ridere, somnium somniare, saporem sapere, vitam vivere. In all these instances, however, the object-accusative has generally an adjective connected with it, or is otherwise modified. E. g.

Mirum somniavi somnium.

I had a singular dream.

Juravi verissimum pulcherrimumque jusjurandum.

I have sworn most conscientiously and honorably.

Siccus Dentatus triumphavit cum imperatoribus suis triumphos novem.

Siccus Dentatus, with his generals, was honored with nine triumphs.

REMARK. — Instead of a noun of the same root with the verb, one of kindred signification merely is often put. E. g. Proelia pugnare, to fight battles; alĕam ludĕre, to play at dice; saltĕre Turnum or Cyclopa, to dance the Turnus or the Cyclops; Bacchanĕlia vivĕre, to lead a Bacchanalian life; Olympia vincĕre or coronĕri, to conquer, to be crowned at the Olympic games; judiciūm vincĕre, to gain one's case.

* A rhetorical figure employed in abrupt transitions, as in the example given. The more frequent grammatical omissions of verbs or objects (in all the preceding instances) are called ellipsis.

C. Many verbs, though commonly neuter, are sometimes employed transitively in a different sense, and then admit an object in the accusative. Such are, —

1. A number of verbs expressive of emotions, as of joy, sorrow, fear, shame. E. g. dolĕre, erubescĕre, flĕre, gaudĕre, gemĕre, horrĕre, lamentĕre, lacrimĕre, lugĕre, moerĕre, plorĕre, quĕri, &c., which, when followed by ALIQUEM or ALIQUID, then signify "to be grieved or to rejoice at," "to lament or weep over." Thus: Flĕre necem filii, To weep over the death of a son. Doleo casum luctumque tuum, I am pained by your calamity and sorrow.

2. Certain verbs of sensation, such as olĕre, redolĕre, sapĕre, and resipĕre, when they signify "to smell of," "to taste after." E. g. Olet unguenta, He smells of ointment. Piscis ipsum mare sapit, The fish tastes as salt as the sea itself. Redolet antiquitatem. — So also anhelĕre crudelitatem, to breathe cruelty; sitire sanguinem, to thirst after blood; sonĕre quiddam peregrinum, to emit a strange sound.

3. A variety of others, of which the following are the most common: — ambulĕre, to walk, act. to walk upon; dormire, to sleep, act. to spend in sleep; fastidire, to be haughty, act. to disdain; festinĕre and properĕre, to make haste, act. to hasten or accelerate; ludĕre, to play (sport), act. to play a game, or to act; manĕre, to remain, act. to wait for; navigĕre, to sail, act. to navigate; ridĕre, to laugh, act. to deride; vigilĕre, to watch, act. to spend in watching; vivĕre, to live, act. to live = to spend.

4. The poets also say pallĕre, pavĕre, tremĕre, trepidĕre ALIQUID, instead of timĕre ALIQUID, "to dread anything"; and ardĕre, calĕre, tepĕre, perire, deperire ALIQUAM, instead of amĕre ALIQUAM, "to be in love with one."

REMARK. — Many neuter verbs admit of the accusative of a pronoun or adjective (of the neuter gender), without ever occurring with that of a substantive. E. g. Hoc laetor, I am rejoiced at it. Id tibi succenseo, I am displeased with you on this account. Hoc labōro, id operam do, It is my endeavor or aim. Hoc non dubito, I have no doubt about it. Illud tibi non assentior, On this point I do not agree with you. Unum omnes student, They all are aiming at one thing. On these accusatives, compare Lesson LIX. D. Remark 2.

Lesson LIX. — PENSUM UNDESEXAGESIMUM.

ACCUSATIVE AFTER VERBS. — Continued.

A. Many neuter verbs, especially those denoting motion, become transitive by composition with one of the prepositions ad, ante, circum, con, in, inter, ob, per, praeter, sub, subter, super, supra, or trans, and take an object in the accusative.

Such are ire, meāre, cedere, gradi, radere, currere, ambulāre, volare, fluere, labi, scandere, salire, vagari, venire, &c. So also loqui, latrâre, vigilâre, and a few denoting rest or situation ; as, jacêre, stâre, sedêre, &c. The following may serve as specimens :—

ACTIVE.		NEUTER.
adire,	to approach,	from ire,	to go.
alloqui,	to address,	" loqui,	to speak.
antegredi,	to precede,	" gradi,	to walk.
circumsedêre,	to surround,	" sedêre,	to sit.
incredpâre,	to chide,	" crepâre,	to clatter.
irridêre,	to deride,	" ridêre,	to laugh.
interjacêre,	to be situate between,	" jacêre,	to lie.
obire,	to undergo,	" ire,	to go.
obsidêre,	to besiege,	" sedêre,	to sit.
percurrêre,	to run (pass) through,	" currêre,	to run.
præfluêre,	to flow before,	" fluêre,	to flow.
praetervolâre,	to hurry by,	" volâre,	to fly.
subire,	to undergo,	" ire,	to go.
subterlabi,	to glide under,	" labi,	to glide.
supereminêre,	to overtop,	" eminêre,	to project.
suprascandêre,	to climb over,	" scandêre,	to climb.
transcendêre,	to cross,	" "	"
transvolâre,	to fly (pass) over,	" volâre,	to fly.

EXAMPLES.

Tē nūc alloquor, Africâne.	I address you now, Africanus.
Cāto allatrâre Scipiōnis magnitudinem solitus erat.	Cato had been in the habit of detracting from Scipio's greatness.
Saguntum Carthaginienses circumsedent.	The Carthaginians are besieging Saguntum.
Amnis mare infūxit.	The river emptied into the sea.
Euphrâtes Babylōniam mēdiam pērmeat.	The Euphrates flows through the heart of Babylon.
Pōpulus sōlet nonnūquam dignos præterire.	The people sometimes slight the meritorious.
Qui vēnit hic flūctus, fluctus (Acc. pl.) superēminet omnes.	The wave, which now approaches, overtops all others.
Nūm tūm nōmen vel Caucāsum transcendere pōtuit, vel Gangem transnatāre ?	Has your name passed beyond the Caucasus, or swum beyond the Ganges ?

REMARKS.

1. Of the verbs above enumerated, those compounded with circum, per, praeter, trans, and super alone are regularly transitive, and occur also in the passive. The rest are only so when used in a secondary or figurative sense. E. g. Circumsedemur, We are besieged. Tamēsis transiri potest, The Thames can be passed. Fossa transilitur, The ditch is leaped over. Societas initur, A society is formed. Mors pro patriâ obitur, Death is suffered for the fatherland.

2. Those compounded with ad, ante, in, inter, ob, prae, sub, super, and supra may stand as transitive verbs, but they remain more coumonly neuter, and are followed either by the dative (according to page 157, G.) or by the accusative, with the preposition repeated.* E. g. In spem libertatis ingredior, I indulge the hope of liberty. Ad me adtre quosdam memini, I remember certain persons coming to me. Aqua subit in coelum, The water rises into the atmosphere.

3. To the neuter verbs, which sometimes become transitive, must be added those compounded with the prepositions a, ab, cum, e, and ex. E. g. Colloquium abnuere, to decline an interview; societatem coire, to enter into association with; edormire crapulam, to sleep off the effects of drinking; egredi veritatem, to go beyond the limits of the truth; convenire aliquem, to meet any one (speak with one); altitudinem excedere, to exceed a certain height, &c.

4. Transitive verbs, compounded with the prepositions ad, circum, prae, and trans, are sometimes followed by two accusatives, of which one depends upon the verb and the other on the preposition. E. g. Corcyram pedum mille secum advexerunt, They brought along with them a thousand infantry to Corcyra. Allobroges omnia sua praesidia circumduxit, He led all his forces around the Allobroges. Argesilaus Hellespontum copias trajecit, Agesilaus sent his troops across the Hellespont.

B. The impersonal verbs poenitet, piget, pudet, taedet, miseret, and veritum est are followed by the accusative of the person affected by the emotions denoted by them. E. g.

Poenitet mē (tē, eum).	I am (you are, he is) sorry.†
Piget mē (tē, eum).	I am (you are, he is) chagrined.
Pudet nōs (vōs, eos).	We (ye, they) are ashamed.
Taedet nōs (vōs, eos).	We (you, they) are disgusted.
Miseret mē (tē, eum).	I (you) pity, he pities.
Veritum est mē.	I have been afraid.

REMARK.—The object of the emotion denoted by these verbs stands in the genitive. E. g. Sapientiam nunquam sui poenitet. — Me tui pudet. — Te aliorum miseret. (See Lesson LXVII. C.)

C. The impersonal verbs juvat, delectat, fallit, fugit, praeterit, dēcet, lūet, and oportet are likewise followed by the accusative of the person. E. g.

Juvat or delēctat mē, tē, nōs. It delights me, you, us (I am delighted, &c.).

* The preposition, however, is also frequently a different one; as, in aedes accedēre, ad urbem subire, ad aures praecedere. Hence many of these verbs are susceptible of several different constructions; as, subire jugum, to submit to the yoke; subire montem or ad montem, to come up (to) the mountain; subire in coelum, to rise up into the atmosphere; subire muro or murum, to come up close to the wall.

† This may literally be rendered by It moves me to regret, chagrin, shame, disgust, pity, fear.

Fállit, fúgit, praéterit mē.	It escapes my memory or notice, I do not know.
Mē nōn fúgit, praéterit.	I know very well.
Némīnem véstrum praéterit.	Every one of you is aware.
Tē hilári ánimo esse, válde mē juvat.	I am delighted that you are in good spirits.
Nōs, nīsi mē fállit, jacébitus.	Unless I am mistaken, we shall fail.
Nōn mē fúgit, vétera exémpla pro fictis fábulis jam habéri.	I know very well, that the examples of antiquity are now regarded as fictions.
Nōn mē praéterit, usum ésse óptimum dicéndi magístrum.	I am aware, that practice is the best teacher of oratory.
Quós nōn véritum est in voluptáte súmmum bónum póñere.	Who were not afraid to assert pleasure to be the highest good

REMARKS.

1. The impersonal verbs of this class differ from those of B by sometimes admitting a subject nominative, although never a personal one. E. g. Candida pax homines, trux deceat ira feras, Gentle peace becomes men, ruthless ferocity wild beasts.

2. Decet, "it becomes," with its compounds, condecet, dedecet, indecet, and oportet, never occur with the accusative alone, but always with an infinitive or with the Acc. cum Inf., and oportet sometimes with the subjunctive. E. g. Decet verecundum esse adolescentem, It is proper for a young man to be respectful. Oratorem simulare non dedecet, It is not improper for an orator to dissemble. Eum oportet amnem quaerere sibi, He must seek a river. Me ipsum ames oportet, non mea, You must love me, and not my possessions. Suis te oportet illecebris ipsa virtus trahat ad verum decus, Virtue herself must attract you with her own charms to real honor.

3. Decet and latet are sometimes construed with the dative, but only by the older writers. Thus, Ita nobis decet, Thus it becomes us. Latet mihi, I am ignorant of the fact.

D. After verbs, participles, and adjectives, the accusative is sometimes put instead of the ablative, to mark the relation expressed by the English in, as to, with respect to. E. g.

Équus micat auribus et tremat artus.	The horse moves its ears and trembles in its limbs.
Pontificem praefere jussit verba.	He ordered the pontifex to say the words before him.*
Ingénium placidam mollietur ab arte.	Our mind is rendered pliable and soft by placid art.†
Virgo inficitur teneras rubore genas.	The maiden's tender cheeks are suffused with blushes.‡

* Lit. to go before (or first) as to the words to be pronounced.

† Lit. We are rendered pliable as to our minds.

‡ Lit. The maiden is suffused as to her cheeks.

Adversum fémur trágulā grávitèr	He fell, heavily wounded in the
íctus cécidit.	front of his thigh by a javelin.
Táctā cūrā ánimus incénsus.	His mind inflamed with silent anxiety.
Núdae bráchia ac lacértos.	Bare as to their arms and shoulders.

REMARKS.

1. This construction is of Greek origin, and occurs chiefly in poetry. It is called synecdoche.

2. Among the accusatives thus representing other cases, and rendered by in, for, of, as to, with respect to, are included, — a.) The following, which frequently occur in prose even: magnam partem, in a great measure, mostly; maximam partem, for the most part; partim (= partem), in part, partly; vicem (= vice), instead of; id genus (for ejus generis), of that kind; omne genus (for omnis generis), of every kind; summum, at the utmost; minimū, at least; cetera, in other respects; reliqua, as for the rest.

b.) The neuter accusatives hoc, id, illud, quid, aliquid, nihil, and nonnihil, in expressions like hoc, id, illud ætatis (= hujus, ejus, illius ætatis), of this, that age; id temporis or id locorum (for eo tempore), at that time; id auctoritatis (for eā auctoritate), of that authority. So, Valde id (= in eo) laborandum est, We must seriously aim at this. Nihil ego te accusavi, I have accused you in no respect. Quod (= cujus) nos poeniteret, Of which it might repent us. A me consilium petis, quid (= cujus) tibi auctor sim, You ask my advice as to what plan I would recommend to you. Thebani nihil moti sunt, quamquam nonnihil succensebant Romanis, The Thebans were moved in no respect, although they were somewhat displeased with the Romans.

To steal (pilfer, abstract from).	{	Furor, āri, ātus sum (Dep.).
		Clēpo, ěre, clepsi, cleptum.
To commit a theft.	{	Surrípito, ěre, ípui, eptum.
		(ALICUI ALIQUID OR ALIQUID AB ALIQUO).
		Furtum facere (alicujus rei; alicui = on any one).

E. Obs. Furāri is to steal deliberately and maliciously; clepĕre, to take away clandestinely and meanly, to filch; surrípĕre, to take away secretly, or to abstract.

Has any one committed a theft on any one?	Númquis fúrtum fĕcit álicui?
No one has stolen anything from any one.	Némo cuiquam fúrtum fĕcit áliquo.

Lesson LX. — PENSUM SEXAGESIMUM.

VERBS FOLLOWED BY TWO ACCUSATIVES.

A. The verb docēre, "to teach," with its compounds edocēre and dēdocēre, and celāre, "to conceal," admit of two accusatives, one designating the person and the other the thing taught or concealed. E. g.

Quis mūsicam docuit Epaminondam?	Who taught Epaminondas music?
Catilina juventūtem, quam illēxerat mālā facinōra edocēbat.	Catiline was instructing the young men, whom he seduced, in pernicious crimes.
Demócritus Polyænum geometriam vóluit dedocēre.	Democritus wanted to make Polyænus unlearn geometry.
Nōn tē celāvi sērmōnem Appii.	I have not concealed from you the language of Appius.
Antigonus ūter omnes celat.	Antigonus concealed his route from every one.

REMARKS.

1. These verbs occur frequently with one accusative only, and docēre sometimes without any case, like the English "to teach," "to instruct." Thus: docēre edocēre, celāre aliquem, aliquid or aliquem aliquid; — dedocēre aliquem, or aliquem aliquid.

2. When docēre and edocēre signify "to inform," the thing is expressed by the ablative with de. E. g. De itinere hostium senātum edocet, He informed the senate of the enemy's route. Sulla de his rebus docētur, Sulla is informed of these things. So also celāre aliquem de re.

3. An infinitive may take the place of the accusative of the thing. E. g. Dionysius tondēre filias suas docuit, Dionysius taught his daughters to shave.

4. When the construction becomes passive, the accusative of the person is changed into the nominative, and that of the thing either remains or is changed into the ablative, with or without de. E. g. Omnes militiæ artes edoctus, Schooled in all the arts of war. Et Graecis doctus litteris et Latīnis, Learned both in Greek and Latin literature. Per legatos cuncta edoctus, Informed of everything by his agents. Hoc, id, illud celābar, I was kept ignorant of that. Non est profecto de illo veneno celāta mater, The mother was surely not kept ignorant of that poison.

5. Other verbs signifying "to instruct" (such as erudio, instruo, instituo, and informo) do not admit an accusative of the thing, but have either the ablative or in. E. g. His in rebus jam te usus ipse erudit, In these things experience itself has already taught you. Iphicrates exercitum omni disciplinā militāri erudit, Iphicrates instructed the army in every military discipline.

B. Verbs signifying to inquire, to ask, or demand, likewise admit of two accusatives: one of the person, and the other of the thing.

Such verbs are rogo, oro, exoro; posco, reposco, flagito; interrogo, exquiro, consulo, percontor, &c. E. g.

Méo jūre tē hoc beneficium rōgo. I ask you for this favor, as one to which I am entitled.

Nūquam deōs divitias rogāvi. I have never asked the gods for riches.

Oratiōnes mē duas pōstūlas. You are demanding two orations of me.

Pācem tē omnes pōscimus. We all ask (sue) you for peace.

Cæsar Aeduos frumētum quotidie flagitābat. Cæsar was dunning the Æbui every day for supplies of corn.

Ibo et consulam hanc rem amicis. I will go and consult my friends about this thing.

Sunt, quæ tē vōlūmus percontari. There are matters, about which we wish to question (examine) you.

REMARKS.

1. Verbs of asking or demanding sometimes have also aliquid ab aliquo, and those of asking or inquiring aliquem de aliquā re. E. g.

Quid acta tua vita, quid studia, quid artes a te flaglent, tu vidēbis, See yourself, what your past life, your studies and science demand of you. Visne, ut te eisdem de rebus Latine interrogem? Do you wish me to ask you about the same things in Latin? So also te oro, te rogo, ut, &c.

2. After peto, I ask (beseech), and quaero, I ask or inquire, the double accusative never occurs, but the construction of those verbs is petere aliquid ab aliquo, or petere ab aliquo, ut or ne, and quaerere aliquid ab (de, ex) aliquo. E. g. Quod ne facias peto a te, Which I beseech you not to do. Eadem secreto ab aliis quaerit, He makes the same inquiry secretly of others.

C. Verbs signifying to name or call, to esteem, consider, learn or find, to make, render, constitute, choose, and the like, are followed by two accusatives, of which one constitutes the object and the other a part of the predicate.

Such are dico, voco, appello, nomino, nuncupo, I call, name, nominate; — duco, habeo, judico, existimo, puto, arbitror, I hold, esteem, consider, think; — intelligo, agnosco, reperio, invenio, I perceive, learn, find; — facio, reddo, creo, deligo, designo, declaro, I make, render, create, choose, designate, declare; — me praebeo, me exhibeo, me praesto, I show or prove myself, and others of similar import. E. g.

Iram bene Ennius initium insaniae dixit.

Ennius has correctly called anger the beginning of madness.

Quas stellas Graeci cometas, nostri crinitas vocant.

The stars which the Greeks call comets, are called long-hairs among us.

Octavium sui Caesarem salutabant.

His adherents hailed Octavius as emperor.

Epaminondas philosophiae praeceptorum habuit Lysim.

Epaminondas had Lysis as an instructor in philosophy.

Fulmen sinistrum auspiciū optimum habemus.

We consider thunder from the left as the most auspicious omen.

Socrates totius mundi se incolam et civem arbitrabatur.

Socrates considered himself an inhabitant and citizen of the entire world.

L. Muraenam consulem renuntiavi.

I announced Lucius Muraena as consul.

Ancum Marcium regem populus creavit.

The people created Ancus Marcius king.

Ciceronem universa civitas consulem declaravit.

The entire state declared Cicero consul.

Caesar Cavarium regem constituerat.

Caesar had appointed Cavarius king.

Pompeius se auctorem meae salutis exhibuit.

Pompey has shown himself the author of my safety.

REMARKS.

1. In the passive construction of these verbs, the accusatives are both converted into nominatives, of which one stands as the subject, and the other as part of the predicate. E. g. Ira bene ab Ennio initium insaniae dictum est. — Octavius a suis Caesar salutabatur. — Ancus Marcius rex a populo creatus est, &c. (Cf. Lesson XXXIV. C.)

2. An adjective or participle may supply the place of the second accusative. E. g. Bene de me meritis gratum me praebeo, I show myself grateful to those who have done me favors. Scytharum gens antiquissima semper habita est, The Scythian nation has always been considered the most ancient. So also the common expression aliquem certiores facere, to inform any one (of anything, alicujus rei or de aliqua re), in the passive certior factus sum, I am informed; and reddere aliquem iratum, placidum, meliorem, to make any one angry, calm, better, &c.

3. Instead of a second accusative, the verbs habere and putare, "to consider," frequently have pro with an ablative, or loco, numero or in numero with the genitive. E. g. Aliquem pro amico, pro hoste habere, To regard any one as a friend, as an enemy. Aliquid pro certo, pro nihilo putare or habere, To consider anything as certain, as of no account. Aliquem in numero deorum habere, To consider one a divinity. Aliquid beneficii loco numerare, To regard anything as a kindness. So also ad, "as": Trecentos armatos ad custodiam corporis habui, He had a body-guard of three hundred men.

4. The accusatives are sometimes connected by esse. E. g. Patriae sanctiora jura quam hospitii esse duxi, He considered the rights of his country more sacred than those of hospitality.

D. THE ACCUSATIVE AFTER PARTICLES.

I. In exclamations the accusative is put after the interjections o, heu, eheu, ecce, en, hem, pro, bene, and frequently also without them. E. g.

Heu (eheu) mē miserum!	or Mē miserum!	Alas! Wo is me!
O hominem fortunatum!		O fortunate man!
Populum vero praeclarum!		O people truly great and noble!
Ecce mē! En miserum hominem!		Here I am! Behold an unhappy man!
Pro deorum atque hominum fidem!		For heaven and mercy's sake!
Hem Davum tibi!		There's Davus now for you!
Et bene nōs! bene tē!		And our health! your health!*

REMARKS.

1. All these interjections may likewise be followed by the vocative.

* An expression used in drinking. Ovid. Fast. 2. 637.

Vae and hei are commonly put with the dative. E. g. Vae mihi misero! Ah! wretched me! Hei mihi! Wo is me!

2. En and ecce are more frequently put with the nominative. E. g. Ecce homo! Behold the man! Ecce tuae litterae! Here is your letter! En ego! Here I am! But in comedy usually ecce me, eccum (= ecce eum), eccos, eccillum, eccillam, eccistam. (Cf. page 37, Rem. 2.)

II. The prepositions ad, apud, ante, adversus and adversum, cis and citra, circa and circum, circumter, contra, erga, extra, infra, inter, intra, juxta, ob, penes, per, pone, post, praeter, prope, propter, secundum, supra, trans, versus, and ultra, are invariably followed by the accusative; in and sub only in answer to the question Whither?

REMARKS.

1. These prepositions generally precede words governed by them, except versus, which is commonly put after. E. g. Brundisium versus, Towards Brundisium. Ad oceanum versus, Towards the ocean.

2. Super and subter commonly take likewise the accusative, but sometimes also the ablative. (Cf. Lesson LXXII. D. Rem.) Clam, "without the knowledge of," has commonly the ablative, but sometimes also the accusative or genitive. E. g. Clam vobis. Clam patrem atque omnes. Clam patris.

* Compounded of ad + scando (I climb). So escendo = ex + scando; descendo = de + scando. The first and second of these verbs may be used either transitively with the accusative, or intransitively with the preposition in, ad, &c. The last of them (descendere) is always neuter.

† This is sometimes expressed by a compound of cis; as cisalpinus, cisrhénus, cismonténus, living or situate on this side of the Alps, Rhine, mountain. And again transalpinus, transmarinus, &c.

gans) as yours. — Do you wish to sell your horse? — I do wish to sell it. — How much is it worth? — It is worth two hundred florins. — Do you wish to buy it? — I have bought one already. — Does your father intend to buy a horse? — He does intend to buy one, but not yours.

Lesson LXI. — PENSUM UNUM ET SEXAGESIMUM.

SYNTAX OF THE DATIVE.

A. The dative is the case of the remote object, and serves to designate that for or with respect to which, or the person for whose benefit or *detriment the agent acts, or that with reference to which it is possessed of certain attributes. Hence the predicate, with which the dative is connected, may be either a transitive verb, a neuter verb, an adjective, or an adverb.

B. The dative after transitive verbs denotes the person or object, with reference to which an action is performed, and stands in answer to the question To whom? or For whom? E. g.

Pater filio librum dedit.

The father gave his son a book.

Dáte panem pauperibus.

Give bread to the poor.

Pisistratus sibi, non patriae Megarénses vicil.

Pisistratus conquered the Megarénses for his own benefit, and not for that of his country.

Tú tuas inimicitias ut reipublicae donáres tē victisti.

By sacrificing your personal enmities to the common weal, you have won a conquest over yourself.

Hannibalis bélla gésta múltí mémoriae prodiderunt.

Many have left us records of the wars of Hannibal.

Zaleucus et Charondas léges civitátibus suis conscripserunt.

Zaleucus and Charondas wrote laws for the benefit of their states.

Quántum consuetúdini famaéque dúndum síl, id cúrent vívi.

As to the extent of the concessions we are expected to make to custom and to fame, let that be determined by the living.

REMARKS.

1. The accusative is often omitted, or its place supplied by an entire clause. E. g. Tibi aras, tibi occas, tibi séris, tibi eidem méis,

* In this sense it is commonly called the Dativus commódi vel incommódi.

You plough, harrow, and sow for yourself, and for your benefit you also reap. Promitto tibi, tegulam illum in Italiā nullam relicturum, I assure you he will not leave a tile on a roof in Italy.

2. When the verb becomes passive, the dative remains as before. E. g. Liber filio a patre datus, A book given by a father to his son. Dator panis pauperibus, Let bread be given to the poor. Megarenses a Pisistrato ipsi, non patriae victi sunt.

C. The dative after neuter verbs represents the person with reference to whom, or for whose benefit, anything is done or exists. E. g.

Mihi quidem esurio, non tibi.

I am hungry on my own account, and not on yours.

Non solum nobis divites esse volumus, sed liberis, propinquis, amicis, maximeque reipublicae.

We desire to be rich, not only for our own benefit, but for that of our children, relations, and friends, and especially for that of the republic.

Civitas Romana parum olim vacabat liberalibus disciplinis.

The Roman nation formerly had but little leisure for the liberal arts and sciences.

Plures in Asia mulieres singulis viris solent nubere.

In Asia several women are accustomed to get married to one husband.

*Nequē Caesari solum sed etiam amicis ejus omnibus supplicabo.

Nor will I supplicate Cæsar alone, but all his friends besides.

REMARKS.

1. The pronominal datives mihi, tibi, sibi, nobis, and vobis often imply merely a remote interest or curiosity on the part of the speaker. E. g. Quid mihi Celsus agit? What, pray, is Celsus after? Quid tibi ris, insane? What do you want, insensate man? Quid sibi vellet, non intelligo, I do not understand what he is after. Quid aut tandem nobis Sannio? What has Sannio to say for himself?

2. After the verbs esse, fore, suppetere, deesse, and desit, the dative denotes the person in possession or in want of the object designated by the nominative. E. g. Sunt mihi libri, I have books. Est homini cum Deo similitudo, Man has a resemblance to the Deity. An nescis, longas regibus esse manus? Or are you not aware, that kings have long hands? Si cauda mihi foret, If I had a tail. Si vita (mihi) suppetet, If I have life left (if life remains). Lac mihi novum non aestate, non frigore desit, I have no lack of fresh milk either in summer or in winter. Cui res non suppetat, (ei) verba non desint, (The orator) who has a poor subject, should have words at his command.

* The verb supplicare = supplex esse. The nubere of the preceding example properly signifies "to put on the veil," and with alicui viro, "to put on the marriage-veil for a man," i. e. to marry him.

DATIVE AFTER ADJECTIVES.

D. The dative stands after adjectives and adverbs as the end or object for or against which the quality denoted by them is represented as existing in the subject.

E. g.

Cunctis esto benignus, nullis blandus, paucis familiaris, omnibus æquus.

Publius dictátor léges secundissimas plebi, adversas nobilitati tulit.

You should be kind to every one, a flatterer of no one, intimate with few, just towards all men.

Publius, the dictator, promulgated laws in favor of the people and opposed to the nobility.

The adjectives thus followed by the dative are quite numerous. They are those signifying, —

1. LIKE OR UNLIKE, SIMILAR OR DISSIMILAR : — par, impar, dispar, æquūlis ; similis, assimilis, consimilis, dissimilis, absimilis, discolor. E. g. Canis lupo similis est, The dog resembles the wolf. Proximo regi dissimilis, Unlike the preceding king. Ennio æqualis fuit Livius, Livy was contemporary with Ennius.*

2. USEFUL OR INJURIOUS : — utilis, bonus, saluber, salutaris, fructuosus ; inutilis, noxius, funestus, pestifer, damnosus, perniciosus, &c. E. g. Salubrior meliorque inopi, quam potenti, More salutary, and better for poor than for rich men. Ratio pestifera multis, admodum paucis salutaris est, Reason is destructive to many, and advantageous to few. Universae Graeciae utilis,† Useful to entire Greece.

3. PLEASANT OR UNPLEASANT : — gratus, acceptus, dulcis, jucundus, laetus, suavis ; ingratus, injucundus, molestus, gravis, acerbus, tristis, &c. E. g. Scientiae suavitatem nihil est hominibus jucundius, Nothing is more agreeable to men than the sweetness of knowledge. Romulus multitudini gravior fuit, quam patribus, Romulus was more acceptable to the masses than to the senate. Verebāris, ne mihi gravis esses, You were afraid of becoming troublesome to me.

4. INCLINED, FRIENDLY, DEAR, and their opposites AVERSE, HOSTILE : — amicus, benevolus, carus, familiaris, æquus, fidus, fidelis, propensus, propitius, secundus ; adversus, alienus, inimicus, contrarius, insensus, &c. E. g. Non fortunæ, sed hominibus amicus, Friendly (= a friend) ‡ to men and not to fortune. Uni æquus virtuti atque

* The adjectives similis, dissimilis, par, and impar are also followed by the genitive, especially when they denote similarity of character or intellect. E. g. mei, tui, sui, nostri, vestri similis, like me, you, &c., or my, your, &c. equal. Dispar sui, unlike itself. Cujus paucos pares hæc civitas tulit, Like whom this state has produced but few. — Æqualis, in the sense of "contemporary," is more commonly followed by the genitive; as, ejus æqualis. Also substantively with an adjective; as, meus æqualis.

† But also utilis or inutilis ad aliquid. E. g. Homo ad nullam rem utilis, a man fit for nothing.

‡ Amicus, inimicus, and familiaris are properly adjectives, and stand as such ejus amicis, Friendly to virtue alone, and to its friends. Antonius Galliam sibi infestam inimicamque cognovit, Antonius learnt that Gaul was hostile to him. Illi causae maxime est aliënum,* It is entirely irrelevant to that case.

5. NEAR OR ADJOINING : — vicinus, finitimus, confinis, conterminus, propior, proximus. E. g. Proximus sum egomet mihi, I am my nearest neighbor. Aethiopia Aegypto est contermina, Æthiopia is conterminous with Egypt. Mala sunt vicina† bonis, Adversity is next door neighbor to prosperity.

6. BELONGING TO ONE'S SELF OR TO ANOTHER : — affinis, cognatus, propinquus, proprius, peculiâris, communis, sacer; aliënus, contrarius, &c. E. g. Nobis propria est mentis agilitas atque sollertia, There is peculiar to us a certain agitation and sagacity of mind. Omni aetati mors est communis, Death is common to every age. Huic affines‡ scelëri fuerunt, They were accomplices of this crime.

7. KNOWN OR UNKNOWN : — notus, certus, ignotus, obscurus, incertus, dubius, insolitus, &c. E. g. Magis historicis quam vulgo notus, Known rather to the historians than to the vulgar. Certius tibi est quam mihi, It is a matter of greater certainty to you than to me. Novum et moribus veterum insolitum, New and unknown (unusual) to the manners of the ancients.

8. FIT OR UNFIT, SUITABLE OR UNSUITABLE : — aptus, idoneus, accommodatus, commodus, necessarius, paratus, promptus, proclivis; — conveniens, congruens, consentaneus, decorus, honestus; turpis, foedus, indecorus, absönus, absurdus. E. g. Aptum esse consentaneumque tempori et personae, To be fit and suitable for the occasion and person. Tibi erunt parata verba, You will have words ready for you. Castris idoneus locus, A suitable site for a camp. Congruens et conveniens decretis ejus, Consistent with his avowed principles. Rationi consentaneus, In harmony with reason. Absönum fidei, At variance with credibility.§

9. EASY OR DIFFICULT : — facilis, expeditus, commodus; difficilis, in every degree of comparison; as, Amicior libertati quam suae dominationi. — Homo mihi amicissimus, mihi familiarissimus. But they frequently occur as substantives with a genitive or an adjective. E. g. Amicus patriæ. — Noster amicus. So also the superlative amicissimus or familiarissimus meus, A very great or most intimate friend of mine. Inimicissimus tuus, Your mortal foe. Amicissimus nostrorum hominum, A warm friend of our men (our party).

* The construction of aliënus is either alicui rei, alicujus rei, re or a re. Thus, alienum nostram amicitiam, a dignitate mea, incompatible with our friendship, with my dignity. Several of these adjectives take also erga, ad or in; as, benivolus, benignus erga aliquem; — propensus ad or in aliquem.

† Vicinus and vicina are also used substantively, and then followed by the genitive or adjective; as, vicinus ejus, meus.

‡ But affinis in this sense also has the genitive; as, affinis hujus suspitionis, affinis rei capitalis. So also proprium oratoris, peculiar to the orator; and mea, tua propria, peculiar to me, to you.

ardūus, inivus. E. g. Juvēnis caecus, contumeliae opportunus, facilis injuriae, A blind youth, exposed to contumelies and to injuries. Id si tibi erit commodum, If that will be convenient to you. Invia virtūti nulla est via, No way is impassable to virtue.

10. VERBALS in illis, and COMPOUNDS like obnoxius, obvius, supplex, superstes, &c. E. g. Mors mihi non est terribilis, Death is not terrible to me. E. g. Obvium esse alicui, To meet any one. Supplicem esse alicui, To be a suppliant to (to supplicate) any one. Superstitem esse alicui, To survive any one.*

To affirm, contend.

To deny.

What do you say?

I say that you have my book.

I say that I have not it.

I assure you, that I have it not.

Have you not had it?

I have had it, but I have it no longer.

Do you contend that you have been correct?

I say that I have not been correct.

I affirm that you have been wrong.

No more, no longer.

Do you still love your brother?

I love him no longer.

Where have you put the pen?

I have laid it upon the table.

Does it lie upon the table?

It does lie upon it.

Is he still lying upon the ground?

He is lying there no longer.

Some, a little.

Could you give me a little water?

I can give you some.

It is necessary, I must.

Diligo eum nōn amplius.

Ubi pēnnam posuisti?

Impōsi eam mēnsae (in mēnsā).

{ Sitāne est super mēnsā?

{ Inpositāne est mēnsae?

{ Sita est. Imposita est.

Jacētne hūmī etiam nūc?

{ Ibi nōn jam jacet.

{ Jacet ibi nōn amplius.

Aliquantūlum, paulūlum, pauxillum.

Possisne mihi dāre aliquantulum aquae?

Ego tibi aliquantulum dāre pōssum.

Necesse est, me oportet, &c. (Cf. Lesson XXXIV. D.)

* Also supplex and superstes alicujus, which among the later writers is even more common than the dative.

† Compare page 290.

DATIVE AFTER VERBS. — Continued.

A. The dative also follows intransitive verbs signifying to benefit, favor, please, trust, and their opposites, and those signifying to command, obey, serve, or resist, to approach, menace, and to be angry.

Such are prosum, auxilior, adminicūlor, opitūlor, patrocīnor, subvenio, succurro, medeor; noceo, obsum, officio, incommodo, insulto, insidiōr. — Favēo, gratificor, indulgēo, ignosco, studiō, parco, adūlor, blandiōr, lenocīnor, palpo, assentiōr, assentor, respondēo; adversor, refragor, obsto, reniōr, repugno, resisto, invideo, aemulor, obrecto, conviciōr, maledico. Placēo, arriđēo, displicēo. — Domīnor, impēro; parēo, cēdo, ausculto, obediō, obsequor, obtemperō, morigeror (= morem gero), audiens sum, servio, inservio, ministro, famūlor, ancillor, praestolor. — Credo, fido, confido, diffido. — Imminēo, propinquo, appropinquo, impendeo, occurro. — Minor, commīnor, irascor, stomachor, succenseo. The impersonal verbs conducit, contingit, expedit, licet, placet, &c. Examples:—

Ipsi patriae conducit, pios cives habere in parentes.	It is advantageous to the state itself, to have its citizens respectful towards their parents.
Nihil Numantinis vires corporis auxiliatae sunt.	Their physical strength was of no service to the Numantians.
Non licet sui commodi causā nocere alteri.	It is not lawful to injure another for the sake of personal advantage.
Efficit hoc philosophia: medetur animis.	Philosophy produces this effect: it cures the mind.
Germani ab parvulis labori ac duritiae student.	The Germans apply themselves to toil and hardships from their infancy.
Trebatium objurgavi, quod parum valetudini parceret.	I chided Trebatius for sparing his health too little.
Alii Sullanis, alii Cinnanis partibus favēbant.	Some favored Sulla's party, others that of Cinna.
Nimium illi, Menedeme, indulges	You indulge him too much, Menedemus.
Probus invidet nemini.	The honest man envies no one.
Aliorum laudi atque glorie maxime invideri solet.	The reputation and glory of others are generally the object of envy.
Nemo alterius, qui suae confidit, virtuti invidet.	No one envies the excellence of another, who has any confidence in his own.
Mundus Deo patet, et huic obediunt maria terraeque.	The world is subject to God, and to him the seas and lands render obedience.
Sto expectans, si quid mihi imperent.	I stand waiting to see whether they have any commands for me.
Omnino irasci amicis non temere soleo.	I am not accustomed to be rashly angry with my friends.

REMARKS.

1. Some of these verbs sometimes occur with a transitive force. E. g. Imperare alicui aliquid, To demand anything of any one; credere alicui aliquid, to entrust anything to any one; minari or commi-

nāri alicui aliquid, to menace any one with anything. But most of them are always neuter, and only admit of an impersonal construction in the passive. E. g. Mihi parcitur, invidetur, obrectatur, I am spared, envied, traduced. Tibi incommodatur, maledicuntur, You are incommoded, reviled.

2. Jubēo is an exception to verbs of commanding, and occurs only with the Acc. cum Inf. (Lesson LIII. B. II. 2.) So juro and adjuro, "I aid, assist," always have aliquem, and not alicui, like auxilior, &c.

3. Benedicere, "to bless," generally has alicui (like maledicere), but sometimes aliquem. So medicari alicui (like mederi), to heal, cure, but medicari aliquid, to prepare chemically. The construction of invidere (to envy) is generally alicui or alicui rei, but may also be alicui rem or aliquem aliquā re (one on account of anything). E. g. Honorem tibi invidet, He envies you your honor.

4. A number of other verbs sometimes take the accusative or ablative instead of the dative. E. g. Obrectare (to produce) alicui, alicui rei or rem. Auscultare (to listen to) and praestolari (to wait for) alicui or aliquem. Dominari (to rule over) alicui, in aliquem or in civitate. Fidere and confidere (to trust, confide) alicui, alicui rei or aliquā re. Cedo tibi, concēdo tibi, "I yield, concede to you," are followed by an accusative or ablative of the thing; as, cēdo tibi locum, cedo tibi agri possessione; and concēdo tibi libertatem, loco, de victoria, I concede to you your liberty, my place, the victory. Res mihi convēnit, the thing suits or becomes me; but impersonally convēnit mihi tecum de aliquā re, I agree with you about something.

5. Several verbs have either the accusative or dative, but with a difference of signification. E. g. Caveo te, I beware of you; caveo tibi, I am security for you; caveo a te, I take (require) security from you. Consulo te, I consult you, and consulo tibi, I provide for you. Cupio or volo te, I desire you, and cupio or volo tibi (or tuā causā), I wish for you (on your account). Prospicio and provideo te, I see you before, but tibi, I provide for you. Tempero and moderor aliquid, I arrange in proper order, and mihi or rei, I moderate.

B. Among the verbs followed by the dative are included those compounded with the adverbs satis, bene, and male, and with the prepositions ad, ante, con, in, inter, ob, post, prae, sub, and super. (Cf. Lesson XXXII. G.) Some of these verbs are transitive, and have also an accusative of the direct object; others are intransitive, and have the dative only. The following lists exhibit the most important of them:—

1. Transitive compounds, with the dative of the remote object.

Addo, I add to.

Incido, I fall upon (into).
Incumbo, } I lie (sit) upon.
Incūbo, }
Indormio, I nod over.

Inhaero, I inhere in.
Inhio, I gape at.
Immoriōr, I die in (upon).
Immoror, I linger in.
Innascor, I am born in.
Insisto, I tread upon.
Interjaceo, I am situate between.
Intervēnio, I fall in with.
Obrēpo, I steal upon.
Obstrēpo, I make a noise at.
Obversor, I move before.
Praeminēo, I surpass.
Praestīdēo, I preside over.
Praevālēo, I am stronger than.
Succumbo, I yield to.
Supersto, I stand upon.
Supervivo, I survive.

3. To these add the compounds of sum : — adesse, to be present ; inesse, to be in ; interesse, to be among ; praesse, to be before (at the head of) ; subesse, to be beneath ; superesse, to remain over (left).

4. The compounds of satis, bene, and male are satisfacere, satisfacere (alicui), to give one bail or satisfaction ; maledicere, benedicere (alicui), to praise or bless, to revile, asperse one ; malefacere (alicui), to injure one.

EXAMPLES.

Natūra sēnsibus ratiōnem ad-junxit.

Sthēnius est is, qui nobis assidet.

Quis potest iniquos aequis, impios religiōis anteferre ?

Nature has given us reason in addition to our senses.

He who is sitting by our side is Sthenius.

Who can prefer the unjust to the just, the impious to the religious ?

Natūra vi ratiōnis hōminem conciliat hōmini.	Nature conciliates man to man by force of reason.
Pārva mágis saepe rectissime conferuntur.	Small things are often correctly compared with great things.

Satisfacere ómnibus nōn pōssum.	I am not able to satisfy every one.
Tú vėrbis solves núnquam, quód mi (= mīhi) malefēcėris.	You will never compensate with words the injuries you have done me.

REMARKS.

1. Many verbs compounded with prepositions, especially those with ad, con, and in, are also followed by the case of the preposition, which is frequently repeated. E. g. Studium adhibere ad disciplinas, To apply one's self to the study of the sciences. Consilia sua mecum communicāvit, He communicated his designs to me. In omnium animis dei notionem impressit ipsa natūra, Nature herself has imprinted the idea of a divinity upon the minds of all.

2. Verbs compounded with the prepositions ab, de, or ex, are commonly followed by the ablative, but sometimes by the dative. E. g. Alicui libertatem adjudicāre, to take away one's liberty; alicui imperium abrogāre, to deprive one of his command. Alicui aliquid derogāre, detrahēre, to derogate, to detract from. Alicui virginem despondēre, to betroth a maiden to any one. Eripere alicui aliquid, to snatch away anything from any one. (Cf. Lesson LXXII. E.)

3. Many neuter verbs of motion, compounded with prepositions, acquire an active sense, and admit an object in the accusative. (Cf. Lesson LIX. A. Rem. 1.)

Lesson LXIII. — PENSUM SEXAGESIMUM TERTIUM.
DATIVE AFTER THE PARTICIPLE IN "DUS."

A. After the participle in dus the agent is commonly expressed by the dative.* E. g.

* Compare Lesson XXV. D.

Legendus mihi saepius est Cato maior.	I must read Cato the elder oftener.
Nihil est homini tam timendum, quam invidia.	Nothing is to be feared by men so much as envy.
Non paranda nobis solum, sed fruenda etiam sapientia est.	Wisdom should not only be acquired by us, but also enjoyed.
Recto tibi invictoque moriendum est.	You must die firm and unconquered.
Ut tibi ambulandum et ungendum, sic mihi dormiendum est.	As you must walk and anoint yourself, so I must sleep.

REMARKS.

1. Instead of the dative, the ablative with a or ab sometimes occurs, as after passive verbs. E. g. Eros a te colendus est, Eros must be worshipped by you. Non majores nostros venerandos a nobis putatis? Do you not think that our ancestors are to be venerated by us?

2. The dative is frequently omitted, and the agent left indefinite. E. g. Graecis utendum erit litteris, It will be necessary to use Greek letters. Consensio omnium gentium lex naturae pulanda est, The consent of all the races of men is to be considered the law of nature. Orandum est (sc. nobis),* ut sit mens sana in corpore sano, We should pray for a healthy mind in a healthy body.

3. Passive verbs sometimes have the dative of the agent instead of the usual ablative with a or ab. E. g. Auditus est nobis (= a nobis) Laeliae saepe sermo, We have often heard the conversation of Laelius. Mihi (= a me) consilium captum jam diu est, The plan has been formed long ago by me. Barbarus hic ego sum, quia non intelligitur ulli (= ab ullo), I am a barbarian here, since I am not understood by any one.

VERBS FOLLOWED BY TWO DATIVES.

B. The verbs sum, forem, fio, do, venio, and a number of others, are sometimes followed by two datives, of which one designates the person and the other the end or object.

Such are do, accipio, habeo, relinquo, deligo, mitto, eo, venio, and others of similar import. Also duco, largior, tribuo, and verto. E. g. Hoc est mihi curae.

I take care of this (It is my care, I attend to it).

Est tibi honori.

It is an honor to you.

Nobis est voluptati.

It is a pleasure to us.

Est argumento.†

It serves as an argument.

Ampla domus dedecori domino saepe fit.

An ample mansion often becomes a dishonor to its master.

* The dative thus suppressed is generally mihi, tibi, nobis, vobis, hominibus, &c., and easily supplied from the context.

† See Remark 1.

Attalus regnum suum Romanis dono dedit.	Attalus gave his kingdom to the Romans as a present.
Caesar quinque cohortes castris praesidio relinquit.	Cæsar leaves five cohorts as a guard for the camp.
Pausanias venit Atticis auxilio.	Pausanias came to the assistance of the Athenians.
Virtus sola neque datur dono, neque accipitur.	Virtue alone can neither be offered nor received as a gift.
Nimia fiducia calamitati solet esse.	Too much confidence is wont to be a source of calamity.
Incumbite, ut et vobis honori, et amicis utilitati et reipublicae emolumento esse possitis.	Exert yourselves, so that you may be able to become an honor to yourselves, useful to your friends, and a source of profit to the commonwealth.

REMARKS.

1. The dative of the person is frequently left indefinite, and that of the end or object alone expressed. E. g. Hoc est honori, laudi, This is an honor, laudable. Vitam rusticam tu probro et crimini putas esse, You consider rural life a reproach and crime (sc. to any one). So several of the above examples.

2. Datives of this description are very frequent. The most common are dare aliquid muneri, dono, praemio; — relinquere aliquid custodiae, praesidio; — aliquid est or putatur vitio, crimini, probro, opprobrio, laudi, salutis, utilitati, emolumento; — aliquid est curae, cordi, derisui, usui. So also canere receptui, to sound the retreat; opponere pignori, to pledge or pawn. In this connection the verb sum frequently has the sense of the English it affords, serves, brings, &c.

3. Instead of the dative of the end or object, the nominative or accusative may also be put, and sometimes the preposition ad or in. E. g. Hoc argumentum, indicium est, This is proof, an indication (evidence). Dedit mihi aliquid donum (for dono). Exercitum ad praesidium (for praesidio) reliquit. Dare aliquid in dotem, To give anything as a dowry. So also pro argumento est.

C. After expressions like mihi est nomen or cognomen, the name of the individual is either in the nominative or dative, but sometimes in the genitive. E. g.

*Est mihi nomen Balbus, Balbo, My name is Balbus. or Balbi.

Nomina his Lacumo atque Aruns The names of these (sons) were fuérunt. Lacumo and Aruns.

Cui postea Appio Claudio fuit Whose name was afterwards Appinomen. us Claudius.

* The dative stands by attraction in the same sense as the pronoun mihi (cui, alteri, &c.).

Quōrum āleri Capitonī fūit co- One of whom was surnamed Capito. gnōmen.
Nōmen Mercurii mihi est. My name is Mercury.

REMARK. — After the expressions dare, addere, indĕre, dicĕre, pōnĕre, impōnĕre or tribuĕre alicui nomen or cognōmen, the name is commonly in the dative, but may also stand in the accusative. E. g. Dare alicui cognomen tardo ac pingui, To surname (nickname) one "the slow and the dull." Cui Ascanium parentes dixĕre nomen, Whom the parents called Ascanius. And in the passive: — Quibus nōmen histrionibus inditum est, Who have received the name of histrions. Cui cognomen superbo ex moribus dātum, Who was surnamed "the proud," from his manners.

D. The verbs aspergo and inspergo, circumdo and circumfundo, dono and impertio, indūo and exūo, are construed either with the dative of the person and the accusative of the thing (alicui aliquid), or with the accusative of the person and the ablative of the thing (aliquem aliquā rē). E. g.

Aspĕrgit āram sāguine (or ārae sāguinem).	He besprinkles (stains) the altar with blood.
Dĕus ānimum circūddedit cōrpore (or cōrpus ānimo circūddedit).	The Deity surrounded the soul with a body.
Dōno tibi pecūniā (or tē pecūniā).	I make you a present of money.
Terĕntia impĕrtit tibi mūltam salūtem .	Terentia sends you greeting.
Plūrimā salūte Parmenōnem impĕrtit Gnātho.	Gnatho presents his best compliments to Parmeno.
Induit (ēxuit) sibi vēstem .	He puts on (takes off) his dress.
Cāesar hōstes ōmnes ārmis ēxūit .	Cæsar deprived all his enemies of their arms.

REMARKS.

1. So also interclūdĕre alicui aliquid or aliquem aliquā re and ab aliquā re, to cut one off from anything; and interdicĕre alicui aliquid or alicui (but not aliquem) aliquā re. E. g. Intercludit hostibus fugam, mīlites inīnĕre or ab exercitū, He prevents the enemy's escape, prevents the march of the soldiers, cuts them off from the army. Vitellius accusatori aquā atque igne interdixit, Vitellius forbade the accuser the use of water and fire (i. e. exiled him).

2. In the passive the dative or ablative remain, and the accusative becomes the nominative. E. g. Ara aspĕrgitur sāguine or sāguis arae aspĕrgitur. — Duabus quasi a natūrā indūti sumus personis, We are by nature furnished as it were with two persons. Doctrinis aetas puerilis impertiri debet, The age of boyhood ought to be furnished with instruction. Interdicāmur aquā et igni, Let us be prohibited from the use of water and fire.

DATIVE AFTER PARTICLES.

E. The dative is also put after certain particles. Such are : —

1. Adverbs, especially those derived from adjectives which govern the dative. As propius, proxime, cominus, obviam, praesto; convenienter, congruenter, constanter, amice, &c. E. g. Propius Tiberi, quam Thermopylis, Nearer to the Tiber than to Thermopylae. Quam proxime hostium castris, As close to the enemy's camp as possible. Obviam ire alicui, To go to meet any one. Convenienter naturae vivere, To live agreeably to nature. Bene mihi, bene vobis, bene omnibus, Health to me, to you, to all (in drinking).

2. The interjections vae and hei, and others. E. g. Vae victis est! — Hei misero mihi! — Ecce tibi! * — Hem tibi talentum auri! There is a talent of gold for you!

Lesson LXIV. — PENSUM SEXAGESIMUM QUARTUM.

SYNTAX OF THE GENITIVE.

A. A noun determining another noun is put in the genitive, in answer to the question Whose? Of whom? Of what? E. g.

Dómus Cæsarís. Árbores silvâ- rum. Belli calamitas. Flúmi- na néctaris.	The house of Cæsar. The trees of the forests. The calamity of war. Rivers of nectar.
Amor virtútis. Lectio librórum. Desidérium ótii. Spês salútis.	The love of virtue. The reading of books. The desire of ease. The hope of safety.
Cústos virtútum ómnium verecún- dia ést.	Reverence is the guardian of every virtue.
Singulórum facultátes et cópiæ divítiaæ súnť civitátis.	The property and resources of in- dividuals constitute the wealth of the state.
Núma divíni auctór júrís fúit, Sérvius cónditor ómnis in civi- táte discriminis ordínimque.	Numa was the institutor of divine law, Servius the founder of all the distinctions and orders in the state.
Vita mórtuum in memóriâ vivó- rum ést pósíta.	The life of the dead depends upon the memory of the living.

REMARKS.

1. The genitive serves to express a variety of relations, such as origin or source, cause and effect, quantity, quality, measure, time, character, the whole of a given mass or number, the object of an activity, the material of which anything is made, &c.

2. The genitive thus depending on a noun may represent either the subject or the object of the activity or state implied in this relation, and is hence called either subjective or objective. Thus pater amat gives rise to the subjective amor patris, the father's love (towards the son); but (pater) amat filium, to the objective amor filii, the (father's) love of (i. e. towards) his son. So also hominum facta, the deeds of men, and lux solis, the light of the sun (subjective); but remedium doloris, the remedy against pain; taedium laboris, disgust for labor.* Sometimes, though rarely, both these genitives occur in the same construction; as, Cæsaris translatio pecuniarum, Cæsar's transfer of the funds. Attici memor officii, Mindful of the favor of Atticus. Multa Theophrasti orationis ornamenta, Many of the ornaments of Theo-

* The relation expressed by the subjective genitive is in English indicated by the possessive case, or by "of"; that of the objective by "of," "for," "towards," "against," and similar prepositions.

phrastus's style. Inexplebilis honorum Marii fames, Marius's insatiable desire of honors.

3. Sometimes the context alone can determine whether a genitive is subjective or objective. Thus metus regis may be either the fear entertained by the king, or the fear of the king entertained by some one else. To prevent ambiguity, the Romans commonly put, instead of the objective genitive, the accusative or ablative, with one of the prepositions in or erga, towards; in or adversus, against; cum, with; ab or ex, from, on the part of, &c. E. g. Amor meus erga or in te, My affection for (towards) you. Metus ab hoste, Fear from the enemy. Odium in or adversus aliquem, Hatred against any one. Amicitia cum aliquo, Friendship for any one. Cura de republica, Anxiety for the commonwealth.

4. The objective genitive is sometimes a personal pronoun. E. g. Accusator mei, My accuser. Commendatio tui, The recommendation of you. Ratio sui, Regard for one's self. Misericordia vestri, Compassion on you. Cura nostri, Care for ourselves. But the subjective genitive is commonly represented by the possessive pronoun; as, liber meus, tuus, noster,* &c.

5. The genitive is sometimes put instead of an appositum. So frequently after vox, nomen, verbum, and vocabulum; as, Haec vox voluptatis, This word "pleasure." Appellatio domini, patris, The appellation "master," "father." Ex amore nomen amicitiae ductum est, The name of friendship is derived from love. Triste est nomen ipsum carendi, The very name of "want" is painful. Thus also Arbor fici, The fig-tree. Promontorium Misēni, The promontory Misenum.

6. An adjective sometimes supplies the place of the genitive. E. g. Aliēna (= aliōrum) vita, The life of others. Venus Praxitelis (= Praxitelis), The Venus of Praxiteles. Hercules Xenophontēus (= Xenophontis), The Hercules delineated by Xenophon. Vis hiemalis (= hiemis), The severity of winter. Hostilis (= hostis) libido, The wantonness of the enemy.

7. The dative sometimes expresses a relation similar to that of the genitive, and stands in place of it. E. g. Castris praefectus, The commander of the camp. Munimentum libertati, A bulwark of (to) liberty. Legātus fratri, The lieutenant of his brother. Caput Latii, the capital of Latium. Ego huic causae patronus exstiti, I have come out as the defender of this cause. Naturā tu illi pater es, consiliis ego, You are his father by nature, and I by advice.

8. The noun on which the genitive depends is sometimes omitted. This takes place, —

* Yet this rule is sometimes reversed, the possessive pronoun being put instead of the genitive, and the latter for the former. E. g. Origo sui (= sua), His origin. Aspectus vestri (= vester) venerabilis, Your venerable aspect. And on the other hand, invidia, fiducia tua (for tui), Envy towards, confidence in you. Injuriae meae (for mei), Injuries done to me. So always mea, tua, sua, nostra, vestra causa (never mei causa, like hominis causa), For my (your, &c.) sake, on my account.

a.) When it has already been expressed, and can easily be supplied from the context. E. g. Julius quaestor Albucii fuerat, ut tu Verriis, Julius had been quaestor to Albucius, as you to Verres. Animi lineamenta sunt pulchriora, quam corporis, The features of the mind are fairer than those of the body. In portum, qui Menelai vocatur, Into the port which is called the port of Menelaus.

b.) When it is one of the words aedes, homo, civis, servus, libertus, uxor, filius, filia, discipulus, sententia, or the ablative causā. E. g. Ad Vestae, Jovis Statoris (sc. aedem), To the temple of Vesta, of Jupiter Stator. Verania Pisonis (sc. uxor), Verania, the wife of Piso. Hasdrubal Gisgonis (sc. filius). Caecilia Metelli (sc. filia). Hujus video Byrrhiam (sc. servum). Flaccus Claudii (sc. libertus). Vitandae suspitionis (sc. causā), For the sake of avoiding suspicion. Contra Philonis (sc. sententiam), Against the opinion of Philo.

THE GENITIVE OF QUALITY AND MEASURE.

B. In connection with an adjective or numeral, the genitive frequently expresses the relations of property, quality, character, age, time, measure, or number. E. g.

Vir et consilii magni et virtutis.	A man of great judgment and virtue.
Oppidum maximae auctoritatis.	A town of distinguished authority.
Puer decem annorum.	A boy of ten years.
Fossa quindecim pedum.	A ditch of fifteen feet.
Classis septuaginta navium.	A fleet of seventy ships.
Claudius erat somni brevissimi, sc. homo.	Claudius was a man of very little sleep.
De lingua Latinā securi es animi.	You are unconcerned about the Latin language.
Juvenis evasit vere indolis regiae.	He turned out really a youth of royal disposition.
Classis mille et ducentarum navium longarum fuit.	The fleet consisted of a thousand and two hundred galleys.

REMARKS.

1. The quality may also be expressed by the ablative with praeditus, instructus, or ornatus understood, and the extent of time or space by the accusative, with natus, latus, or longus expressed. E. g. Vir summo ingenio (sc. praeditus), A man of (endowed with) the highest genius. Fossa quindecim pedes lata, A ditch fifteen feet wide. Puer decem annos natus, A boy twelve years of age.

2. The accusatives secus, genus, pondo, and libram (or pl. libras), occur instead of the genitive in expressions like liberi virile secus, Male children. Aliquid id genus (= ejus generis), Something of that kind. Aves omne genus (= omnis generis), Birds of every species. Corona aurea libram pondo, A golden crown of a pound in weight.

dark there. — Is it dry in the street? — It is damp there. — Is the weather damp? — The weather is not damp. — Is the weather dry? — It is too dry. — Is it moonlight? — It is not moonlight; it is very damp. — Why is the weather dry? — Because we have too much sun and no rain. — When do you go into the country? — I intend going thither to-morrow, if the weather is fine, and if we have no rain. — Of what does your uncle speak? — He speaks of the fine weather. — Do you speak of the rain? — We do speak of it. — Of what do those men speak? — They speak of fair and bad weather. — Do they not speak of the wind? — They do also speak of it. — Dost thou speak of my uncle? — I do not speak of him. — Of whom dost thou speak? — I speak of thee and thy parents. — Do you inquire after any one? — I inquire after your uncle; is he at home? — No, he is at his best friend's.

Lesson LXV. — PENSUM SEXAGESIMUM QUINTUM.

THE GENITIVE OF THE WHOLE.

A. Nouns denoting a measure or weight, and adjectives or pronouns of the neuter gender denoting a part, are followed by the genitive of the whole.

The principal words of this class are:—

1. Substantives denoting,— a.) Definite measure; as, medimnum, modius, concha; amphora, congius; sextarius, hemina; jugerum (of land); punctum, vestigium (of time). b.) Definite weight; as, as, libra, pondo, uncia, mina, talentum. c.) Quantity or number in general; as, mensura, modus, vis, copia, multitudo, acervus, numerus, grex, globus, &c., and negatively nihil.

2. The nominative and accusative of the neuter adjectives* tantum, quantum, aliquantum, multum, plus, amplius, plurimum, parum, minus, minimum, nimum, dimidium, religuum, altud.

3. The nominative and accusative of the neuter pronouns hoc, id, illud, idem, quod, quid, with their compounds aliquid, quidquam, quidam, quidquid, &c.

4. The adverbs sat, satis, abunde, affatim, parum, partim, and nimis.

EXAMPLES.

Conon pecuniae quinquaginta talenta civibus suis donavit.	Conon made his fellow-citizens a present of fifty talents.
Caesar populo praeter frumenti	In addition to ten measures of corn

* Which in this construction are, however, always employed substantively.

dénos mólios ac tóidein ólei líbras, trecénos quóque númmos virítim divísit.

In júgere Leontíni ágri medímnum and as many libras of oil, Caesar also divided among the people three hundred sesterces to each.

At Leontini nearly a medimnum of wheat is usually sown on an acre of land.

Now streams of milk, now streams of nectar flowed.

Justice seeks no reward.

The distance to the other world is the same from every place.

The Romans stood in battle array from sunrise till late in the day.

The Gauls proposed this consolation to themselves.

He saw only so much of the enemy
as was in front of him.

I give you the same advice as I do to myself.

What is the reason why they do not read the philosophers?

REMARKS.

1. After the neuter pronouns and adjectives hoc, id, illud, aliquid, quid? quantum, &c. the genitive is sometimes again a neuter adjective used substantively; as, aliquid boni, quiddam mali, quid novi? &c. This construction is, however, confined to adjectives of the second declension. Those of the third, and comparatives in us, generally remain adjectives in agreement with the pronoun; as, *aliquid turpe, memorabile; * melius aliquid; quid gravius?*

2. The genitives gentium, terrarum, loci, and locorum after the adverbs ubi, ubique, ubicunque, usquam, nusquam, unde, hic, huc, eo, eodem, quo, quocunque, quoquo, aliquo, and longe serve to add emphasis to the expression. E. g. Ubi gentium? Ubi terrarum? Where in the world? Aliquo terrarum, Somewhere, in some place or another. Quo loci for quo loco; eodem loci for eodem loco. To these add the expressions of time, ad id locorum, up to that time; adhuc locorum, up to this time; interea loci, meanwhile; postea loci, afterwards.

3. The adverbs huc, eo, and quo, in the sense of "degree" or "extent," are also put with a genitive. E. g. Huc arrogantiae, To this degree of arrogance. Eo insolentiae, To that extent of insolence. Quo amentiae? To what degree (extent) of folly?

4. Other adverbs construed with the genitive are pridie and postdie, and, among the later writers, tum or tunc. E. g. Pridie ejus

* But in connection with one of the second declension, sometimes also the genitive; as, aliquid novi ac memorabilis; quidquam, non dico civilis, sed humani. So, on the other hand, adjectives of the second declension are often in agreement with the pronoun; as, aliquid bonum, novum, equally correct.

diēi, on the day before (that); postridie ejus diei, on the following day; * tum (tunc) temporis, at that time, then.

5. Neuter adjectives in general, both singular and plural, are often employed substantively with a genitive by the poets and the prose-writers of a later date.† E. g. Ad summum montis, To the top of the mountain. Reliquum noctis, The rest of the night. Medium and serum diēi, The middle of, late in, the day. In medio aedium, In the midst of the house. Extrēmo aestātis, In the latter part of the summer. Summa (= summæ partes) pectoris, The upper parts of the chest. Cujusque artis difficilima, The most difficult parts of every art. In occultis reconditisque templi, In the secret recesses of the temple. Subita belli, The surprises of war. Incerta casuum, The uncertainties of chance. Infrequentissima urbis, The most unfrequented parts of the city.

6. When the adverbs of quantity sat, satis, abunde, affatim, pārum, partim, and nimis are followed by the genitive, they may be regarded as substantives of the neuter gender. E. g. Satis honorum, satis superque vitæ erat, There were honors enough, there was life enough, and even more than enough. Potentia gloriæque abunde, An abundance of power and glory. Affatim est hominū, There is a sufficiency of men. Leporis pārum, But little wit. Nimis insidiarum, Too many stratagems. Eorū partim in pompā, partim in acie illustres esse voluerunt, Some of them wished to distinguish themselves by their display, and others on the battle-field.

7. The demonstratives id and tantum are sometimes omitted when quod or quantum follows. E. g. Médico mercēdis quantum † poscet, promitti jubēto, Let the doctor be promised as large a fee as he demands. Romānus exercitus, quod inter Palatinum Capitolinumque collem campi est, compleverat, The Roman army had filled the space included between the Palatine and Capitoline hills.

8. The genitive also occurs before the preposition tēnus, "up to," and sometimes after interjections. E. g. Pectoris tenus, Up to the chest. O mihi nuntii beati! O blessed harbinger to me! Foederis heu tacti! Alas for the tacit alliance!

GENITIVE AFTER PARTITIVES.

B. Partitives, including nouns, adjectives, pronouns, numerals, and adverbs, denoting a number, division, or part of a plurality, are followed by the genitive plural of the whole.

The partitives susceptible of this construction are,—

* But more frequently with the accusative; as, pridie or postridie eum diem.

† By Cicero and Cæsar rarely except in the plural. By Livy and Tacitus frequently in both numbers.

‡ Tantum mercēdis, quantum.

§ For id campi, quod.

1. Substantives denoting a certain number of countable objects, such as centuria, legio, cóhors, manipulus; also pars, decima or decuma, nilil, &c.

2. The pronouns uter, alter, neuter, uterque alteruter, alius, sólus, nullus, nemo, ille, hic, quis, qui, and their compounds quicunque, quisquis, aliquis, &c. So also multi, plurimi, plerique, pauci, quot, quocunque, quótus, quótus quisque, aliquot, tot, cetëri, and reliqui.

3. Comparatives and superlatives, inclusive of a few adjectives of superlative signification, like unus (the only one), medius, princeps.

4. Numerals, both cardinal and ordinal. Examples of all these are:—

Servius Tullius équitum duódecim scripsit centurias.

Nihil ómnium rerum melius, quam ómnis múnus administrátur.

Piscium féminae majóres quam máres sunt.

Promulgavêre légem, ut cónsulum álter ex plêbe crearétur.

Animálum álía ratiónis expértia súnť, álía ratióne uténtia.

Utrque nóstrum ad súum stúdiuť libéllos evolvébat.

Cum nullo hóstium únquam congréssus ést.

Nemo mortálíum ómnibus hóris sápit.

Múltae, céterae istárum árbórum. Par cuilibet supértórum regum.

Quóťus quisque philosóphórum?

Néque stultórum quisquam beátus, néque sapiéntíum nón beátus. Prior hórum in proélio cécidit.

Májor Nerónum. Senióres Pátrum.

Gallórum ómnium fortíssimi súnť Bélgae.

Aristides únus ómnium justíssimus fuisse tráditur.

Quórum quáťuor cónsules, dúo dictátor ac magister équitum fuérunt.

Servius Tullius enrolled twelve squadrons of horse.

Of all things nothing is better regulated than the entire universe.

Female fishes are larger than the males.

They promulgated a law, that one of the consuls should be chosen from among the people.

Some animals are destitute of reason, and others endowed with it.

Both of us were unfolding manuscripts for our respective studies.

He never fought with any of his enemies.

No man is wise at all times.

Many, the rest of these trees.

Equal to any one of the preceding kings.

How many among the philosophers?

Not a single fool was ever a happy man, nor a wise man not happy. The former of these fell on the battle-field.

The elder of the Neros. The senior senators.

The bravest of all the Gauls are the Belgae.

Aristides is said to have been the most just of all (his contemporaries).

Of whom four were consuls, and two dictator and lieutenant-dictator.

REMARKS.

1. The genitive singular of a collective may take the place of the genitive plural. E. g. Cetëri nostri ordinis, The rest of our order. Primus Romāni genëris, The first of the Roman nation. Totius injustitiæ nulla, Of all the instances of injustice, none, &c.

2. Poets (and sometimes other writers) extend this construction to adjectives of the positive degree, and to substantives denoting a part of a genus. E. g. Nigræ lanarum, Black wool. Velëres Romanorum ducum, The older Roman generals. Degenëres canum, Dogs of degenerate breed. Pennatörum animalium bûbo et ôtus, Of the winged animals the owl and the horn-owl. — So also the perfect participle: Delecti equitum, The select of the horsemen. Expediti militum, The light-armed portion of the army. — To these add omnes and cuncti, when they are used in the sense of singuli. E. g. Omnes Tarquinii genëris, Every one of the family of Tarquin. Cunctæ provinciârum, All of the provinces.

3. The partitive (pronoun or adjective) commonly takes the gender of its genitive (as in all the above examples), but sometimes also that of another noun expressed or implied in its connection. E. g. Indus omnium fluminum maximus, The Indus the largest of all rivers. Hordëum frugum omnium molissimum est*, Barley is the softest of all grain. (Ego), qui plurima mala omnium Graecörum in domum tuam intuli, I who of all the Greeks have done your house the greatest injury.

4. An adverb may take the place of the partitive. E. g. Caesar omnium fere oratörum Latine loquitur elegantissime, Cæsar speaks the most elegant Latin of nearly all the orators. Gallus maxime omnium nobillium Graecis litteris studiû, Of all the Roman nobles Gallus paid most attention to the literature of Greece.

5. The noun denoting the whole is sometimes put in the same case with the partitive. E. g. Duae filiae (= duarum filiârum) harum, altera occisa, altera capta est, Of their two daughters, the one was killed and the other taken prisoner. This is done chiefly by poets and historians.

6. Instead of the genitive, the prepositions ex, de, inter, in, and ante are sometimes used, especially after superlatives, numerals, and unus. E. g. Acerrimus ex omnibus nostris sensibus, The acutest of all our senses. Unus ex (or de) multis, One out of many. Acerrimus inter recusantes, The most violent among those refusing. Sapientissimus in septem, The wisest among the seven (sages of Greece). Ex quibus (sc. filiis) reliquit duos, Of which (i. e. number of sons) she has left two.

7. When the partitive denotes the entire number referred to, it stands in the same case with its noun. E. g. (Nos) trecenti conjurävimus, Three hundred of us have conspired. Numerâte, quot ipsi sūtis,

* Superlatives thus frequently prefer the gender of the noun in agreement with them.

Count how many there are of you in all. Nostri (poss. pron.) septuaginta ceciderunt, Our men, seventy in number, fell. Neque hi admodum sunt multi, Nor does the (entire) number of these amount to many. (Cf. Lesson XVIII. G.)

8. When the pronouns and adjectives above enumerated as participles do not denote parts of a whole, they stand adjectively in agreement with their nouns.* E. g. Alter consul, doctissimus Rōmānus, multi, pauci, aliquot homīnes, tot annos, quot habet, &c. In this respect the English is generally a safe guide.

To speak of anything to any one.

The way from Berlin to Dresden.	Vía (íter) a Berolino Drésdam vérsus (or ad Drésdam).
To take the way (to direct one's course towards).	Íter álquo movère (môvi, môtum).
	Cúrsum súum álquo dirigère (rexi, rectum).
To enter upon (to take) a way (road).	Viam or íter inire or ingrēdi.
Which way has he taken?	Quórsum íter môvit (cúrsum súum diréxit).
He has taken the way to Leipzig.	{ Íter môvit Lípsiam vérsus.
	{ Cúrsum súum Lípsiam diréxit.
Which way will you take?	{ Quórsum íter movère vis?
	{ Quám víam inire vis?
I will take (enter upon) this way.	Égo hanc inire (ingredi) cogító.
And I that one.	Et égo illam.
So that.	Ut (conj. with the subj.).
I have lost my money, so that I cannot pay you.	Pecúniam méam pérdidi, ut tibi sólvère non póssim (nón quéam).
He is sick, so that he cannot go out.	Aegrótus est, ut in públicum prodire non póssit.
He was also eloquent, so that no one excelled him in eloquence.	Fuít et disertus, ut nemo ei pár ésset eloquentiã.
So (to such an extent or degree) — that.	Ita (sic, tam, eo, adẽo, usque eo) — ut (with the subj.).

He loved him so much, that he was commonly regarded as his son.

Was he so stupid as to consider that life?

For (conjunct.).

I cannot pay you; for I have no money.

He cannot come to your house; for he has no time.

Advice is difficult, I see; for I am alone.

Or (disjunctive conj.).

Eûther — or.

Eum sic diligēbat, ut is ejus vulgo haberētur filius.

Adeone erat stultus, ut illam vitam esse arbitrarētur?

Nam; enim (with the indic.).

Ego tibi debitum solvere nequeo. Nam pecuniā cāreo.

Dōmum tuam venire nōn potest. Nam otium ei dēest.

Videō difficile esse consilium. Sūm enim sōlus.*

Aut, vĕl, -vĕ.

{ Aut — aut.
Vĕl — vĕl.
Sive — sive.

O. Obs. The disjunctive aut implies essential difference, and a mutual exclusion of things. Vel and the enclitic ve, a mere verbal difference. E. g.

Am I slave to you, or you to me?

Enough of our affairs, or (and) even too much.

I maintain that things which can be seen or touched are real.

Either no one was ever a wise man, or if any one, Cato was.

Every body is either water, or air, or fire, or earth, or some mixture of these, or a part of them.

The poets were recognized or received by the Romans at a comparatively late period.†

The laws of the Cretans, which either Jove or Minos established, inured their youth to hardships.

Tibi ego, aut tū mihi servus sum?

De nostris rebus satis, vel etiam nimium multa.

Esse ea dico, quae cerni tangi possunt.

Aut nemo, aut, si quisquam, Cato sapiens fuit.

Omne corpus aut aqua, aut aer, aut ignis, aut terra est, aut aliquid, quod est concretum ex his, aut ex aliquā parte eorum.

Serius a Romanis poetae vel cogniti vel recepti sunt.

Crētum leges, quas sive Jūpiter, sive Mīnos sanxit,† laboribus erudiunt juventutem.

* Enim rarely stands in the first of the clause; nam, on the other hand, always.

† I. e. It was comparatively late before the Romans either recognized (knew) or received poets among them. Here vel is used, because the notion of recognizing and receiving do not exclude or contradict each other.

‡ Sive — sive express complete indifference, and are hence often rendered by whether — or. "Whether Jove or Minos, no matter which of the two," or "Either Jove or Minos, as you may choose to have it."

Lesson LXVI. — PENSUM SEXAGESIMUM SEX- TUM.

OF THE GENITIVE AFTER ADJECTIVES.

A. Many adjectives, especially those signifying an affection or activity of the mind, such as desire or disgust, knowledge or ignorance, and many of those denoting likeness, equality, community, property, plenty, and their opposites, are followed by the genitive of the object. E. g.

Graeculi sunt contentiōnis cupidiores, quam veritatis.

The paltry imitators of the Greeks are fonder of contention than of the truth.

Graecarum literarum Cato perstudiosus fuit.

Cato was very much devoted to the study of Greek literature.

Conscia mens recti fama mendacia ridet.

A mind conscious of rectitude laughs at the false reports of fame.

Cato et reipublicae peritus et juris consultus fuit.

Cato was experienced in public affairs and learned in the law.

Omnes immemorem beneficii odērunt.

Every one hates the man who is forgetful of benefits received.

Cyri et Alexandri similis esse voluit.

He wished to be like Cyrus and Alexander.

Viri propria est maxime fortitudo.

Courage is pre-eminently characteristic of man.

Memoria communis est multarum artium.

Memory is common to many arts.

Galli sūnt hómīnes insuēti labóris.	The Gauls are men unaccustomed to labor.
Ūtinam tū, frāter, nōn solum vitæ, sed etiā dignitātis mēæ superstitem reliquissē!	Would that I had left you, my brother, a survivor not only of my life, but also of my rank!
Referta quōndam Itālia Pythagorēorum fuit.	Italy was formerly full of Pythagoreans.
Inops senātus auxiliī hūmāni ad deos pópulum ac vōta vētit.	Destitute of human help, the senate directed the people and its prayers to the gods.

The adjectives thus followed by the genitive are those signifying, —

1. DESIRE OR DISGUST : — avidus, cupidus, studiosus, fastidiosus. So also aemulus, amicus, inimicus, invidus, which sometimes, however, have the dative.* E. g. Cupidus, avidus contentiōnis, Fond of contention. Amicus, inimicus veritatis, Friendly, hostile towards the truth. Aemulus, invidus laudis, Emulous, envious of praise. Litterarum Latinarum fastidiosus, Averse to Latin literature.

2. KNOWLEDGE, SKILL, OR IGNORANCE : — consctus, gnarus, certus, consultus, peritus, mēmor, providus, prudens; — insctus, nescius, ignarus, imperitus, imprudens, rudis, immēmor. E. g. Ejus rei consctus, gnarus, certior, Conscious of, acquainted with, informed of, that thing. Consilii certior factus, Informed of the design. Juris consultus, prudens or peritus, Learned, skilled, experienced in the law. Mēmor, immēmor beneficii, Mindful, forgetful of kindness. Imprudens legis, Ignorant of the law. Imperitus belli, Unskilled in warfare. Rudis artium, Ignorant of the arts.†

3. LIKENESS OR UNLIKENESS of mind, disposition, or character‡ : — similis, consimilis, dissimilis, aequalis, par, dispar; proprius, publicus, sacer, affinis, communis, socius, vicinus, alienus, insuetus; to which add superstes and supplex. (All these also with the dative.) — E. g. Similis hominis, Like man (in character). Dissimilis Alexandri, Unlike Alexander. Par, dispar alicujus, Equal, unequal to any one. Aequalis temporum illorum, Contemporary with those times. Proprium Romani generis, Peculiar to the Roman nation. Insula eorum deorum sacra, An island sacred to those gods. Communis utriusque nostrum, Common to both of us. Affinis alicujus culpæ, An accomplice to some crime. Alicuius suæ dignitatis, Foreign to his dignity. Superstes aliorum, Surviving others. Supplex Dei, Supplicating God.

4. PLENTY OR WANT : — plenus, refertus, fertilis, inops, inanis, jejū-

* Compare page 351.

† Peritus consultus and rudis also occur with the ablative. E. g. Omni genere litterarum peritus, Familiar with every kind of literature. Jureperitus or consultus instead of juris peritus, &c. The adjective consctus may have either the genitive or dative of the thing, but the person is always in the dative. E. g. consctus facinoris or facinori, privy to a crime; but alicui conscium esse facinoris, to be in the secret of a crime with any one. Sibi conscium esse alicujus rei, to be conscious of anything.

‡ Compare page 351.

nus; compos, particeps, expers, exheres; potens, impotens, consors, princeps, many of which are also construed with the ablative.* E. g. Plenus metus, Full of fear. Referta negotiatorum, Full of merchants. Fertilis frugum hominumque, Abounding in produce and in men. Inops auxilii, Destitute of help. Virtutis, mentis compos, Possessed of virtue, master of one's intellect. Rationis particeps, expers, A partaker of reason, destitute of it. Patrum bonorum exheres, Disinherited of one's patrimony. Sui potens, Master of one's self. Consors imperii, Sharing command. Eloquentiae princeps, The first in eloquence.

REMARKS.

1. Poets, and their imitators in prose, extend this construction to many other adjectives, especially to those denoting an affection of the mind. E. g. Ambiguus consilii, auxilius futuri, benignus vini, certus scelëris, dubius viae, impiger militiae, integer vitae, interritus leti, incautus futuri, incertus sententiae, laetus laboris, modicus voluptatum, pervicax irae, piger periculi, securus futuri, segnis occasionum, socors futuri, timidus lucis, &c., in all of which the genitive stands instead of the more usual ablative or accusative, with de, in, or ad. So after adjectives generally, the genitive is sometimes employed (by the same class of authors) instead of the ablative, to express the relation "with respect to," "in regard to," "in"; as, Diversus morum, Different in respect to manners. Integer vitae, Irreproachable in life.

2. The genitive animi frequently serves as a sort of complement to adjectives of every kind, especially in the prose of a later date. E. g. aeger, anxius animi, sick, anxious in mind; atrox, caecus animi, of a ferocious, blind mind; confusus, incertus animi, &c.

3. Some of the adjectives enumerated under this rule occur also with prepositions. E. g. Prudens, rudis in jure civili. — Rudis ad pedestria bella. — Mihi in publicâ re socius, in privâs omnibus conscius esse soles.

GENITIVE AFTER PARTICIPLES IN "NS."

B. Participles in ns sometimes assume the character of adjectives, and then take the genitive instead of the case of their verbs.

The participles most frequently thus employed are amans, apprens, colens, fugiens, intelligens, metuens, negligens, observans, retinens, tolerans, patiens and impatiens, temperans and intemperans, &c.

Examples are: Amans patriae, Attached to one's country. Aman-tissimus fratris, Most affectionate towards his brother. Religionis colens, negligens, contemnens, An observer, neglecter, contemner of religion. Patiens or impatiens inediae, frigoris, Capable or incapable of enduring hunger, cold. Appetens laudis, Eager for praise. Sui despicens, Despising one's self. Deorum metuens, Fearing the gods. Sitiens virtutis, Thirsting after virtue. Inimicū intellīgens, Aware of coming events. Omnium rerum abundans, Abounding in all things. Insolens belli, Unaccustomed to warfare.

* Potens, impotens, consors, and princeps never occur with the ablative; compos, particeps, expers, exheres, rarely. Of the rest (refertus, plenus, &c.), some have the ablative even more frequently than the genitive. E. g. Insula referta divitiis, an island abounding in wealth.

Quis famulus amantior domini, Is there any servant more attached quam canis? to his master than the dog?
Sumus naturā appetentissimi honestatis. We are by nature covetous of Virtutem ob eam rem laudarunt, They lauded virtue merely because quod efficiens esset voluptatis. they considered it productive of pleasure.
Equus Romanus est, sui negotii bene gerens. He is a Roman knight, who manages his business well.

REMARKS.

1. Participles in ns, when used as such, are followed by the case of the verb to which they belong.* E. g. patiens frigus, laborem, (actually) enduring cold, hardship; but patiens frigoris, laboris, capable of enduring cold, hardship. (As participles proper, they denote a transient condition with reference to some particular time; as adjectives, a permanent capacity or quality.)

2. Verbals in ax likewise govern the genitive. E. g. Capax imperii, Capable of command. Iustitiæ tenax, Tenacious of justice. Terra ferax arborum, A land abounding in trees. Tempus edax rerum, Time, the destroyer of things. Vir cibi vinique capacissimus, A man capable of holding a large quantity of food and wine. So also a few participles in tus, as completus; but these have already been included among the adjectives of A.

EXERCISE 127.

Do you intend buying a carriage? — I cannot buy one, for I have not yet received my money. — Must I go to the theatre? — You must not go thither, for it is very bad weather. — Why do you not go to my brother? — I cannot go to him, for I cannot yet pay him what I owe him. — Why does this officer give this man a stab with his sword? — He gives him a stab with his sword, because the man has given him a blow with the fist. — Which of these two pupils begins to speak? — The one who is studious begins to speak. — What does the other do, who is not so? — He also begins to speak, but he is neither able to write nor to read. — Does he not listen to what you tell him? — He does not listen to it, if I do not give him a beating. — What does he do when you speak to him? — He sits behind the oven without saying a word. — Where does that dog run to? — It runs behind the house. — What did it do when you gave it a beating? — It barked, and ran behind the oven. — Why does your uncle kick that poor (miser) dog? — Because it has bitten his little boy. — Why has your servant run away? — I gave him a beating, so that he has run away. — Why do those children not work? — Their master has given them blows with the fist, so that they will not work. — Why has he given them blows with the fist? — Because they have been disobedient. —

Have you fired a gun? — I have fired three times. — At whom did you fire? — I fired at a bird which sat on a tree. — Have you fired a gun at that man? — I have fired a pistol at him. — Why have you fired a pistol at him? — Because he gave me a stab with his sword. — Are you fond of contention? — I am not fond of it. — I am very much devoted to the study of Latin literature. — Why does your brother not work? — Because he is not accustomed (insuetus) to labor. — Do you wish to be like that man? — I do not wish to be like him. — Was Cyrus the equal (par) of Alexander? — He was not his equal. — Is your father skilled in the law (jūris peritus)? — He is not skilled in it. — Is the city full of (referta) strangers? — It is full of them. — Who was the first in eloquence among the Romans (quis Romanorum)? — Cicero was the first. — Are you attached to your country? — I am very much attached to it. — Can you endure hunger and cold? — I cannot endure (them). — Is he eager for praise? — He is excessively eager (appetitissimus) for it. — What does it behoove us to be? — It behooves us to be thirsting after knowledge (intelligentia) and virtue.

Lesson LXVII. — PENSUM SEXAGESIMUM SEPTIMUM.

OF THE GENITIVE AFTER VERBS.

A. After verbs of valuing or esteeming, and also after those of buying and selling, hiring and letting, the indefinite price or value is expressed by the genitive.

Such verbs are aestimo, facio, pendo, dūco, pūto, habēo; aestimor, fito, pendor, and sum; — emo, mercor, vendo, venēo, licēo, tazo; stāre, constāre, &c.

The genitives representing the indefinite price or value are, — a) Substantives like nihi, “(for) nothing”; floci, nauci, pūi, pensi, teruncii, assis, “for a trifle,” “a mere song.” b) The neuter adjectives magni, highly; permagni, very highly; plūris, more highly; plūrimi, very highly, or the most; parvi, but little (of little account); minōris, less; minimi, very little or least; and so tanti, tantidem, quanti, quantūvis, quancūque, so much, just so much, as much, &c. Sometimes with prēti expressed. Examples are: —

Cómmii rēgis auctóritas mágni habebātur.	The authority of King Commius was held in high esteem.
Núlla vis aúri et argénti plūris, quam virtus aestimánda est.	No amount of gold or silver should be estimated higher than virtue.
Súmmum bónum plūrimi aestimándum est.	We must (should) attach the highest value to the summum bonum.

Prāvi hómīnes súa párvī pēndere, aliēna cúpēre sólent.	Bad men are accustomed to under- value their own possessions and to covet those of others.
Nóli spectāre, quánti hómo sit; párvī énīm pretiū est, qui jam níhili sit.	Never mind how much the man is worth, for he is worth but little who is already worthless.
Émit Cánius hórtos tánti, quánti Pýthius vóluit.	Canius has bought the garden for the price which Pythius de- manded.
Véndo méum fruméntum non plúris, quam cetēri.	I sell my grain no higher than others.
Tánti quódque málum est, quánti illud taxávimus.	Every misfortune is of as much account as we have rated that.
Núlla péstis húmāno génēri plú- ris stétit, quám ira.	No pest has cost the human family more than resentment.
De Drúsi hórtis quánti licuisse tú scribis.	With reference to Drusus's garden you write, how much it was of- fered for.
Égo a méis mē amári et mágni péndi póstulo.	I want myself to be loved and es- teemed by my friends.

REMARKS.

1. The definite value or price after the above verbs is expressed by a substantive in the ablative; as, aestimāre aliquid pecuniā, tribus denāriis; vendere aliquid quinquaginta talentis, &c. (Cf. Lesson LXXI. A.)

2. To the genitives of the price or value add hujus, boni, and aequi bontque in expressions like Rem hujus non facio, I do not care that * for it. Rem boni facio, or rem aequi bonique facio (or constulo), I consider it just and proper, I acquiesce in it (let it be so).

3. The verbs coeno and habito likewise occur with the genitive of the price. E. g. Quanti habitas? What do you pay for your lodgings? Tantum coenas, quanti habitas? Do you pay as much for your dinner as you do for your lodgings?

4. Aestimāre also admits the ablatives magno, permagno, plurimo, parvo, minimo, and nihilo; and after the verbs of buying and selling, these six ablatives are always put instead of their respective genitives. Pro nihilo may stand instead of nihili after putāre, ducēre, and esse. E. g. Aliquid magni or magno (nihili, nibilo or nihil) aestimāre; — emere or vendēre aliquid magno, parvo, plurimo, minimo (pretio); — aliquid pro nihilo ducēre, putāre, to consider anything of no account.

5. The price or value may also be expressed by an adverb; as cāre, bene, male, gratis, &c. E. g. Hoc mihi gratis (= nihilo) constat, This costs me nothing. Aves pingues care veniunt, Fat birds fetch a high price.

B. Verbs of reminding, remembering, and forgetting

* I. e. A straw, rush. This was accompanied by a gesture on the stage.

are followed by the genitive of the person, and by the genitive or accusative of the object, remembered or forgotten.

Such verbs are monĕo, admōnĕo, commōnĕo, commonefacto, aliquem; * — memĭni, reminiscor, recordor, obliscor.

Mĕdicus rĕgem mōdo māt̄ris sororūnque, mōdo tantae victōriae appropinquantis admonĕre nōn dĕstitit.

The physician did not cease to remind the king, now of his mother and sisters, now of the magnitude of the approaching victory.

Mīlites hortātus ēst, ut reminiscerentur pristinae virtutis suae, nēve mulierum liberūnque obliviscerentur.

He exhorted his soldiers to remember their prowess exhibited on former occasions, nor to forget their wives and children.

Grammaticos officii sui commōnemus.

We remind the philologists of their duty.

Discipulos ūl ūnum mōneo, ut praeceptores suos nōn minus, quam ipsa stūdia ament.

I remind learners of one thing only, which is, that they should love their teachers as they do their studies.

Somno animus mēm̄nit praeteritorum, praesentia cernit, futura praevidet.

In sleep the mind recalls the past, beholds things present, and foresees the future.

Vivōrum mēm̄ni, nec tāmen Epicuri licet oblivisci.

I mention living authorities; nevertheless, Epicurus must not be forgotten.

Bōni sūnt cives, qui patriae beneficia meminērunt.

They are good citizens, who are mindful of the benefits of their country.

Hōm̄ines interdum rēs praeclarissimas obliviscuntur.

Men sometimes forget the most remarkable things.

Nūquam liberos meos adspicio, quin Plancii mēritum in mē recōrder.

I never look at my children but what I call to mind my obligations to Plancus.

REMARKS.

1. Neuter pronouns and adjectives (e. g. hoc, id, illud, quod, quid, quae, multa, &c.) are invariably in the accusative after all the above verbs. E. g. Id unum te admonĕo, I remind you of this one thing. Multa admonemur, We are reminded of many things. But the accusative of substantives occurs only after verbs of reminding or forgetting; as, beneficia, mandata tua memini or oblitus sum.

2. Memĭni (in the sense of "I think of," or "I make mention"), recordor, and moneo, with its compounds, also take the ablative with de. E. g. De homine importunissimo ne meminisse quidem volo, I do not even wish to mention the importunate man. De Herode et de

* Verbs of reminding have thus also an accusative of the person reminded. (Lesson LX. C.)

Mettio meminēro, I will bear in mind Herod and Mettius. Velim scire, quid de te recordēre, I should like to know what you recollect with reference to yourself. Terentiam moneātis de testamento, Remind Terentia of the will.

3. The accusative of the person (reminded of, remembered or forgotten) rarely occurs, except after memini, when used in the sense of "I still remember or recollect" (a person seen or known before). E. g. Antipāter, quem tu probe meministi, Antipater, of whom you have an honorable recollection. Cinnam meminī, vidi Sullam, I remember Cinna, I have seen Sulla. But memento mei, nostri, Remember me, us.

4. In this construction is included the expression venit mihi in mentem (aliquid or alicujus rei), "something occurs to me." Thus, Venit mihi Platōnis in mentem. — Tibi tuarum virtutum venit in mentem. But also, Res mihi in mentem veniebat. — Omnia mihi in mentem venerunt.

C. The impersonal verbs poenitet, piget, pudet, taedet, miscret, veritum est, miscretur, and miserescit are followed by the genitive of the object by which the emotion is excited, and by the accusative of the person affected.* E. g.

Sapiētiā† nūquam sui poenitet.
Mē civitātis mōrum piget taedetque.

Sūnt hōmines, quōs libīdinis infamiaēque suae neque pudeat, neque taedeat.

Nūquam Atticum suscepti negotiū pertaēsum ēst.

Miseret tē aliōrum, tui nec miseret, nec pudet.

Cave tē frātrum, pro frātris salūte obsecrāntium, misereatur.

Īnōpis nūc tē misereācat mēi.

Nihilne tē pōpuli veretur, qui vociferāre in viā?

Wisdom never repents of itself.

I am wearied and disgusted with the morals of the state.

There are men who are neither ashamed nor disgusted by their own licentiousness and disgrace.

Atticus never grows weary of an undertaking once begun.

You pity others, but for yourself you have neither compassion nor shame.

Beware of being moved to pity by the brothers beseeching you for the safety of their brother.

Let my poverty now move you to pity.

Are you not afraid of the people, for vociferating in the street?

REMARKS.

1. The personal verbs miserēor and miseresco, "I pity," adopt the construction of miscret; but miserāri and commiserāri are followed by the accusative. E. g. Nihil nostri miserere? Have you no compassion for us? Miserescite regis, Pity the king. Commiseratus est fortunam Graeciae, He commiserated the fate of Greece.

* Compare page 334.

† Wisdom is here personified.

2. The accusative of neuter pronouns may stand instead of the genitive. E. g. Sapientis est proprium, nihil, quod (= cujus) poenitere possit, facere, It is characteristic of a wise man to do nothing which he may have to repent of.

3. The object of the emotion may also be an infinitive, or a clause introduced by quod. E. g. Me non pudet fatēri nescire, quod nesciam, I am not ashamed to confess, that I am ignorant of what I do not know. Quintum poenitet, quod animum tuum offendit, Quintus is sorry that he has offended you. Non poenitet me vixisse, I do not regret having lived.

4. The genitive after pudet sometimes signifies "before any one," and the accusative (me, te, &c.) is often omitted. E. g. Me tui, mi pater, pudet, I am ashamed before you, my father. Pudet deorum hominumque, It is a shame in the eyes of gods and men. Nonne te hujus templi, non urbis, non vitae, non lucis pudet? Are you not ashamed before this temple? &c.

5. These impersonal verbs sometimes (though rarely) occur personally (i. e. in the plural, and with a subject nominative). E. g. Non te haec (nom.) pudent?

To forget.

What is your pleasure, Sir? — I am inquiring after your father. — Is he at home? — No, Sir, he is gone out. — What is your pleasure? — I tell you that he is gone out. — Will you wait till he comes back again? — I have no time to wait. — Does this merchant sell on credit? — He does sell on credit. — Does it suit you to buy for cash? — It does not suit me. — Where have you bought these pretty knives? — I have bought them at the merchant's whose shop you saw yesterday. — Has he sold them to you on credit? — He has sold them to me for cash. — Do you often buy for cash? — Not so often as you. — Have you forgotten anything here? — I have forgotten nothing. — Does it suit you to learn this by heart? — I have not a good memory, so that it does not suit me to learn by heart. — Have you succeeded in writing a letter? — I have succeeded in it. — Have those merchants succeeded in selling their horses? — They have not succeeded therein. — Have you tried to clean my inkstand? — I have tried, but have not succeeded in it. — Do your children succeed in learning the English? — They do succeed in it. — Is there any wine in this cask? — There is some in it. — Is there any brandy in this glass? — There is none in it. — Is wine or water in it? — There is (inest) neither wine nor water in it. — What is there in it? — There is vinegar in it. — Are there any men in your room? — There are some there. — Is there any one in the storehouse? — There is no one there. — Were there many people in the theatre? — There were many there. — Are there many children that will not play? — There are many that will not study, but few that will not play. — Hast thou cleaned my trunk? — I have tried to do it, but I have not succeeded. — Do you intend buying an umbrella? — I intend buying one, if the merchant sells it me on credit. — Do you intend keeping mine? — I intend giving it back again to you, if I buy one.

Lesson LXVIII. — PENSUM DUODESEPTUAGESIMUM.

GENITIVE AFTER VERBS. — Continued.

A. After verbs of accusing, convicting, condemning, acquitting, and the like, the name of the crime is put in the genitive.

Such verbs are arguere, coarguere, insimulare, incredere, incredulare, urgere, to charge (accuse); — accusare, incusare, agere, deferre; — accessere, postulare, to accuse, arraign; summon; — interrogare, to call to an account; — se alligare, se adstringere, to become guilty of; — teneri, obstringi, obligari, to be guilty of; — convincere, captare, to convict; — judicare, damnare, condemnare, to condemn; — absolvere, solvere, liberare, purgare, to acquit, absolve. E. g.

Cicero Verrum avaritiae nimiae coarguit.	Cicero charged Verres with excessive avarice.
Cannensem quisquam exercitum fugae aut pavoris insimulare potest?	Can any one accuse the army, which fought at Canna, of flight or cowardice?
Galba etiam saevitiae populum increpuit edicto.	Galba, in an edict, reproved the people for cruelty even.
Miltiades accusatus est proditiōis.	Miltiades was accused of treason.
Qui alterum incusat probri, eum ipsum se intueri oportet.	He who charges another with dishonor should look into his own breast.
Caesar Dolabellam repetundarum * postulavit.	Caesar arraigned Dolabella on the charge of extortion.
Furti se obligavit.	He was guilty of theft.
Themistocles absens proditiōis est damnatus.	Themistocles, in his absence, was condemned for treason.
Judeus eum injuriarum absolvit.	The judge acquitted him of the charge of personal injury.
Senatus nec liberavit ejus culpa regem, neque arguit.	The senate neither absolved the king from that charge, nor accused him of it.

REMARKS.

1. The genitive of the crime may be explained by crimine or nomine† understood. These ablatives are sometimes actually put. E. g. Ne absens invidiae crimine accusaretur. — Nomine scelēris conjurationisque damnati sunt.

2. Genitives of the crime are peccati, maleficii, scelēris, caedis, furti, veneficii, parricidii, peculatus, falsi, injuriarum, repetundarum, proditiōis, majestatis; — probi, avaritiae, audaciae, temeritatis, ignaviae, impietatis, and others.

3. Instead of the genitive, the ablative with de or in is sometimes put. E. g. De pecuniis repetundis accusatus est. — Roscium de luxuria purgavit. — In crimine incendii convicti sunt. — In manifesto peccato tenebatur. So also: Inter sicarios damnatus est, He was condemned as an assassin.

4. The punishment or fine to which any one is condemned, is likewise expressed by the genitive; more rarely by the ablative.‡ Thus

* Sc. pecuniarum, of money to be reclaimed, i. e. extorted.

† On the charge or accusation of, under the title of.

‡ But always the ablative when a definite sum is named. E. g. Quindecim millibus gravis aeris est damnatus.

mortis, capitis, multae, pecuniae, quadrupli, octupli, or morte, capite, multā, pecuniā damnāri. Sometimes also by ad or in; as, ad poenam, ad bestias, ad metalla, in metallum, in expensas damnāri. E. g. Miltiades capitis absolutus, pecuniā multatus est.* — Tertiā parte agri damnati sunt. — Multos ad metalla, aut ad bestias damnāvūt. The poets put also the dative; as, morti damnātus.

5. The construction of the above verbs extends to several adjectives; as reus, compertus, notus, innotus, insons, manifestus, &c. E. g. Reus est injuriarum, He is accused of trespass. Manifestus rerum capitalium, Clearly convicted of a capital offence. Notus coniurationis, Guilty of conspiracy. Sacrilegū compertus, Found guilty of sacrilege.

B. After esse and fieri the genitive often stands elliptically, res, negotium, minus, officium, proprium, or some other word signifying part, business, duty, office, property, &c., being understood. E. g.

Nēque hōc tānti labōris est, quānti vidētur (sc. esse).

Est iudicis, nōn quid ipse vēlit, sed quid lēx et religiō cōgat, cogitare.

Est adolēscētis, majōres natū vereri.

Hōc doctōris intelligentis est, vidēre, quō fērat natūra sua quēmq̃ue.

Tūrdi ingēniū est, rīvulos consectari, fōntes rerū nōn vidēre.

Cujusvis homīnis est errāre; nullus, nisi insipientis, in errōre perseverāre.

Ars eārū rerū est, quae sciuntur.

Petulantia magis est adolēscētium, quam sēnum.

Omnia, quae mulieris fuerunt, viri fiunt.

Thebae pōpuli Romāni jūre bellī factae sūnt.

Nor is this a matter of as much difficulty as it seems to be.

It is the business (duty) of a judge to consider, not that which he himself may desire, but what the law and religion enforce.

It belongs to a young man to respect those older than himself.

It is the part of an intelligent instructor, to examine the natural aptitude of every one.

It is the sign (characteristic) of a dull head, to follow the course of things, and not to see their causes.

Every man is liable to err, but none but a fool will persevere in error.

Science relates to those things which are the objects of cognition.

Petulance is characteristic rather of young than of old men.

Everything, which belonged to the woman, becomes the property of the husband.

Thebes became the property of the Romans by right of war.

* "Released from capital punishment." Thus also capitis accusare or arcessere, to arraign one on a capital charge; capitis or capite anquirere, damnare, condemnare, to doom or condemn one to death. A similar idiom is voti or votūrum damnari, to have one's wish fulfilled or granted (lit. to be condemned to redeem one's vow).

- Jám mē Pompēi tótum ésse scís. You know that I am already entirely for Pompey.
- Família pecuniáque agnatórum The slaves and money shall become the property of the relations and members of the gens.

REMARKS.

1. The ellipsis of negotium, &c., which is commonly assumed to explain this construction, is sometimes expressed. E. g. Non hōrum temporū negotium est. — *Sapientis est propriū. — Id iudicis, viri, praeceptoris mūnus est. — Officiū libēri esse hominis puto. In all of which examples the omission of these words would leave the sense unaltered.

2. The genitive of the personal pronoun is never put, but instead of it the neuter of the corresponding possessive. Hence meum, tuum, suum, nostrum, vestrum est, and not mei, tui, &c. est. E. g. Non est mentiri meum, Lying is not my business (not characteristic of me). Est tuum, vidēre, quid agātur, It is your part (it belongs to you) to see what is at stake. Fui meum jam pridem patriam lugēre, It was long ago my lot to mourn over my country.†

3. This rule extends also to verbs of esteeming, believing, and to passives of appearing, seeming, &c., generally with esse understood. E. g. Tutelaē nostrae duximus, sc. esse, We considered it a matter subject to our intervention. Duri hominis vidētur, sc. esse, It seems to betray a cruel man. Tempōri cēdēre, semper sapientis est habitum, To yield to circumstances has always been considered characteristic of a prudent man.

4. When the genitive has a gerundive connected with it, esse stands in the sense of "to contribute or conduce to." E. g. Regum imperium initio conservandae libertatis atque augendae rei publicae fuit, At first the royal government contributed to the preservation of liberty, and to the advancement of the common weal.

5. In this construction are included the expressions moris est (= est in more, est in more positum), or consuetudinis est, It is a characteristic feature of the manners and customs (e. g. of the Greeks, &c.); est opērae (= est opērae praeſtitum), it is worth while, &c.; instead of which mos est, consuetudo est (e. g. Gallorum, Graecōrum), may also be employed.

C. The impersonal verbs interest and rēfert are followed by the genitive of the person interested or concerned, but where a personal pronoun is required, by the possessives meā, tuā, suā, nostrā, vestrā, and cujā.‡ E. g.

* Compare page 352, note †.

† So also other adjectives in place of the genitive. E. g. Hoc patrium (= patriis) est. — Et agere et pati fortia Romanum est, &c.

‡ With these ablatives causā or rē may be supplied. According to some grammarians, these pronouns are neut. acc. pl. with commōda understood. The quantity of the final a, however, and the testimony of Priscian, decide in favor of the ablative.

Magni interest Cicerónis, vél méa pótius, vél mehércle utriúsque.	It is a matter of great importance * to Cicero, or rather to me, or, by Hercules, to both of us.
Quis ést hódie, cújus intersit, istam légem manère ?	Who is there to-day (= now) that is at all concerned in the permanence of this law ?
Véstra, júdices, hóc máxime interest.	This is a matter of the highest importance to you, judges.
Nón adscripsi, quód tuá níhil referébat.	I have not added what does not concern you.
Humanitátis plúrfimum réfert.	It is a matter of the highest moment to humanity.

REMARKS.

1. The degree of importance is expressed either by genitives like magni, permagni, parvi, plúris, tanti, and quantí, &c., or by adverbs or neuter accusatives used adverbially; as, multum, plus, magis, maxime, parum, paulum, minus, minime, valde, magnópère, nihil, &c. The genitive of the person is often omitted. E. g. Magni refert, hic quod velít, It is a question of great consequence what this man wants. Quod permagni interest, pro necessario habétur, That which is of great importance is often deemed a matter of necessity. Hoc non plúris réfert, quam si imbrem in cribrum geras, This is of no more consequence than if you were to pour water into a sieve.

2. The matter or thing of consequence or importance is expressed, a) by the infinitive (with or without a subject accusative); b) by a clause introduced by ut (uti), ne, or an interrogative (qui, qualis, quam, &c.); and c) sometimes by the neuter pronouns hoc illud, &c.; but never by a substantive. E. g. Interest omnium recte facere, It concerns all to do right. Quid nostrá refert, victum esse Antonium? What do we care for the defeat of Antonius? Reipublicae interest, uti salvus esset, It is important to the commonwealth that he should be safe. Non refert, quam multos libros, sed quam bonos habéas, It matters not how many books you have, but how good they are.

3. In the sense of "it profits, it conduces to," these verbs also take the dative or the accusative with ad. E. g. Cui rei id te assimiláre retúlit? What advantage was it to you to pretend that? Magni ad honórem nostrum interest, It contributes greatly to our honor.

Lesson LXIX. — PENSUM UNDESEPTUAGESIMUM.

SYNTAX OF THE ABLATIVE.

A. The ablative serves to express a variety of relations, of which the most important are those of CAUSE, CONDITION, MODALITY, QUALITY, PLACE, TIME, DIFFERENCE, and NUMBER. All these relations are in English indicated by means of prepositions, such as by, with, from, of, on account of, with respect to. The Ablative of Time has already been considered in Lesson LVII., that of Place in Lesson LVI., and the Ablative after Comparatives in Lesson XLIII., q. v.

THE ABLATIVE OF CAUSE.

B. After verbs passive and neuter, and sometimes also after transitive verbs and adjectives, the ablative serves to indicate the cause, occasion, ground, or reason of the action or state expressed by them.* E. g.

Mâri supéro inferôque Itâlia însulæ múdo cingitur.

Italy is bounded by the upper and the lower sea, like an island.

Quâe dômus tam stâbilis est, quâe nôn ôdiis atque dissidiis fûnditus pôssit evérti?

What house is there so firm, that could not be destroyed to its very foundation by hatred and dissension?

Etesiârûm flûtû nímii temperântur calôres.

The spells of excessive heat are moderated by the Etesian winds.

Darius senectûte diem ôbiit suprêmum.

Darius died from the effects of old age.

Delicto dolère, correctiône gaudère nôs opórtet.

We should be sorry, for the fault and rejoice at its correction.

Concórdiâ rês pârvæ crêscunt, discórdiâ máximæ dilabúntur.

By concord small things increase and prosper, but by discord the greatest are reduced to ruin.

Múltis in rêbus negligétiâ† plêctimur.

We suffer punishment for negligence in many things.

Miltiades aêger érat vulnéribus, quac, &c.

Miltiades was sick from the wounds, which, &c.

Minturnêses Márium fêssum inédiâ fluctibûsque recreárant.

The Minturnenses reinvigorated Marius, who had been exhausted by fasting and the effects of the sea.

Si fructibus et emolumentis‡ amicitias colémus.

If we will cultivate friendship on account of its advantages and emoluments, &c.

In culpâ sùnt, qui officia désêrunt molliúâ ânimi.

They are culpable, who neglect their duties from want of firmness.

Diversis duôbus vitiis, avaritiâ et luxúriâ, civitas Româna laborabat.§

The Roman state suffered from two opposite vices, from avarice and luxury.

* These relations are in English expressed by the prepositions by, from, of, on account of, for.

† = propter negligentiam.

‡ = propter fructus et emolumenta, or fructuum et emolumentorum gratiâ. See note 5.

§ Compare note 2.

REMARKS.

1. After passive verbs, the impersonal cause alone stands in the ablative without a preposition, and the personal agent requires the preposition a or ab. (Cf. page 165.)

2. The adjectives and neuter verbs, thus followed by the ablative of the cause, are generally resolvable into a passive verb akin to them in sense. E. g. Fessus longā standi morā, Weary (i. e. having been made weary) from long standing. Interiit fame = consumptus est fame, He died of hunger. Gaudeo tuo honore = delector tuo honore, I rejoice in your honor. Expectatio rumore crevit = aucta est rumore, The expectation increased with the report.

3. In many of the above-mentioned cases the cause or occasion may also be expressed by prepositions; as by ob, propter, and per with the accusative, or by ab, de, ex, and prae with the ablative. E. g. Ob merita sua carus, Beloved on account of his merit. Propter metum, prae lacrimis non scribere possum, I am unable to write from fear, on account of the tears I shed. Per valetudinem id bellum exsequi nequiverat, He had been unable to finish that war, on account of his health.* Ex intestinis, ex pedibus laborare, To suffer from the diarrhoea, from the gout.

4. The accusative vicem, "on account of," often occurs in connection with a genitive, or the possessives meam, tuam, &c., instead of the ablative vice. E. g. Tuam vicem doleo, I am grieved on your account. Maestus non suam vicem, sed propter ipsum periclitantium fratrum (ac. vicem), Sad not on his own account, but on account of his brothers in danger on his account.

5. After transitive verbs the cause, ground, or reason is sometimes expressed by the ablative alone,† but more commonly by propter with the accusative, or by causā, gratiā, ergo, or nomine, with the genitive. E. g. Multi ex urbe amicitiae causā (= propter amicitiam) Caesarem secuti erant, Many from the city had followed Caesar out of friendship. Coronā aureā donatus est virtutis ergo benevolentiaeque, He was presented with a crown of gold on account of his valor and benevolence.

6. When the cause is an intention or purpose, it is expressed by hac mente, hoc consilio, ut . . . , and the motive by amore, ira, odio, laetitia, &c., in connection with some participles like ductus, adductus, incensus, incitatus, mōtus, &c. E. g. ira incensus, from feelings of revenge; inopiam adductus, induced by want; coactus metu, driven by fear. Classem ea mente comparavit, ut Italiam peteret, He raised a fleet with the intention of invading Italy.

THE ABLATIVE OF THE MEANS OR INSTRUMENT.

C. After verbs of every kind, the ablative serves to indicate the means or instrument by or with which anything is effected or realized.

* Per and propter may also have an accusative of the person. E. g. Si per me licuisset, If I had given permission. Propter quos viri, Through whom he lives. But the mere ablative of the person never occurs in any of these relations.

† As in the two examples preceding the last under the rule, page 418.

The corresponding English prepositions are with, by, by means of, through. E. g.

Lycúrgus léges súas auctoritatē Apóllinis Dēlphici confirmāvit.	Lycurgus established his laws by the authority of Delphic Apollo.
Córribus taúri, ápri déntibus, mórsu leónes sē tulántur.	Bulls defend themselves with their horns, boars with their tusks, lions with their jaws.
Benevoléntiam cívium blandítiis collígere túrpe est.	It is disgraceful to solicit the favor of the people by means of flattery.
Natúram expéllas fúrcā, tamen úsque recúrret.	You may drive out nature with a pitchfork, yet it will incessantly return again.
Británni interiôres lácte et cárne vívunt.	The Britons of the interior live on milk and flesh.
Hannibal Sagúntum ví expugnāvit.	Hannibal took Saguntum by force.
Injúria fíi duôbus módis, aut ví, aut fráude.	Injustice is done in two ways, either by violence or fraud.

REMARKS.

1. The ablative is rarely employed, when the means or instrument has reference to a person, but generally either per with the accusative, or the periphrasis alicujus operâ, beneficio, consilio, culpâ, &c. E. g. Per te salvus sum, I am safe through your instrumentality. Detriménta per homínes eloquentíssimos importáta, Evils introduced by the most eloquent men. Quorum operâ (= per quos) plēbem conciliátam existimábant, By whom they supposed the people to have been roused. Equitem Romanum beneficio tuo conservávi, I have saved a Roman knight through your kindness. Cujus indicio (= per quos) haec cognovérant, Through whom they had become informed of this.

2. Per with the accusative is often put instead of the ablative of the means, especially when reference is had to external circumstances. E. g. Per vim ei bona eripuit, He robbed him of his property by main force (by forcible measures). Per litteras aliquem certíorem facère, To inform any one by letter. Per simulationem amicitiae me perdidérunt, They have ruined me under the pretence of friendship. But the material instrument is always expressed by the ablative. E. g. Vulneráre aliquem gladio, cultro, sagittis, To wound any one with the sword, with a knife, with arrows.

Lesson LXX. — PENSUM SEPTUAGESIMUM.

THE ABLATIVE OF MODE OR MANNER.

A. A substantive, denoting the mode or manner in which anything is done, is put in the ablative with cum; but when it has an adjective or adjective pronoun connected with it, the preposition may be omitted. E. g.

Litteræ cum curâ diligentique scriptæ. A letter written with care and diligence.

Cum dignitate potius cadere, quam cum ignominia servire nos oportet. We should rather fall with honor, than serve with dishonor.

Cum ira nihil recte fieri potest. Nothing can be done properly with anger.

Cum clamore in forum curritur. There is a rush towards the forum with clamors.

Cum silentio auditi sunt. They were heard in silence.

Ipse magna cum curâ et diligentia scripsit. He himself has written with great care and diligence.

Id æquo animo nōn fēret civitas.	The state will not submit to that patiently.
Sidēra cūrsus suos conficiunt māximā celeritatē .	The stars perform their revolutions with the utmost celerity.
Cum māximā offensīōne Pātrū consulatū abiit.	He resigned his consulship to the great dissatisfaction of the senate.
Dēos sēmp̄r pūrā, integrā, incorruptā et mēntē et vōcē vērēmur.	Let us always venerate the gods with pure, entire, uncorrupted heart and voice.

REMARKS.

1. The ablative of manner has adverbial force, and may often be resolved into an adverb. E. g. cum curā, i. e. diligenter; cum silentio, i. e. tacite, clam; cum fide, i. e. fideliter; cum voluptate, i. e. libenter; cum bonā gratiā, i. e. benigne, &c.

2. In certain expressions the ablative of nouns appears also without cum, even though no adjective is added. E. g. Aliquid sponte, voluntate, jure, injuriā facere, To do anything of one's own accord, willingly, justly, unjustly. Aliquid recte et ordine, modo et ratione, ratione et ordine facere, To do anything properly, and in order, &c. Legē agere, To proceed according to the law. Silentio praeterire, To pass over in silence. And so always without "cum":—hoc modo, quo modo, eodem animo, eādem ratione, &c.

3. Cum with the ablative also denotes that which is simultaneous or concomitant. E. g. Cum occasu solis copias educere, To lead out one's forces at sunset. Cum nuntio exire, To go out as soon as the message arrived. Cum exercitū, cum copiis, cum militibus, &c. iter facere, To march with one's army, forces, soldiers, &c. Romam cum febre veni, I came to Rome with a fever. But also without "cum"; as, Egressus omnibus copiis, Having marched forth with all the forces. Ingenti exercitū ab urbe profectus, Having left the city with a large army. Duumvir decem navibus venit, The duumvir came with ten ships, &c. Castra clamore invadunt, They invade the camp with a clamor.*

B. After nouns, adjectives, and verbs, the ablative often expresses the relations indicated by the English with respect to, by, in, or in point of. E. g.

Natiōne Medus est.	With respect to his nationality he is a Mede.
Hamīlcar cognōmīne Bārcas.	Hamilcar surnamed Barca.
Dōmo Carthaginiēnses sūnt.	They are Carthaginians (inhabitants of Carthage).
Pauci (centum, mille) nūmero homīnes.	But few (a hundred, thousand) men in number.

* The participles junctus and conjunctus sometimes thus appear without "cum". E. g. Bellum miserrimā fugā junctum, A war attended with a most wretched flight. Nefaria libido dedecore, scelere conjuncta, Nefarious licentiousness connected with dishonor, with crime, &c.

Grândis nâtu,* aetâte provectus est.	He is of full age, advanced in life.
Quiêti, alâcres ânimo sùmus.†	We are calm, cheerful in mind (= of a calm, cheerful mind).
Mêmbris ômnibus câptus ac débilis est.	He is nerveless and feeble in every limb.
Scêlère pâr est illi, indûstriâ infêrior.	He is equal to him in crime, inferior to him in industry.
Agésilâus fûit clâudus âltero pède Sôcrâtes lônge lepôre et humanitâte ômnibus præstîtû.	Agésilâus was lame in one of his feet. Socrâtes was far superior to every one in point of wit and humanity.
Péricles et Themístocles grândes érant vêrbis, crébri senténtiis, comprehénsiône rêrum brèves.	Pericles and Themistocles were grand in the use of words, abounding in apothegms, and brief in the comprehension of things.
Nôn solum commôveor ânimo, sed étiam tôto corpôre perhorresco.	I am not only troubled in mind, but I shiver with horror in every limb.

REMARKS.

1. This ablative serves to restrict, limit, or define more particularly the words with which it is connected, and occurs in a great variety of expressions. E. g. meâ sententiâ, meâ opiniône, meo judicio, in my opinion or judgment; re, in reality, in fact; nomine, in (or by) name; genère, by birth; domo, by residence; eloquentiâ, in eloquence, &c.

2. Instead of this ablative of limitation or more particular definition, the poets and their imitators sometimes employ the accusative. E. g. Fractus membra (= membris) labore, Disabled in his limbs from labor. Humeros (= humeris) oleo perfusus, Anointed as to his shoulders with oil. Vitæ caput (= capite) tegitur, He is covered as to his head with vine-leaves. Tremît artus (= artibus), He trembles in his limbs. Os humerosque deo similis, In countenance and shoulders like a divinity ‡ So also in ordinary prose even, id temporis for eo tempore; id ætatis for eâ ætate; cetera and reliqua for ceteris and reliquis rebus, &c. On this accusative compare Lesson XLVIII. D.

THE ABLATIVE OF QUALITY.

C. A noun and an adjective denoting a quality, character, or condition are put in the ablative with some tense of esse, existere, or inveniri, expressed or understood. E. g.

* So also major, minor nâtu; and maximus, minimus nâtu.

† This differs very little from the genitive or ablative of quality: — quiêti, alacris animi sumus; quiêto, alacri animo sumus.

‡ So passive verbs of clothing and divesting frequently have an accusative of the thing put on or taken off, instead of the more regular ablative. E. g. Induor vestem (= veste), I am (being) clothed in a garment. Induttur faciem vultumque Dianæ, He puts on the form and countenance of Diana. Inutile ferrum cingitur, He begirds himself with the useless sword. Pueri lævo suspensi loculos tabulamque lacerto, Boys with their little box of counters and their writing-tablet suspended from their left shoulder.

Agesilaus statura fuit humili et corpore exiguo.

Agesilaus was of low stature and of a small body.

Rēs est insigni infamia.

It is an affair of signal disgrace.

Murena mediocri ingenio, sed magno studio rerum veterum, multae industriae et magni laboris fuit.

Murena was a man of but moderate talent, but of great zeal for antiquities, of much industry and great perseverance.

Theophrastus auctor est, ebur fossile candido et nigro colore inveniri.

Theophrastus informs us, that fossil ivory is found of a white and black color.

In recentiore Academiā exstitit divina quādam celeritate ingenii Carneades.

In the later academy Carneades shone as a man of almost a divine quickness of intellect.

Magno timore sum: sed bene speramus.

I am in great fear, but we hope for the best.

So also without esse:—

*Fuit quidam, summo ingenio vir, Zeno.

There was a certain Zeno, a man of the highest order of intellect.

Pompeium, praestantissimā virtute virum (acc.).

Pompey, a man of the most distinguished virtue.

Est spelunca quaedam, infinita altitudine.

There is a certain cave of immense dimensions.

Difficili transitu flumen, ripisque praeruptis.

A river, difficult to cross, and of rugged banks.

REMARKS.

1. The ablative of quality may be explained by instructus, praeditus, ornatus, "furnished, endowed, adorned with." (Cf. Lessons LXXI. B. and LXXII. B.)

2. This ablative differs upon the whole but little from the genitive of quality,† except that the latter expresses rather natural than acquired qualities, while the former is applied to both. The genitive of quality, moreover, seldom occurs in the plural, and comprises also determinations of measure which are never indicated by the ablative. Sometimes the genitive and ablative both occur in the same construction, as in the example, Murena mediocri ingenio, &c.

How long?

Long, a long time.

Very long.

For a long time, a great while (past).

{ Quam longum (tempus)? † { Quā diu? Quā diū?

Diū, longum tempus.

Per diū, longissime.

Jam diū, jam pridem.

* These examples may be explained by a relative with est, fuit, &c., or by the hypothetical ens ("being"). E. g. Zeno, qui vir erat summo ingenio. Spelunca, ens or quae est infinita altitudine, &c.

† Compare Lesson LVII. A.

EXERCISE 133.

Have you ever been in this village? — I have been there several times. — Are there good horses in it? — There is not a single one in it. — Have you ever been in that country? — I have been there once. — Are there many learned men there? — There are many there, but they spend their time in reading? — Are there many studious children in that village? — There are some, but there are also others who will not study. — Are the peasants of this village able to read and write? — Some are able to read, others to write and not to read, and many both to read and to write; there are a few who are neither able to read nor to write. — Have you done the exercises? — We have done them. — Are there any faults in them? — There are no faults in them, for we have been very assiduous. — Has your friend many children? — He has only one, but he is a good-for-nothing fellow, for he will not study. — In what does he spend his time? — He spends his time in playing and running. — Why does his father not punish him? — He has not the courage to punish him. — What have you done with the stuff which you bought? — I have thrown it away, for it was good for nothing. — How has your son written his letter? — He has written it with great care and diligence. — He has written it with extreme negligence (negligentissime). — Have you heard your little brother spell? — I have heard him patiently and in silence. — Is your friend an Englishman? — No, he is a Frenchman by birth. — Are you an American by birth? — No, I am a German. — Are they Romans? — No, they are Russians. — How many are there of them? — They are a hundred in number. — Are they equal to us in industry? — They are not our equals. — Do they not excel us in humanity? — They do not excel us. — We are not inferior to them in diligence. — Is our friend a man of much talent (ingenio)? — He is a man of high talent and of the most distinguished virtue. — They are men of low stature, of small talent, and of no virtue.

EXERCISE 134.

Have you been long in Paris? — These four years. — Has your brother been long in London? — He has been there these ten years. — Is it long since you dined? — It is long since I dined, but not long since I supped. — How long is it since you supped? — It is two hours and a half. — Is it long since you received a letter from your father? — It is not long since I received one. — How long is it since you received a letter from your friend who is in Germany? — It is three months since I received one. — Is it long since you spoke to the man whose son has lent you money? — It is not long since I spoke to him. — Is it long since you saw your parents? — It is a great while since I saw them. — Has the son of my friend been living long in your house? — He has been living there a fortnight. — How long have you had these books? — I have had them these three months. — How long is it since your cousin set out? — It is more than a month since he set out. — What is become of the man who spoke English so well? — I do not know what is become of him, for it is a great while since I saw him. — Is it long since you heard of the officer who gave your friend a stab with his sword? — It is more than a year since I heard of him. — How long have you been learning German? — I have been learning it only these three months. — Are you already able to speak it? — You see that I am beginning to speak it. — Have the children of the French noblemen been learning it long? — They have been learning it these five years, and they do not yet begin to speak. — Why can they not speak it? — They cannot speak it, because they are learning it badly (male). — How long is it since these children drank? — They drank a quarter of an hour ago. — How long has your friend been in Spain? — He has been there this month. — When did you meet my brother? — I met him a fortnight (quatuordecim dies) ago. — Are there many soldiers in your country? — There is a regiment of three thousand men there. — How long have I kept your cousin's money? — You have kept it almost a year.

Lesson LXXI. — PENSUM UNUM ET SEPTUAGESIMUM.

THE ABLATIVE AFTER VERBS.

A. After verbs of buying, selling, valuing, estimating, and the like, the noun denoting the price or value is put in the ablative. E. g.

Spem prætio nōn emo.

I do not purchase hope with money.

Viginti talentis unam orationem

Isocrates sold one of his orations for Isocrates vendidit.

twenty talents.

Lis ejus aestimatur centum talentis.

His fine was estimated at a hundred talents.

Quinta civium classis undecim millibus assium censebatur.

The fifth class of citizens was rated at eleven thousand asses each.

Scrupulum auri valebat sestertius vicenis.

A scruple of gold was worth twenty sesterces.

Multo sanguine et vulneribus Poenis victoria stetit.

The victory cost the Carthaginians much blood and many wounds.

Quod non opus est, asse carum est.

What one does not need is (too) dear for a penny.

Magnos homines virtute metimur, non fortunā.

We measure great men by their moral worth, and not by their fortune.

Haec res, non verbis ponderantur.

These things are judged of from the reality, and not from words.

Quod rectum est, nec magnitudine aestimatur, nec numero, nec tempore.

That which is morally right is estimated neither by size, nor by number, nor by time.

REMARKS.

1. Verbs of buying and selling are also followed by the ablatives magno, permagno, plurimo, parvo, minimo (sc. pretio), but other verbs of this class more commonly take the genitives magni, permagni, &c. (Cf. Lesson LXVII. A.)

2. The ablative of price occurs in connection with many other verbs, besides those of buying and selling. E. g. Triginta milibus (sestertium), habitat, He pays thirty thousand sesterces for a house (lodgings). Docet talento, He charges a talent for his instruction. Vix drachmis est obsonatus decem, He purchased provisions for scarcely ten drachmas. Parvo aere merëo, I serve for small pay. Lavor quadrante, I am washed (I bathe) for a quadrans. So est in the sense of "it is worth"; as, Sal in Italia est sextante, In Italy salt is worth (sells for) a sextans.

B. Verbs of plenty or want, and corresponding transitive verbs, signifying to fill, endue, enrich, or to deprive, and the like, are followed by the ablative.

Verbs of plenty and want are abundo, affluo, circumfluo, floreo, redundo, scateo, vigeo; careo, egeo, indigeo, vaco, &c.

Verbs of filling, enduing, depriving, &c. are compleo, expleo and impleo, cumulo, imbuo, refercio, satio and exsatio, satio, stipo and constipo; afficio, dono, remuneror, locupleto, orno, augeo; — privo, spolio, orbo, fraudo and defraudo, nudo, exuo, &c. E. g.

Abundarunt semper auro regna Asiae.	The kingdoms of Asia always abounded in gold.
Antiochia eruditissimis hominibus, liberalissimisque studiis affluëbat.	The city of Antioch abounded in learned men and liberal pursuits of the highest order.
Régno carëbat Tarquinius, quum régno esset expulsus.	Tarquin was without royal authority when he had been expelled from his realm.
Mulier abundat audaciâ, consilio et ratione deficitur.	Woman has an abundance of audacity, but is deficient in deliberation and method.
Vacare culpâ magnum est solatium.	To be free from guilt is a great consolation.
Dëus hönis omnibus* explëvit mundum.	God has filled the world with good things of every kind.
Tëmplum Junönis egrëgiis picturis locupletäre voluerunt.	They wanted to enrich the temple of Juno with choice paintings.
Natüra Germaniam decorävit altissimörum höminum exercitibus.	Nature has adorned Germania with armies of the tallest men.
Demöcritus dicitur oculis se privasse.	Democritus is said to have deprived himself of his eyes.
Consilio et auctoritätë nön módo nön orbäri, sed étiam augëri senëctus sólet.	Old age is commonly not only not deprived of counsel and authority, but even advanced in it.

REMARKS.

1. The verbs egeo, indigeo, compleo, and impleo sometimes take the genitive instead of the ablative. E. g. Aliquem temeritatis implere, To

* After verbs of filling, and others of this class, the ablative may also be put as the means or instrument. Cf. Lesson LXIX. C fill any one with temerity. Complētus jam mercatōrum carcer est, The prison is already full of merchants.*

2. To this construction belong afficere and remunerari, in expressions like afficere aliquem beneficio, honore, praemio, to bestow a kindness, an honor, a reward upon any one; afficere aliquem ignominia, injuriam, poenam, morte, to inflict a dishonor, an injury, punishment, death upon any one; remunerari aliquem praemio, to requite any one with a reward.

3. To this rule may also be referred the adjectives orbis, helpless, bereaved; vacuus, empty; and refertus, full, replete. E. g. Orbis liberis, Bereaved of children. Mare portibus orbum, A sea without ports. Vacuae vites fructu, Vines without fruit. Insula referta divitiis, An island full of riches.†

4. Opus est, "there is need," is either used impersonally with the ablative, or personally (as opus est, opus sunt) with the nominative. The person is then always in the dative. E. g. Opus est mihi libris. — Multa tibi opus sunt. — Dux nobis et auctor opus est. — Auctoritate tua nobis opus est, et consilio. — The thing needed is sometimes also expressed by the genitive, by an infinitive or supine in u, or by the ablative of a perfect participle. E. g. Temporis opus est, There is need of time. Quid opus est plura (sc. proferre)? What need is there of saying more? Nunc opus est te animo valere, Now you must be strong in mind. Longius, quam quod scitu opus est, Farther than is necessary to know. Hoc facto, maturato opus est, This must be done, hastened. To these add Mihi opus est, ut lavem, It is necessary that I should wash.‡

5. The construction of usus est, "it is necessary," is the same as that of opus est. E. g. Nunc manibus rapidis usus est. — An cuiquam est usus homini, se ut cruciet? Does any man need tormenting himself?

C. Verbs signifying to remove, to expel, to deter, to free, and others denoting separation, difference, or distance, are frequently followed by the ablative, without the prepositions ab, de, or ex.

The principal verbs of this class are pello, depello and expello, ejicio, abterreo and deterreo, moveo, amoveo, demoveo, removeo: abeo, exeo, cedo, decedo, discedo, desisto, evado, abstineo: libero, expedio, solco, exsolvo, exonero, and levo: — alieno and abalieno, distingo, discerno, secerno, differo, discrepo, dissideo, disto, abhorreo, &c. E. g.

Censōres omnes, quos (de) senātu movērunt. All the censors, whom they have removed from the senate.

Ne opifices quidem sē (ab) artibus suis removērunt. Not even the artisans withdrew from their trades.

* On egeo and indigeo compare page 113.

† But also mare vacuum ab hostibus. — Referta Gallia negotiatorum, according to Lesson LXXVI. A.

‡ Compare pages 183 and 288.

Flaccus petitioned to be released from the laws.

Release the state from perhaps a groundless apprehension.

We are relieved from superstition, we are delivered from the fear of death.

The sun was equally distant from the east and west.

REMARKS.

1. The verbs exsolvere, exonerare, and levare are always followed by the ablative, while liberare, expedire, solvere, and the adjective liber, may have either aliquā re or ab aliquā re.

2. The verbs alienare, abalienare, distinguere, &c. commonly have ab, and the ablative only among the poets. But differre, discrepare, &c., and the adjective diversus, sometimes have the dative instead of ab.

3. The verb separare commonly takes ab. The construction of prohibere and defendere is aliquem re, ab re or ab aliquo. That of interdicere, alicui aliquā re, as in the formula alicui aquā et igni interdicere, to banish one.

4. In imitation of the Greeks, the poets sometimes put the genitive instead of the ablative after verbs and adjectives of separation. E. g. Me omnium jam laborum levas, You release me now from all my labors. Liber laborum, Free from labors. Purus scelēris, Pure from guilt.

It is about thirty feet high.	{ Alta est circiter triginta pēdes (acc.). Est pēdum circiter triginta. (Cf. Lesson LXIV. B.)

D. Obs. In answer to the questions, How far? How long (high, deep, wide, thick)? the noun denoting the extent of space is generally put in the accusative without a preposition, but sometimes in the ablative.*

How deep is the well?	Quām altus (profundus) pūteus est?
It is twenty feet deep.	Altus (profundus) est viginti pēdes.
He had two ditches made, fifteen feet deep. Behind these he constructed a rampart of twelve feet.	Dūas fossas quīndēcim pēdes lātas perdūxit. Post eas vāllum duōdecim pēdum extrūxit.

Lesson LXXII. — PENSUM ALTERUM ET SEP- TUAGESIMUM.

ABLATIVE AFTER VERBS AND ADJECTIVES.

A. The deponent verbs ūtor, frūor, fungor, potior, vescor, dignor, laetor, glorior, nitor, and the compounds abūtor, perfrūor, defungor, and perfungor are generally followed by the ablative. E. g.

Nāvis optime cūrsū cōnficit ēa, quae scientissimo gubernatōre ūlūtur.

That ship makes the best passage which has the most skilful helmsman.

Id ēst cuiusque propriū, quō quisque frūitur atque ūlūtur.

The property of every one is that which he enjoys and uses.

Qui adipisci vēram glōriam volet, iustitiae fungātur officiis.

Let him, who desires to acquire real distinction, attend to the requirements of justice.

Defuncti bello Pūnico, Romāni arma Macedōniae intulērunt.

Released from the Punic war, the Romans directed their arms against Macedonia.

Eadem periculā, quibus nos per-fūcti sumus.

The same dangers which we have undergone.

Impedimentis castrisque nostris potiti sint.

Our soldiers made themselves masters of the baggage and the camp.

Helvétii persuāsit, perfacile esse, totius Galliae imperio potiri.

He persuaded the Helvetii, that it was very easy to get possession of entire Gaul.

Nūmidāe plerūque lacte et ferinā carne vescēbantur.

The Numidians subsisted principally upon milk and the flesh of wild beasts.

Omne, quô vescuntur homines, pênus est.	Everything, which men live upon, is food (provisions).
Haûd équidem tãû mê dignor honore.	I do not consider myself worthy of such an honor.
Nûllâ rê tãm laetâri sôleo, quam meôrum officiôrum consciëntiâ.	There is nothing in which I am wont to take so much delight, as in the consciousness of my duties.
Nûllâ rê nûi decet sapiëntem, nisi virtûte animique consciëntiâ.	The philosopher ought to rely on nothing, except on virtue and the consciousness of intellect.

REMARKS.

1. The verbs utor, frûor, fungor, potior, and vescor sometimes also occur with the accusative. E. g. Rem medici utuntur. — Argentum abutor. — Frui ingentum. — Militare munus fungens. — Potri administrationem regni. — Absinthium vescuntur.

2. Potior also governs the genitive; as, potri rërum, imperii, dominationis, to obtain the chief command. The construction of glorior is either RE, DE RE, OR IN RE; that of nitor and innitor, RE, IN RE, AD OR IN REM. E. g. In virtûte jure gloriâmur. We justly seek our honor in virtue. Pompeii in vitâ nitebatur salus civitatis. The salvation of the state depended upon the life of Pompey. Ad immortalitatem gloriæ nititur. He is striving after an immortality of glory.

3. Fido and confido either take the ablative, like nitor, or the dative. E. g. Nemo alterius, qui suae confidit, virtûti invidet. No one envies the virtue of another, who has any confidence in his own. Nemo potest fortunæ stabilitate confidere. No one can rely upon the stability of fortune. — Stare, "to abide by," has either the ablative or in; as, Stant sententiâ. They abide by their opinion. Stare in fide, To remain true, faithful.

B. The preceding rule includes the adjectives dignus, indignus, frëtus, aliënus, praedïtus, and contentus, which are likewise followed by the ablative. E. g.

Natus sum ad agendum semper aliquid dignum viro.	I am born for the constant performance of something worthy of the character of man.
Excellentium civium virtus imitatione, non invidia digna est.	The virtue of eminent citizens deserves imitation, and not envy.
Quam multi luce indigni sunt, et tamen dies oritur.	How many are unworthy of the light of day, and yet it rises!
Haec ad te scripsi liberius, frëtus conscientia officii mei.	I have written you this somewhat frankly, relying on my consciousness of duty.
Di sunt benefici, neque hoc alienum ducunt majestate sua.	The gods are beneficent, nor do they consider this attribute at variance with their majesty.
Epicurus confirmat, deos membris humanis esse praeditos.	Epicurus asserts, that the gods are possessed of human limbs.

Mens est prædita mōtu sempiterno .	The mind is endued with eternal motion.
Parvo est natūra contenta .	Nature is content with little.
Quod cuique tēpōris ad vivendum datur , eo debet esse contentus .	Every one ought to be contented with the space of time given him to live in.

REMARKS.

1. Aliēnus, in the sense of "averse or hostile to," has commonly either ab or the dative; but in the sense of "unsuitable, incompatible," it has either the ablative or ab, and sometimes the genitive. E. g. Homo aliēnus a litteris, A man averse (or a stranger) to letters. Ambitioni aliēnus, Averse to ambition. Aliēnum a vitā meā, Foreign to (inconsistent with) my life. Aliarum rerum aliēna, Not reconcilable with other things, unexampled.

2. Dignus sometimes (though rarely) occurs with the genitive. When connected with a verb, it takes either the infinitive, or the subjunctive with qui. E. g. Dignus salutis. — Dignus, qui impēret, Worthy to command. Horatius fere solus legi dignus, Horace almost the only one worth reading. So also contentus scripsisse, satisfied to have written.

C. The participles nātus, prognātus, genītus, sūtus, edītus, and ortus are sometimes followed by the ablative without the preposition ex or a.

Such ablatives are generally lōco, genēre, stirpe, familiā, parentibus, frequently in connection with an adjective.

Vir summo lōco nātus .	A man of high rank by birth.
Virgines hōnesto ortae lōco .	Maidens of respectable descent.
Adolescētes amplissimā familiā nāti .	Young men of illustrious descent.
Archias nātus est lōco nobili .	Archias was of noble origin.
Hūnc Faūno et nympha gēntum accēpimus .	The tradition is, that he was engendered by Faunus and a nymph.
Non sanguine humano, sed stirpe divinā sātus .	Not begotten of human blood, but of divine pedigree.
Quālis tibi ille vidētur, Tāntalo prognātus, Pelōpe nātus?	What sort of a man do you consider that descendant of Tantalus, the son of Pelops?

REMARK. — When connected with an adjective, this ablative may be regarded as that of quality, and always stands without a preposition. But when no adjective is added, the prepositions ex or a are frequently employed. E. g. Natus ex Penelopā. — Belgae ab Germanis orti, &c.

THE ABLATIVE AFTER PREPOSITIONS.

D. The ablative is also governed by the prepositions a, ab (abs), absque, clam, coram, cum, de, e, ex, in, prae, pro, sine, sub, subter, and tēnus. (Cf. Lesson XCIV.)

REMARK. — In and sub take the ablative only in answer to the question Where? Super only when it stands for de, "with respect to," "with reference to." Subter is more commonly construed with the accusative.

E. Verbs compounded with the prepositions a, de, or ex are followed by the ablative in a local sense, sometimes with the preposition repeated.* E. g.

Tù éa mē abesse urbe mirāris, in quā summum sit odium hominum?

Do you wonder at my being absent from a city, in which the hatred of men is carried to the utmost extremes?

Decedere provinciā praetor jussus est.

The praetor was ordered to leave the province.

Ad eos, qui vitā excesserunt, revertāmur.

Let us now return to those who are already dead.

Amicitia nullo loco excluditur.

Friendship is excluded from no place.

Neminem a congressu meo junctor meus absterruit.

My porter never deterred any one from meeting me.

Ut ex his regionibus Barbarorum praesidia depelleret.

That he might expel the troops of the Barbarians from these regions.

Rēs e memoria, de manibus elabuntur.

Things slip out of our memory, away from our hands.

REMARK. — The majority of these convey the idea of separation, and are consequently already included in Lesson LXXI. C.

F. Verbs of placing, putting, standing, sitting, and some others, are commonly followed by the ablative with in, but verbs of motion in general by the accusative with in.

Such verbs are pōno, lōco, collōco, statūo, constitūo, consido, habeo, duco, numēro, defigo, mergo, incido, insculpo, inscribo, &c. Verbs of motion : eo, venio, advenio, advento, and many others. E. g.

Plato rationem in capite, velut in arce posuit; iram in pectore locavit.

Plato has put the reason in the head, as in a citadel, and passion in the heart.

Conon nunquam in hortis suis custodem imposuit.

Conon never set a watch over his garden.

Stellas in deorum numero reposerunt.

They put the stars among the number of the gods.

Dolor in maximis malis ducitur.

Pain is considered one of the greatest of evils.

Avēs quaedam sē in mari mergunt.

Some birds dive into the sea.

Legati in vultu regis defixerunt oculos.

The ambassadors fixed their eyes upon the countenance of the king.

* This preposition, however, is not always the same, but one of kindred signification, as in Example 6.

- Decemviri lēges in duodecim tabulis scripserunt. The decemviri wrote the laws upon twelve tables.
 In Italiā, in provinciā advēnit. He arrived in Italy, in the province.
 Profectus est Rōmam, Dēlphos.* He has gone to Rome, to Delphi.

REMARK. — Impōnēre, insculpēre, inscribēre, inserēre, are also followed by the dative (aliquid alicui rei, according to Lesson LXII. B.), and most of the above verbs frequently have in rem or re simply, instead of the in re of the rule. E. g. imponere aliquid in rem; insculpēre aliquid aliquā re, &c.

- To pity, commiserate. { Misēror, ari, atus sum.
Commisērāri (ALIQUEM, ALIQUID).
Mē misērēt (misērūt, miserūtum est)

- Do ye commiserate this man? Miseramini hūc hōminem?
 We commiserate him very much. Commiserāmur eum vehēmenter.
 I have pitied your misfortunes. Mē misērītum est tuarum fortunārum.
- I have lamented over lost hope. Deplorāvi spem pēditam.
 I have wept over his untimely death. Dēflēvi mōrtē eīus prēmātūrā.
- To confide or trust in (or rely on any one or thing). { Fido, ēre, fīsus sum.
Confidēre (ALICUI, ALICUI REI).
Frētum (am) esse (ALIUO, ALIQUA RE).
- To trust with, intrust, commit (anything to any one). { Crēdo, ēre, dīdi, dītum.
Concrēdēre, committēre, mandāre.
(ALICUI ALIQUID.)
- To confide (commit) anything to the care of any one. { Comittēre (permittēre) aliquid fidēi alicujus.
Trādēre aliquid in alicujus fidem.
- To intrust one's plans, one's secrets, to one. Consilia, occulta sua alicui crēdēre.
- To commit (unbosom) one's self to one. Sē (animum suum) alicui crēdēre.

* On these accusatives with and without in, compare Lesson LVI. A.

† On the government of this verb, see Lesson LXVII. C.

He is providing for his life and health in the best possible manner. Vitae suae salutique quam optime consūlit et prōvidet.

EXERCISE 137.

How long has your brother been absent from the city? — He has been absent these twelve months. — Has he been ordered to leave his country (patriā)? — He has been ordered. — Are there many philosophers in your country? — There are as many there as in yours. — How does this hat fit me? — It fits you very well. — How does this hat fit your brother? — It fits him admirably. — Is your brother as tall as you? — He is taller than I, but I am older than he. — How high is this man? — He is five feet four inches high. — How high is the house of our landlord? — It is sixty feet high. — Is your well deep? — Yes, sir, for it is fifty feet deep. — How long have those men been in your father's service? — They have been in his service already more than three years? — Has your cousin been long at Paris? — He has been there nearly six years. — Who has spoiled my knife? — Nobody has spoiled it, for it was spoiled when we were in want of it. — Is it true that your uncle has arrived? — I assure you that he has arrived. — Is it true that he has assured you of his assistance? — I assure you that it is true. — Is it true that the six thousand men, whom we were expecting, have arrived? — I have heard so. — Will you dine with us? — I cannot dine with you, for I have just eaten. — Do you throw away your hat? — I do not throw it away, for it fits me admirably. — Does your friend sell his coat? — He does not sell it, for it fits him most beautifully. — There are many learned men in Berlin, are there not (nonne)? asked Cuvier a man from Berlin. Not as many as when you were there, answered the man from Berlin.

EXERCISE 138.

Why do you pity that man? — I pity him, because he has trusted a merchant of Hamburg with his money, and the man will not return it to him. — Do you trust this citizen with anything? — I do not trust him with anything. — Has he already kept anything from you? — I have never trusted him with anything, so that he has never kept anything from me. — Will you trust my father with your money? — I will trust him with it. — What secret has my son intrusted you with? — I cannot intrust you with that with which he has intrusted me, for he has desired me to keep it secret. — Whom do you intrust with your secrets? — I intrust nobody with them, so that nobody knows them. — Has your brother been rewarded? — He has, on the contrary, been punished; but I beg you to keep it secret, for no one knows it. — What has happened to him? — I will tell you what has happened to him, if you promise me to keep it secret. — Do you promise me to keep it secret? — I promise you, for I pity him with all my heart. — Do you consider (ducisne) that at variance (aliénum) with your dignity (dignitas)? — I do not consider (it so). — Does he attend to (fungiturne) the duties of justice? — He does attend to them. — Have you experienced (perfunctus) the same dangers which I have experienced? — I have not experienced the same. — What do they live upon? — They live upon fish and milk. — Who has taken possession (poteri) of the baggage? — The soldiers have made themselves masters of it. — What do you rejoice in (laetari)? — I rejoice in the consciousness of virtue. — Is his virtue worthy of imitation? — It is not worthy of it.

Lesson LXXIII. — PENSUM SEPTUAGESIMUM TERTIUM.

OF THE ABLATIVE ABSOLUTE.

A. A noun and a participle in the ablative are often put independently of the rest of the proposition in which they occur, and serve as an abridged form of a clause introduced by the conjunctions quum, dum, si, quod, quamquam, quameis, &c. Thus, Sole oriente (= quum sol oritur), The sun rising, i. e. when the sun rises. Servio Tullio regnante (= dum Servius Tullius regnabat), Servius Tullius reigning, i. e. while he was reigning, during his reign.* Sole orto (= quum sol ortus esset), The sun having risen, i. e. when (after) it had risen. Cyro mortuo (= quum Cyrus mortuus esset), Cyrus being dead, i. e. when he was dead, after his death. This construction is called the Ablative Absolute. It most commonly designates the time or concomitant of an action or event, but frequently also a CAUSE, REASON, CONDITION, or CONCESSION.

B. When the ablative absolute indicates the Time of an action or event, it is rendered into English by when, while, during, after. E. g.

Crástino díe, oriente sóle, redito	To-morrow, when the sun rises, rein púgnam.	turn to the encounter.

* In this construction the present participle always refers to the time of the action denoted by the verb of the sentence, which may be either present, past, or future. The perfect participle indicates an action or event anterior to that expressed by the verb. (Compare Lesson XLIX. E.)

Jove tonante, cum pópulo agi nón est fás.

When Jove thunders, it is not right to address the people.

Quæritur, útrum múnus térræ stánte circúmëat, an múnus stánte térra vertátur.

The question is, whether the heavens revolve while the earth stands still, or whether the earth turns and the heavens stand still.

Sólon et Pisistrátus Sérvio Túllio regnante viguerunt.

Solon and Pisistratus flourished during the reign of Servius Tullius.

Vidémus áquam spumáre, igni subjécto.

We observe that water foams whenever fire is put under it.

Dióne interfécto, Dionýsius rúrsus Syracusárum potitus est.

After the murder of Dion, Dionysius again took possession of Syracuse.

Régibus exáctis, cónsules creati sùnt.

After the expulsion of the kings, consuls were created.

REMARKS.

1. The noun entering into the construction of the ablative absolute always denotes a different person or object from those contained in the sentence; but pronouns sometimes constitute an exception to this rule. E. g. Ego percussorem meum securum ambulare patiar me sollicito? Shall I allow my murderer to walk secure, while I am anxious? Galliam Italiamque tentari se absente nolëbat, He was not willing that Italy should be invaded in his absence. Inviso sèmel principe seu bene seu male facta (sc. eum) premunt, When a prince is once hated, then all his actions, whether good or bad, are construed against him.

2. The participle of the ablative absolute is generally either the present or the perfect. Instances of the future active are less frequent, and the future passive rarely occurs. E. g. Rex apum nisi migraturo agmine foras non procëdit, The king of the bees never comes out, unless the hive is about to migrate. Ituro in Armeniam majore filio, The elder son being about to go into Armenia. Tanquam non transiturus in Asiam Romanis, As if the Romans were not on the point of passing into Asia. Quis est, qui, nullis officii praeceptis tradendis, philosophum se audeat dicere? Will any one dare to call himself a philosopher, without having moral precepts to impart?

3. The perfect passive participle of the ablative absolute may frequently be rendered by the perfect active participle, which, in Latin, does not exist except in deponent verbs. E. g. Pompeius, captis Hierosolymis, victor ex illo fano nihil tetigit, Pompey, having taken Jerusalem (lit. Jerusalem having been taken), did not touch anything out of that temple.*

* The ablative absolute, in instances like this, manifestly arises from the want of a perfect active participle in Latin. The construction of deponent participles, on the other hand, is precisely like the English. E. g. Hostes, hanc adepti victoriam (= hac victoriâ adepti), in perpetuum se fore victores confidebant, The enemy, after having won this victory, was confident of remaining victorious perpetually. (Compare Lesson XLIX. A. Rem. 4.)

4. When the perfect participle of deponent verbs is used in a passive sense,* it may stand in the ablative absolute, like that of transitive verbs. So likewise when the deponent is a neuter verb. E. g. Partitis copiis, The forces having been divided. Periculo perfuncto, The danger being overcome. Adepta libertate, Liberty having been obtained. Profecto ex Italia Valerio, Valerius having left Italy. Sole orto, The sun having risen, &c.

C. When the ablative absolute denotes a cause, condition, or concession, it is rendered by the English since, because, in consequence of, if, although. E. g.

Artes innumerabiles repertae sunt, docente natura. The arts are innumerable, since nature teaches them.

Anxur brevi receptum est, neglectis die festo custodiis urbis. Anxur was retaken in a short time, the watch of the city having been neglected on the day of a festival.

Flaminius Caelius religione neglecta cecidisse apud Trasimenum scribit. Caelius writes that Flaminius fell near Trasimenum in consequence of having neglected† the usual religious rites.

Natura reluctante, irritus labor est. Quae potest esse jucunditas vitae, sublatis amicitiiis? Effort is fruitless, if nature opposes. What pleasure can life possess, if friendship is banished from it?

Quaenam sollicitudo vexaret impios, sublato suppliciorum metu? What anxiety would harass the wicked, if the fear of punishment were removed?

Pérditis rebus omnibus, tamen ipsa virtus se sustentare potest. Though everything be lost, yet virtue is all-sufficient to sustain herself.

Proposita invidia, poena, morte, qui nihilo scius rempublicam defendit, is vir vere putandus est. He who, in spite of odium, punishment, or death before him,‡ nevertheless defends the common interest, must be considered really a man.

REMARK.—The ablative absolute thus employed is sometimes linked to the preceding clause by one of the conjunctions ut, velut, tanquam, etsi, quamquam, or quamvis. E. g. Velut Diis quoque simul cum patria relictis, As if the gods had been relinquished together with their country. Tanquam non transitis in Asiam Romani, As if the Romans were not on the point of passing into Asia. Quamvis capite defectionis sublato, Although the chief of the revolt had been removed.

D. The ablative absolute frequently consists merely of a

* A list of such participles is given in Lesson XLIX. A. Rem. 4.

† I. e. because he had neglected.

‡ I. e. although hatred, punishment, or death be placed before him.

noun in apposition with another noun, or of a noun and an adjective, with the participle of esse understood.* E. g.

Natūra duce, errāri nullo pacto potest.

Where nature guides, it is impossible to err.

Bellum Gallicum C. Caesare imperatore gestum est.

The Gallic war was carried on under the command of Cæsar.

Natus est Augustus M. Tullio Cicerone et Antonio consilibus.

Augustus was born during the consulship of M. Tullius Cicero and Antony.

Ascanius Creusæ matre, Illo incolūmi, natus est.

Ascanius was born of Creusa, when Troy was still uninjured.

Romani, Hannibale vivo, nunquam se sine insidiis futuros existimabant.

The Romans thought that they never would be exempt from snares while Hannibal was alive.

Cæsare ignaro magister equitum constitutus est.

He was made master of horse without the knowledge of Cæsar.

Lupus magno consecretantium tumultu evasit.

The wolf escaped amid the great commotion of those in pursuit of him.

Secundis rebus suis vult etiam mori.

He will even desire to die, though in prosperity.

REMARKS.

1. The substantives, which most commonly thus take the place of the participle in the ablative absolute are:—a) Certain nouns denoting the action of a verb; as adjutor, adjutrix, auctor, comes, dux, interpres, iudex, magister, magistris, praeceptor, praeceptrix, testis,† &c. b) The names of certain offices or dignities, such as consul, imperator, praetor, rex, dominus, magistratus, &c. E. g. Eo adjutore, With his assistance. Licio quodam auctore, At the instigation of a certain Licinius. Se duce, Under his own conduct. Me rege, With me for a king. His magistratibus, Under the administration of these consuls. So also, Puero Cicerone, When Cicero was a boy. Nobis pueris, When I was one.

2. Additional examples of adjectives are:—Deo propitio, If God is propitious. Invita Minerva, Against the will of Minerva, i. e. with bad success. Sereno coelo, The sky being clear. Is involtus, They being unwilling (i. e. against their will). Tacitis nobis, When (while) we are silent. Illis consciis, They being accessories,† &c.

3. This construction is sometimes represented by an adjective alone.

* Such a participle does not exist in Latin, but is usually supplied in English. E. g. Natura duce, nature being our guide; Caesare imperatore, Cæsar being commander; Illo incolūmi, Illium being yet safe, &c.

† Substantives of this class may frequently be resolved into a participle; as, Eo adjutore, i. e. adjuvante. — Natura duce, i. e. ducente. — Fortuna comite, i. e. comitante. — Polybio iudice, i. e. judicante, &c.

‡ But sometimes these ablatives absolute may also be referred to the ablative of mode or manner. E. g. Bono gubernatore. The pilot being good, i. e. with a good pilot. Probo navigio, With a proper vessel (ship).

E. g. Serēno per totum diem, The sky being serene all day long.
Tranquillo pervectus Chalcidē, Conveyed to Chalcis while the sea was calm.*

E. The ablative absolute is sometimes represented by the perfect participle alone, its subject being an entire clause.
 E. g.

Cæsar temeritatem militum reprehendit, expósito quid iniquitas loci posset.

Cæsar, after having explained what the disadvantage of the ground might lead to, reprehended the rashness of his soldiers.

Alexāder, audito Darēum appropinquāre cum exercitu, obviam ire constituit.

Alexander, having heard that Darius was approaching with an army, resolved to meet him.

Excépto quod nōn sinul ēsses, cetera lætus.

Happy in every respect, except that you were not present.

Hānnibal, cognīto insidias sibi parāri, fugā salutē quaesivit.

Hannibal, having learned that plots were on foot against him, sought his safety in flight.

REMARKS.

1. The participles thus employed are but few. The principal one audito, cognito, comperto, edicto, explorato, desperato, nuntiato. All these are passive, "it being heard, learned, found," &c.; but are generally rendered by the perfect active: "Cæsar having heard, learnt, found, given orders," &c.

2. An adjective sometimes supplies the place of this participle absolute. E. g. Multi, incerto (= quum incertum esset) præ tenebris quid peterent aut vitarent, foede interiērunt, Many, uncertain,† on account of the darkness of the night, what to seek or to avoid, perished disgracefully.

3. The participle absolute sometimes, though rarely, occurs without any subject whatever. E. g. In cuius annis transgressu, multum certato, pervicit Bardanes, In passing which river, Bardanes conquered after a severe engagement. Quum, nondum palam facto, viri mortuique promiscue complorarentur, When, the matter being yet unpublished, the living and the dead were bewailed indiscriminately.‡

Every (one), each.

Quisque, quæque, quodque or quidque, gen. cuiusque.

Any (one) you please.

Quivis, quævis, quodvis or quidvis, gen. cuiusvis.
Quilibet, quælibet, quodlibet or quidlibet, gen. cujuslibet.

* These may be resolved into Quum coelum serenum, mare tranquillum fuisset.

† Lit. "It being uncertain (a matter of uncertainty and doubt)."

‡ In these examples multum certato and palam facto stand impersonally.

Whom do you pity? — I pity your friend. — Why do you pity him? — I pity him because he is ill. — Do the merchants of Berlin pity anybody? — They pity nobody. — Do you offer me anything? — I offer you a gold ring. — What has my father offered you? — He has offered me a fine book. — To whom do you offer those fine horses? — I offer them to the French officer. — Do you offer that fine carriage to my uncle? — I do offer it to him. — Dost thou offer thy pretty little dog to these good children? — I do offer it to them, for I love them with all my heart. — What have the citizens of Strasburg offered you? — They have offered me good beer and salt meat. — To whom do you offer money? — I offer some to those Parisian citizens, who have assured me of their assistance. — Will you take care of my clothes? — I will take care of them. — Wilt thou take care of my hat? — I will take care of it. — Are you taking care of the book which I lent you? — I am taking care of it. — Will this man take care of my horse? — He will take care of it. — Who will take care of my servant? — The landlord will take care of him. — Does your servant take care of your horses? — He does take care of them. — Is he taking care of your clothes? — He is taking care of them, for he brushes them every morning. — Have you ever drunk Strasburg beer? — I have never drunk any. — Is it long since you ate Leipsic bread? — It is almost three years since I ate any. — Does he think himself (ducitne se) out of danger (sine periculo)? — He never can consider himself out of danger while his enemy is alive (his enemy being alive). — Is the republic safe (salvus)? — How can it be safe under the administration of consuls like these (his magistratibus)?

EXERCISE 140.

Have you hurt my brother-in-law? — I have not hurt him; but he has cut my finger. — What has he cut your finger with? — With the knife which you had lent him. — Why have you given that boy a blow with your fist? — Because he hindered me from sleeping. — Has anybody hindered you from writing? — Nobody has hindered me from writing; but I have hindered somebody from hurting your cousin. — Has your father arrived? — Everybody says that he has arrived; but I have not seen him yet. — Has the physician hurt your son? — He has hurt him, for he has cut his finger. — Have they cut off this man's leg? — They have cut it off entirely. — Are you pleased with your servant? — I am much pleased with him, for he is fit for anything. — What does he know? — He knows everything. — Can he ride on horseback? — He can. — Has your brother returned at last from Germany? — He has returned thence, and has brought you a fine horse. — Has he told his groom to bring it to me? — He has told him to bring it to you. — What do you think of that horse? — I think that it is a fine and good one, and (I) beg you to lead it into the stable. — In what did you spend your time yesterday? — I went to the public walk, and afterwards to the concert. — Were there many people in the public walk? — There were many people there. — When did your brother return home? — He returned at sunrise. — When was Augustus born? — He was born during the consulship of Cicero. — Do you desire to learn Latin? — I am not unwilling to learn, with you for a guide and instructor. — Having heard (audīto) that our friend was about to arrive, I immediately resolved to go to meet him. — Why were these men punished? — They were punished on account of neglected duties (officiis neglectis).

Lesson LXXIV. — PENSUM SEPTUAGESIMUM QUARTUM.

OF THE PLUPERFECT TENSE.

A. The pluperfect tense serves to represent a past action as entirely completed with reference to another past action just commencing or going on. It sustains the same relation to the imperfect, as the perfect does to the present. E. g.

Irruērant Dánāi, et tēctum ómne tenébant.

The Greeks had forced their way in, and were in possession of the entire house.

Pausánias eódem lóco sepúltus ést, ubi vitam posuérat.

Pausanias was buried in the very spot on which he had lost his life.

Quum dómum intráset, díxit amico suo.

When he had entered the house, he said to his friend.

Cum vér ésse coépérat, dábat sê labóri áque itinéríbus.

After the commencement of spring he was wont to enter upon his labors and his journeys.

REMARK. — The Romans always observe the distinction indicated by the pluperfect, and put this tense even where the English idiom substitutes the perfect. E. g. "When he arrived (i. e. had arrived) in the city, he perceived," Quum in urbem advenisset, animadvertit. "When he saw (i. e. had seen) the boy, he exclaimed," Quum puerum conspexisset, exclamavit.

B. FORMATION OF THE PLUPERFECT TENSE.

1. The pluperfect active is formed from the perfect by changing the final i into, Indic. eram, Subj. issem. As, —

1. Amāvi — amāvērā, amavissem, I had loved.
2. Monūi — monuērā, monūissem, I had reminded.
3. Lēgi — lēgērā, legissem, I had read.
4. Audiui — audivērā, audivissem, *I had heard.

2. The pluperfect passive is formed from the perfect participle, by adding, Indic. eram or fuērā, Subj. essem or fuissem. As, —

INDIC. Amātus, monitus, lectus, auditus eram or fuērā, I had been loved, reminded, read, heard.

SUBJ. Amātus, monitus, lectus, auditus essem or fuissem, that I might have been loved, reminded, read, heard.

3. The pluperfect of deponent verbs is formed like that of the passive voice. As, —

INDIC. Hortātus, veritus, secūtus, blanditus eram or fuērā, I had exhorted, feared, followed, flattered.

SUBJ. Hortātus, veritus, secūtus, blanditus essem or fuissem, that I might have exhorted, feared, followed, flattered.

INFLECTION OF THE PLUPERFECT ACTIVE.

C. The inflection of the pluperfect active is exhibited by the following paradigms: —

INDICATIVE.	SUBJUNCTIVE.
Amāvērā, I had loved.	Amāvissem, that I might have loved.
SING. amāvērā	SING. amāvissem
amāvērās	amāvisset
amāverāt,	amāvisset,
PLUR. amāverāmūs	PLUR. amāvissemūs
amāverātis	amāvissetis
amāverant.	amāvissent.

* SUBJ. that I might have loved, reminded, read, heard.

So conjugate monŭeram — monŭissem, lĕgĕram — lĕgissem, audivĕram — audivissem. To these add apportāvĕram, I had brought; laborāvĕram, I had labored; lāvĕram, I had washed; dĕdĕram, I had given; stĕtĕram, I had stood; — habuĕram, I had had; studuĕram, I had studied; jussĕram, I had commanded; secuĕram, I had cut; vidĕram, I had seen; — attŭlĕrum, I had brought; dilexĕram, I had cherished; misĕram, I had sent; arcessivĕram, I had called; cupivĕram, I had desired; quaesivĕram, I had sought; ussĕram, I had burned; — aperuĕram, I had opened; ivĕram, I had gone; scivĕram, I had known; sitivĕram, I had been thirsty; vĕnĕram, I had come; — voluĕram, I had wished; notuĕram, I had been unwilling.

The verb sum has regularly fuĕram — fuissem. And so its compounds, abfuĕram — abfuissem; adfuĕram — adfuissem; interfuĕram — interfuissem; profuĕram — profuissem, &c.

REMARKS.

1. Verbs of the fourth conjugation (and generally those whose perfect ends in ivi) frequently reject the v before the final ĕram of the pluperfect indicative; as, audiĕram, prodiĕram, quaesĕram,* &c., and trissĕm is sometimes contracted into issem; as, audissem, prodissem, quaesissem, for audivissem, &c. (Compare page 239, Remarks.)

2. Odĕram, I hated; meminĕram, I remembered; novĕram, I knew, was acquainted with; consuevĕram, I was wont, have the force of the imperfect, as odi, memĭni, &c. that of the present.

Had I loved ?

By no means; you had not loved.

Had we given you a book ?

You had not given me one.

Had he stood by the fire ?

He did. He had stood there.

Had you called the physician ?

Yes, I had called him.

Had they seen our friend ?

They had not seen ours, but their own ?

When I had found the letter.

If we had studied our lesson, would you not have rewarded us ?

I should have done so. -

What did he say when he entered your house ?

He wished me a good morning.

Egŏn' amāvĕram ?

Mĭnĭme gĕntĭum ; nŏn amāvĕras.

Nŭm nŏs tĭbi lĭbrum dĕderāmus ?

Nŏn dederātis.

Steterātne apud carbŏnes ?

Fāctumst (= factum est).

Stĕtĕrat.

Arcessivĕrasne mĕdicum ?

Sāne, ĕum arcessivĕram.

Nostrŭmne amicūm vidĕrant ?

Nŏn nŏstrum, sed suŭmmet vidĕrant.

Quum lĭtteras invenĭssem.

Sĭ pĕnso imperāto ŏperam dedissemus, nŏnne nŏs praeĭmiis affecissem ?

Fāctum ĕsset.

Quĭd dĭxit, quum dŏmum tuā in-trāsset (= intravĭsset) ?

Mĕ sālŭm ĕsse jussit.

* These, however, may be referred to the secondary form in ti, as audi, prodi, &c.

THE PLUPERFECT PASSIVE.

D. The Pluperfect Passive is thus inflected:—

INDICATIVE.	SUBJUNCTIVE.
Amātus ēram or fuēram, I had been loved.	Amātus essem or fuissem, that I might have been loved.
SING. amātus ēram or fuērām amātus ērās or fuērās amātus ērāt or fuērāt,	SING. amātus essēm or fuissēm amātus essēs or fuissēs amātus essēt or fuissēt,
PLUR. amāti ērāmūs or fuērāmūs amāti ērātīs or fuērātīs amāti ērant or fuērant.*	PLUR. amāti essēmūs or fuissēmūs amāti essētīs or fuissētīs amāti essent or fuissent.

So conjugate monītus, lectus, auditus ēram or fuēram, I had been reminded, read, heard; SUBJ. monītus, lectus, auditus essem or fuissem, that I might have been reminded, read, heard. To these add allātus, dātus, dilectus, habitus, jussus, missus, quaesītus, ustus ēram or fuēram, I had been brought, given, cherished, considered, commanded, sent, sought, burned; and SUBJ. — essem or fuissem, that I might have been brought, given, cherished, &c.

Had you been admonished?	Erāsne (fuērāsne) mōnītus?
I had been admonished.	Fāctumst. Mōnītus ēram (fuēram).
Had the philosopher been heard?	Auditūsne erat sapiens?
He had not been heard.	Auditus nōn erat.
Had you been sent?	Nūm vōs mīssi erātīs (fuērātīs)?
We had not been sent.	Nōs nōn mīssi erāmūs (fuērāmūs).
Had a ribbon been given you?	Datāne tibi fuērat taciōia?
None had been given me.	Dāta nōn fuērat.
Had the letters been read?	Erāntne epīstolae lēctae?
They had been read.	Fāctum est. Erant.
If the book had been read.	Si liber lēctus esset (fuisset).
When the letter had been delivered.	Quin litterae tradītae essent (fuissent).
Would that we had been sent!	Ūtinam nōs mīssi essēmūs (fuissēmūs)!
Because they had not been chosen.	Quōd nōn delēcti essent (fuissent).

PLUPERFECT OF DEPONENT VERBS.

E. The pluperfect of deponent verbs is inflected like that of the passive voice. Thus:—

* When the subject is feminine, then: amāta ēram or fuēram, Plur. amātue erāmūs or fuērāmūs; SUBJ. Sing. amāta essem or fuissem, Plur. amātae essēmūs or fuissēmūs. When it is neuter: amātum ērat or fuērat, Plur. amāta erant or fuērant; SUBJ. Sing. amātum esset or fuisset, Plur. amāta essent or fuisissent.

INDICATIVE.	SUBJUNCTIVE.
Hortātus ēram or fuēram, I had exhorted.	Hortātus essem or fuissem, that I might have exhorted.
SING. hortātus ērām or fuērām hortātus ērās or fuērās hortātus ērāt or fuērat,	SING. hortātus essēm or fuissēm hortātus essēs or fuissēs hortātus essēt or fuisset,
PLUR. hortāti ērāmus or fuē- rāmūs hortāti ērātis or fuērātis hortāti ērant or fuērant.*	PLUR. hortāti essēmus or fuis- sēmūs hortāti essētis or fuissetis hortāti essent or fuissent.

So conjugate veritus, secutus, blanditus ēram or fuēram, I had feared, followed, flattered; SUBJ. veritus, secutus, blanditus essem or fuissem, that I might have feared, followed, flattered. To these add arbitratus, comitatus, moratus, locutus, oblitus, profectus, largitus, expertus ēram or fuēram, I had thought, escorted, delayed, spoken, forgotten, departed, squandered, experienced; and SUBJ. — essem or fuissem, that I might have thought, &c.

Had you escorted any one?

I had escorted no one.

Had they not lavished their money?

It is, as you say.

Had he flattered you?

He had certainly not.

Had we left when you arrived?

It is clearly so.

Comitatūsne ēras aliquem?

Ego nēminem comitātus ēram.

Pecūnias suas nōne largīti erāt?

Ita est, ut dicis.

Tibine blanditus erat?

Nōn hērcle vērō.

An tē adveniēnte profecti erāmus?

Ita plāne.

Ecquid tē dōmi tenuisses, si profectus esset ille?

Ita enīmvērō.

Quum librum perlegissem.

Postquam (ut) librum perlegi.

Libro perlēcto.

Quum panem secuisset.

Postquam (ubi, ut) panem secuit.

Pāne in frusta dissecō.

Cum manducavissēmus.

Postquam (ubi, ut, simul ac) manducāvīmus.

Quum tē cūltro vulneravisses.

Postquam (ubi, ut) tē cūltro vulnerāvīstī.

(Tū) cūltro vulnerātus.

Quum vōbis vēstem induissētis.

Postquam (ubi, ut) vōbis vēstem induīstis.

(Vōs) vēste indūtī.

* And when the subject is feminine: amāta — amātae; when neuter: amātum — amāta.

After withdrawing from the fire (when he had withdrawn, &c.).	{ Quum a fóco discessisset. Póstquam (ubi, út) a fóco discessit. Quum tíbi bárbam totondisses.

Lesson LXXV. — PENSUM SEPTUAGESIMUM QUINTUM.

OF THE REFLEXIVE PRONOUNS.

A. When, in one and the same sentence, a subject of the third person becomes itself the object of the verb, or otherwise a member of the predicate, its person (whether singular or plural) is expressed by the personal reflexives sui, sibi, se, and its property by the possessive reflexive suus, a, um.

Ipse se quisque diligit, quod per se sibi quisque * carus est.	Every one cherishes himself, because every one is naturally dear to himself.
Themistocles domicilium Magnesia sibi constituit.	Themistocles fixed his abode at Magnesia.
Iustitia propter sese colenda est.	Justice should be cultivated on its own account.
Lento gradu ad vindictam sui divina procedit ira.	Divine indignation advances slowly (with slow step) to its own defence.
Etiam ferae sibi injecto terrore mortis horrescunt.	Wild beasts even shrink with horror when subjected to the fear of death.
Suum quisque ingenium noceat.	Every one should make himself acquainted with his own abilities.
Verres solus cum sua cohorte reliquitur.	Verres alone is left with his cohort.
Bellum est, sua vitia nosse.†	It is proper to know one's own faults.
Bestiis homines uti ad utilitatem suam possunt sine injuria.	Men may use animals for their own convenience, without any injustice.

REMARK. — The reflexives can thus be put only when the subject remains the same. If another sentence with a new subject, or a new subject representing one, is added, then the demonstrative is takes the place of sui, &c., and the genitives ejus, eorum, that of suus. E. g. Tiberius Gracchus ejusque frater occisi sunt.‡ Tiberius Gracchus and his brother were killed. Hannibal quamdiu in Italia fuit, nemo ei in acie restitit, nemo adversus eum in campo castra posuit. As long as Hannibal was in Italy, no one opposed him on the battle-ground, no one pitched a tent against him in the field. Athenienses urbem suam aede Minervae ornavērunt, eorumque magnificentiam mirata est posteritas. The Athenians adorned their city with the temple of Minerva, and posterity has admired their magnificence.

B. The reflexives sui, sibi, se, and suus, a, um, belong to an oblique case of the same sentence, when they determine the subject-nominative itself, or when from a difference of person or number, or from the sense of the predicate, they cannot be referred to the nominative.

Hannibalem sui cives e civitate ejecerunt.	Hannibal was banished by his own countrymen.
Cæsarem sua natura mitiorem facit.	His natural disposition makes Cæsar more humane.

* When quisque is thus connected with the reflexive, the latter commonly precedes; as, se quisque, sibi quisque, suum cuique, &c.

† I. e. aliquem nosse, "that one should know his own faults."

‡ This may be resolved into Tiberius Gracchus occisus est, ejusque frater occisus est. So also, Antigonus et hujus filius Demetrius, &c.

Sui cuique mōres fingunt fortūnam.	Every man's lot in life is shaped by his own character.
Rēcte dici pōtest sciēntiam suam cuiusque artis ēsse.	Every art may correctly be said to have a science of its own.
Conserva tuis suos.	Preserve the lives and happiness of those dear to your friends.
Apibus fructum restituo suum.	I return (restore) their produce to the bees.
Volaterrānos in sua possēssione retinēbam.	I kept the Volaterrani in the possession of their own.
Ratio et oratio conciliat inter se homines.	Reason and language conciliate men among themselves.
Justitia suum cuique tribuit.	Justice gives (to) every one his own.
Cōsules hostem in sua sede in Algidō invēniunt.	The consuls found the enemy in his own residence at Algidum.
Multa sūnt civibus inter se cōmūnia.	Citizens have many things in common with each other.
Quid est aliud, aliis sua eripere, aliis dare aliēna?	What else is giving to others what is not one's own, but robbing others of their own?

REMARK. — When a new sentence is added, or a word representing one, the demonstrative is becomes necessary, as in A. Rem. E. g. *Omitto Isocratem discipulosque ejus, I omit Isocrates and his disciples. Alexander moriens anulum suum dedērat Perdīccae; ex quo omnes conjecerant, eum regnum ei commendasse, quoad liberi ejus in suam tutelam pervenissent, The dying Alexander had given his ring to Perdīccas, from which every one had conjectured that he had commended the government of his empire to his charge, until his children might become of age.

C. In dependent clauses, in which the language, thoughts, sentiments, or purpose of the leading subject are expressed, the reflexives sui, sibi, se, and suus refer to that subject, and not to the one contained in the dependent clause.

Such clauses are introduced by the Acc. cum Inf., by interrogatives, relatives, and conjunctions, especially by ut, ne, quo, qui, si, &c. E. g.

Nemo est orator, qui se Demosthenis similem esse nōlit.	No one is an orator who is unwilling to be like Demosthenes.
Homērum Colophōnii civem ēsse dicunt suum, Smyrnaei vērō suum ēsse confirmant.	The inhabitants of Colophon say, that Homer is their citizen, but those of Smyrna prove him to be theirs.
Mēus mē orāvit fīlius, ut tuam sorōrem pōcerem uxōrem sibi.	My son has charged me to demand your sister in marriage for him.
Pāetus omnes libros, quos frater suus reliquisset, mīhi donāvit.	Pāetus has made me a present of all the books which his brother had left him.

* This may be resolved into Omitto Isocratem, discipulosque ejus omitto.

Quid est amāre, nisi velle bonis aliquem affici quam maximis, etiamsi ad se nihil ex his rédeat ?

What is love, but a desire that another might enjoy the highest possible good, even though no advantage to one's self should result from it ?

D. If in this construction the person of the speaker comes in collision with another subject nominative, the sense of the predicate must determine to which of the two the reflexive refers. E. g.

Agrippa Atticum orābat, ut se sibi suisque* reservāret.

Agrippa besought Atticus to save himself for himself and his friends.

Scythae petēbant ab Alexādro, ut regis sui filiam matrimōnio sibi† iūngeret.

The Scythians besought Alexander to unite himself in marriage to the daughter of their king.

Quod sibi Cæsar denuntiāret, se Aeduorum injūrias nōn neglectūrum; neminem secum sine sua‡ pernīcie contendisse.

With respect to Cæsar's message to him, that he (i. e. Cæsar) would not overlook the injuries of the Aedui, (Ariovistus replied.) that no one had ever contended with him, except for his own destruction.

REMARKS.

1. The reflexive is always put when a given person is to be contrasted with another, or its property with that of another (i. e. himself, his own, as opposed to alius, alienus). It is thus often put, even where we might expect the weaker demonstrative is, ejus, —

a.) When the oblique case, to which it relates, can easily be inferred from what has gone before. E. g. Ei sunt nāli filii gemini duo, ita formā simlii pueri, uti mater sua (for eōrum) non internosse posset, sc. eos, He had two twin boys, so like each other, that their own mother could not distinguish them. Placetne a Carthaginiensibus captivos nostros, reddūis suis (sc. iis), recuperāri ? Is it your pleasure to recover our captives from the Carthaginians, after returning (to them) their own ?

b.) When the construction admits of it, and the connection requires a more emphatic indication of the subject. E. g. Cimon incidit in eandem invidiam, quam pater suus (= ejus), Cimon incurred the same odium which his father had incurred. Non a te emi rex, sed prius quam tu suum sibi vendēres, ipse possēdit, The king has not purchased of you, but has himself possessed it, before you could sell his own to him.

* In this sentence se, sibi, and suis all refer to the new subject Atticus.

† Here sui belongs to Scythae, and sibi to Alexandro.

‡ Sibi and secum refer to the speaker Ariovistus (expressed in a preceding sentence), se to Cæsar, and sua to neminem.

2. Is and ejus, on the other hand, are employed where no such opposition of persons or property is intended, but where the subject is merely pointed out (i. e. the English him, his). They are thus put,— a.) With reference to an oblique case of the same sentence, sometimes merely to prevent ambiguity. E. g. Pisōnem nostrum merito ejus amo plurimum, I love Piso dearly, as he deserves. Achaei Macedōnum regem suspicātum habēbant pro ejus crudelitāte, The Achaeans suspected the king of the Macedonians on account of his cruelty. Oratio principis per quaestōrem ejus audita est, The speech of the prince was heard by his quaestor.

b.) In dependent clauses, when a noun different from the subject is referred to; frequently also instead of the more emphatic se. E. g. Judaei jussi a Caesāre, effigiem ejus in templo locāre, arma potius sumere, When the Jews were commanded by Caesar to place his image in their temple, they preferred to resort to arms. A Curione mihi nuntiātum est, eum ad me venire,* A message was sent me by Curio, that he was coming to me.

3. Instead of is and ejus the intensive ipse and ipsius are often used, especially when it becomes necessary to distinguish subjects different from those represented by is or sui. E. g. Aedui contendunt, ut ipsis summa imperii transdatur, The Aedui beg that the chief command might be transferred to themselves. Parvi de eo, quod ipsis supererat, aliis gratificari volunt, Children wish to gratify others with what they themselves do not want. Caesar milites suos incusavit: cur de sua virtute, aut de ipsius diligentia desperarent, Caesar blamed his soldiers (by asking them), why they despaired of their own valor or his personal assiduity.

Lesson LXXVI.—PENSUM SEPTUAGESIMUM SEXTUM.

REFLEXIVE VERBS.

A. Reflexive verbs are those of which the action terminates in the agent himself.

Verbs of a reflexive sense in Latin are,—

1. Transitive and neuter verbs in connection with the accusative or dative of the reflexive pronouns me, te, se, nos, vos, se, mihi, tibi, sibi, nobis, vobis, sibi. E. g. Se amare, to love one's self ; sibi nocere, to hurt one's self ; sese fugae mandare, to betake one's self to flight, &c.

2. A number of passive and deponent verbs, which exhibit more or less of a reflexive sense. E. g. crucior, I am tormented, I torment myself ; proficiscor, I get myself under way ; laetor, I rejoice ; vehor, I ride, &c.

3. The impersonal verbs me taedet, piget, pulet, poenitet, misæret, It moves me to disgust, chagrin, shame, regret, pity, &c.

B. The following passive and deponent verbs may be regarded as reflexive :—

Crucior, I torment myself (I am tormented).

Delector, I am delighted.

Fallor, I deceive myself (I am deceived).

Fëror, I am impelled.

Grävör, I hesitate.

Inclinor, I am inclined.

Lavor, I wash myself, I bathe.

Laetor, I rejoice.

Movëör,

Commovëör, } I am moved, excited.

Have you written long or short letters? — I have written (both) long and short ones. — Have you many apples? — I have so many of them that I do not know which to eat. — Do you wish to give anything to these children? — They have studied so badly, that I do not wish to give them anything. — What dost thou rejoice at? — I rejoice at the good fortune that has happened to you. — What do your children rejoice at? — They rejoice at seeing you. — Do you rejoice at the happiness of my father? — I do rejoice at it. — Do you flatter my brother? — I do not flatter him. — Does this master flatter his pupils? — He does not flatter them. — Is he pleased with them? — He is much pleased (contentus) with them when they learn well; but he is not pleased with them when they do not learn well. — Do you flatter me? — I do not flatter you, for I love you. — Do you see yourself in that looking-glass? — I do see myself in it. — Why do you not remain near the fire? — Because I am afraid of burning myself. — Does this man make his fire? — Do you fear those ugly men? — I do not fear them, for they hurt nobody. — Why do those children run away? — They run away, because they are afraid of you. — Do you run away from your enemies? — I do not run away from them, for I do not fear them. — Can you write a Latin letter without an error? — I can write one. — Does any one correct your letters? — No one corrects them. — How many letters have you already written? — I have already written a dozen. — Have you hurt yourself? — I have not hurt myself. — Who has hurt himself? — My brother has hurt himself; for he has cut his finger. — Is he still ill? — He is better. — I rejoice to hear that he is no longer ill; for I love him, and I pitied him from my heart. — Why does your cousin pull out his hair? — Because he cannot pay what he owes. — Have you cut your hair? — I have not cut it myself, but I have had it cut.

EXERCISE 145.

In what do your children amuse themselves? — They amuse themselves in studying, writing, and playing. — In what do you amuse yourself? — I amuse myself in the best way I can, for I read good books, and I write to my friends. — Every man has his taste; what is yours? — I like to study, to read a good book, to go to the concert, and the public walk, and to ride on horseback. — Has that physician done any harm to your child? — He has cut his finger, but he has not done him any harm. — Why do you listen to that man? — I listen to him, but I do not believe him; for I know that he is a storyteller. — Why does your cousin not brush his hat? — He does not brush it, because he is afraid of soiling his fingers. — What does my neighbor tell you? — He tells me that you wish to buy his horse; but I know that he is mistaken, for you have no money to buy it. — What do they say at the market? — They say that the enemy is beaten. — Do you believe it? — I do believe it, because every one says so. — Do you go to bed early? — I go to bed late; for I cannot sleep, if I go to bed early. — At what o'clock did you go to bed yesterday? — Yesterday I went to bed at a quarter past eleven. — At what o'clock do your children go to bed? — They go to bed at sunset. — Do they rise early? — They rise at sunrise. — At what o'clock did you rise to-day? — To-day I rose late; for I went to bed late last evening. — Does your son rise late? — He must rise early, for he never goes to bed late. — What does he do when he gets up? — He studies and then breakfasts.

Lesson LXXVII.—PENSUM SEPTUAGESIMUM SEPTIMUM.

OF THE GENDER OF SUBSTANTIVES.

A. Gender originally depends upon the signification of words, and is in so far called natural gender or sex.

1. In substantives denoting living beings, i. e. men or animals, the natural gender is either masculine or feminine, according to the sex. Inanimate objects do not properly admit of any distinction of sex, and are hence said to be of the neuter gender.

2. The Latin language, however, attributes life to many inanimate objects, and extends the distinction of sex to them, i. e. represents them likewise as masculine or feminine. E. g. hic mons, haec arbor.

3. When the gender of a substantive is not already determined by its signification, it is indicated by its form (or termination). This is called the grammatical gender, and is either masculine, feminine, or neuter. E. g. hic liber, haec mensa, hoc umbraculum.

NATURAL GENDER.

B. The natural gender of substantives denoting living beings (i. e. men or animals) coincides with the sex of the individual designated. Hence, names and appellations of male beings are masculine, and those of females feminine. E. g. Caesar, Cleopatra, vir, mulier, pater, mater.

REMARKS.

1. Patrials and gentiles of the plural number are considered masculine; as, Romani, Carthaginienses, &c. So also lemures, ghosts, and manes, departed spirits.

2. The names of women are feminine, even where the termination is neuter. E. g. mea Glycerium, tua Phanium.

3. The only exception to this law are certain secondary appellations of men, which retain their original grammatical gender as determined by their form. Such are: FEM. copiae, military forces; deliciae, favorite, darling; opærae, operatives; vigiliae, excubiae, watch, sentinels. NEUT. auxilia, auxiliary troops; servitia, servants; mancipium, a slave; acroama, a jester.*

C. The natural gender of living beings of the same species is indicated in three different ways:—

I. There is a separate word for each gender. E. g. vir —

* But optio, a lieutenant, is masculine, though derived from optio, f., choice.

mulier, pater — mater, frater — soror, patrius — amica, maritus — uxor, taurus — vacca. Instances of this kind are comparatively few.

II. The noun is of the same root, but has a separate termination for each gender. E. g. filius — filia, amicus — amica, magister — magistra, servus — serva, praeceptor — praeceptrix, lūpus — lūpa.

REMARK. — Substantives thus admitting of two terminations are called mobilia, and are most commonly of the first and second declensions (MASC. er or us, FEM. a). Mobilia of the third declension form their feminines in a, trix, ina, issa, and is; as, caupo — caupōna, inn-keeper, hostess; lēno — lēna, pander, procuress; lēo — lēaena, lion, lioness; tibicen — tibicina, flute-player (male and female); cantor — cantrix, singer; rex — regina, king, queen; gallus — gallina, cock, hen; Threx — Threissa (or Thressa), a Thracian (man and woman); nēpos — neptis, grandson, granddaughter.

III. One and the same noun is indifferently applied to both sexes, without any change of termination, and the gender is determined by the context (i. e. by the adjective in agreement with it, &c.); as, hic or haec civis, this citizen (male or female); hic or haec hērēs, this heir (man or woman). Nouns of this class are said to be of the common gender (or communia).* Such are

1. The following names of persons : —

Antistes, priest (or -ess).	Incōla, inhabitant.
Artifex, artist.	Index, informer.
Auctor, author.	Judex, judge.
Augur, augur.	Martyr, witness.
Civis, citizen.	Miles, soldier.
Comes, companion.	Municeps, burgess.
Conjux, spouse.	Parēs, parent.
Custos, keeper.	Praesul, chief priest.
Dux, leader.	Sacerdos, priest (or -ess).
Exul, exile.	Satelles, attendant.
Haeres, heir.	Testis, witness.
Hospes, guest.	Vates, prophet (or -ess).
Hostis, enemy.	Vindex, avenger.

Among these are included adjectives of one termination used substantively; as, adolescens, affinis, juvenis, patruelis, princeps, &c.

2. Many names of animals; as,

Anser, goslin or goose.	Cānis, dog or bitch.
Bōs, ox or cow.	Elephantus, elephant.

* Names of inanimate objects, which are sometimes of one gender and sometimes of another, are said to be of the doubtful gender; as, fīnis, m. & f.

Grūs, crane.
Lēpus, hare.
Limax, snail.
Mūs, mouse.
Ovis, sheep or ram.

Perdix, partridge.
Serpens, snake.
Sūs, swine.
Thynnus, tunny-fish.
Vespertilio, bat.

REMARKS.

1. Some nouns of the common gender are mobilia at the same time. E. g. antistes — antistita, cliens — clienta, hospes — hospita.

2. From the nouns of the common gender we must distinguish, —

a) Masculine appellations of entire classes of persons in the plural, including also the other sex. E. g. hi libēri, children; fili, sons and daughters; frātres, brothers and sisters; rēges, the royal family; parentes, parents.

b) Epicoena, or those which, though including both sexes, are always of the same grammatical gender (i. e. always either masculine or feminine). Such are: MASC. corvus, the raven; milvus, the kite; passer, the swallow; turdus, the thrush. FEM. alauda, the lark; aquila, the eagle; felis, the cat; rana, the frog; vulpes, the fox,* &c.

3. The communia and mobilia occur most frequently as masculine nouns; as, hic amicus, equus, canis, civis, &c. Exceptions are sus, grus, serpens, limax and perdix, which are more commonly feminine.

4. Among the general names of animals, animans, in the sense of "rational animal," or "man," is masculine, and when applied to other animals, feminine or neuter. Quadrupes is generally feminine, sometimes neuter or masculine. Ales and volucris, "bird," is commonly feminine (always so in the plural); sometimes, however, masculine.

GENDER OF NAMES OF INANIMATE OBJECTS.

D. Besides the substantives which designate living beings, there are many others whose grammatical gender is likewise determined by their signification (cf. A. 2). Such are: —

I. MASCULINES. — The names of the winds and months, and generally also those of rivers and mountains, are masculine.† E. g.

Aquilo, Auster, Bōrēas, Etēsīae, Nōtus. The north wind, south wind, north-east wind, the Etesian winds, south wind.

Januārius, Aprilis, Iulius, Novēber. January, April, July, November.

Euphrātes, Ister, Tamēsis, Tigris. The Euphrates, the Danube, the Thames, the Tigris.

Āthos, Ēryx, Hēlicon, Pangaeus. Mount Athos, Eryx, Helicon, Pangaeus.

* When it becomes important to distinguish sex, it is customary to add mas or masculus and femina; as, felis mas, vulpes mascula, porcus femina.

† Because the generic terms ventus, mensis, fluvius (amnis), and mons are of that gender.

EXCEPTIONS.

1. Of the names of rivers, Albula, Allia, Duria, Matrōna, Sagra, Sura, Styz, and Lethe are feminine; Eläver, Jader, Muthul, and others of barbarous origin, neuter.

2. Of the names of mountains, Aetna, Alpis, Calpe, Carambis, Cyl-lene, Ida, Oeta, Rhodōpe, are feminine; and Pelion and Soracte, neuter.

II. FEMININES.—The names of countries, islands, cities, trees and plants are generally feminine.* E. g.

Aegyptus , Gallia, Persis, Trōas.	Egypt, Gaul, Persia, Troas.
Dēlos , Rhōdus , Salāmis , Sicīlia .	The island of Delos, Rhodes, Salamis, Sicily.
Carthāgo , Corinthus , Pýlos , Rōma , Troezen .	The city of Carthage, Corinth, Pylos, Rome, Troezen.
Abies , pīrus , quercus , papýrus , rōsa .	The fir-tree, pear-tree, the oak, the papyrus, the rose.

EXCEPTIONS.

1. Of the names of countries and islands, Pontus, Hellespontus, Bospōrus, Isthmus, and Sason (island) are masculine. Those in um, and plurals in a, are neuter; as, Latium, Samnium, Bactra, &c. So the islands Dianium and Delta.

2. Of the names of cities, those in us, untis, plurals in i, and some of those in us, i, in o and on, are masculine; as, Seltnus, Delphi, Canōpus, Croto, Marathon, &c. Those in um, on, e, ur, and plurals in a, are neuter; as, Tarentum, Illion, Praeneste, Tibur, Arbēla, &c. So are also a number of indeclinable barbarous names; as, Gadir, Hispal, Nepet, &c.

3. Of the names of trees and plants, oleaster, pinaster, styrax; acanthus, asparagus, asphodēlus, calamus, carduus, hellebōrus, intūbus, juncus, rhāmnus, and scirpus are masculine; amarācus, cytissus, lapathus, raphanus, rubus, spinus, larix, vepres, and sentis, common. All of the second declension ending in um, and those of the third in er, are neuter; as, balsāmun, ligustrum; acer, papāver, piper, siser, tuber, robur, &c.

III. NEUTERS.—The gender of all substantives denoting inanimate objects, and not included in Case I. or II. of this rule, is not determined by their signification, but by their termination. (Cf. Lesson LXXVIII. A.) Among these, however, there are several classes of words which are invariably NEUTER. Such are,—

1. All indeclinable nouns, whether singular or plural. E. g. fas, nefas, nihil, cornu, gummi, Tempe, pondo.† (Cf. page 61.)

2. All words and expressions used as substantives, without properly

* Because the generic terms terra, insula, urbs, arbor, are so.

† With the exception of indeclinable names of persons; as, Adam, Ruth, &c.

being such, and linked to an adjective or pronoun of the neuter gender. E. g. A longum; ultimum vale; cras hesternum; illud nosce te ipsum; scire tuum; pater est dissyllabum (A long; the last farewell; yesterday, which once was called "to-morrow"; the injunction, "Know thyself"; thy knowledge; the word "father" is a dissyllable).

To take a walk.	{ Spātior, āri, ātus sum. Ambulāre, deambulāre.
To go out to take a walk.	Ire or abire deambulātum.
To take any one a walking.	Aliquem deambulātum ducere.
To take a drive out of the city.	Vehiculū extra urbem vectāri.

EXERCISE 146.

Do you call me? — I do call you. — What is your pleasure? — You must rise, for it is already late. — What do you want me for? — I have lost all my money at play, and I come to beg you to lend me some. — What o'clock is it? — It is already a quarter past six, and you have slept long enough. — Is it long since you rose? — It is an hour and a half since I rose. — Do you often go a walking? — I go a walking when I have nothing to do at home. — Do you wish to take a walk? — I cannot take a walk, for I have too much to do. — Has your brother taken a ride on horseback? — He has taken an airing in a carriage. — Do your children often go a walking? — They go a walking every morning after breakfast. — Do you take a walk after dinner? — After dinner I drink tea, and then I take a walk. — Do you often take your children a walking? — I take them a walking every morning and every evening. — Can you go along with me? — I cannot go along with you, for I must take my little brother out a walking. — Where do you walk? — We walk in our uncle's garden and fields. — Do you like walking? — I like walking better than eating and drinking. — Does your father like to take a ride on horseback? — He likes to take a ride in a carriage better than on horseback. — Must one love children who are not good? — One ought, on the contrary, to punish and despise them. — Who has taught you to read? — I have learnt it of (ab or apud) a French master. — Has he also taught you to write? — He has taught me to read and to write. — Who has taught your brother arithmetic? — A German master has taught it him. — Do you wish to take a walk with us? — I cannot go a walking, for I am waiting for my German master. — Does your brother wish to take a walk? — He cannot, for he is taking lessons in dancing.

EXERCISE 147.

Have you an English master? — We have one. — Does he also give you lessons in Italian? — He does not know Italian; but we have an Italian and Spanish master. — What has become of your old writing-master? — He has taken orders (has become a clergyman). — What has become of the learned man whom I saw at your house last winter? — He has set up for a merchant. — And what has become of his son? — He has turned a soldier. — Do you still recollect my old dancing-master? — I do still recollect him; what has become of him? — He is here, and you can see him if you like (si placet, si commōdum est). Hast thou a German master? — I have a very good (one), for it is my father, who gives me lessons in German and in English. — Does your father also know Polish? — He does not know it yet, but he intends to learn it this summer. — Do you remember your promise? — I do remember it. — What did you promise me? — I promised to give you lessons in German; and I will do it. — Will you begin this morning? — I will begin this evening, if you please (si tibi libet or collibet). — Do you recollect the man whose son taught us dancing? — I no longer recollect him. — Do you still recollect my brothers? — I do recollect them very well; for when I was studying at Berlin, I saw them every day. — Does your uncle still recollect me? — I assure you that he still recollects you. — Do you speak German better than my cousin? — I do not speak it as well as he, for he speaks it better than many Germans. — Which of your pupils speaks it the best? — The one that was walking with me yesterday speaks it the best of them all. — Is your uncle's house as high as ours? — Yours is higher than my uncle's, but my cousin's is the highest house that I have ever seen. — Has your friend as many books as I? — You have more of them than he; but my brother has more of them than both of you together. — Which of us has the most money? — You have the most, for I have but thirty crowns, my friend has but ten, and you have five hundred.

Lesson LXXVIII. — PENSUM DUODECAGESIMUM.

GENDER OF SUBSTANTIVES AS DETERMINED BY THEIR TERMINATION AND DECLENSION.

A. FIRST DECLENSION. — Substantives of the first declension ending in ā or ē are feminine, and those in ūs and ēs masculine.

E. g. Aula, a hall; stella, a star; aloë, aloes; epitōme, an abridgment; tiāras, a turban; dynastes, a ruler.

EXCEPTIONS are dama, m. & f., a doe, deer; talpa, f. & m., a mole; Hadria, m., the Adriatic Sea; and planetæ, m. pl., the planets. Pandectæ, plural, is feminine, but the singular, pandectes, is masculine. Manna, in the sense of "grain" or "crumb," is regularly feminine, but the manna of the Israelites indeclinable neuter.

B. SECOND DECLENSION. — Of the nouns of the second declension, those ending in ūs (ōs, ōs, ūs) and ēr are masculine, and those in ūm and *ōn neuter.

E. g. animus, the mind; scorpius, a scorpion; Athōs, a mountain; periplūs, circumnavigation; ager, a field; — antrum, a cave; colōn, the colon.

EXCEPTIONS.

1. Feminine are alvus, carbāsus, colus, domus, humus, and vannus. So also the Greek arctus, apostrophus, dialectus, diametrus, diphthongus, exōdus, methōdus (and other compounds of ἡ ὁδός), lecgythus, milus, and paragraphus.

2. Common, but more frequently feminine, are atōmus, an atom; barbītus, a lute; ficus, the fig; grossus, an unripe fig; lōtus, the lotus-flute; phārus, a lighthouse. Sometimes also fasēlus, a sort of boat, and pampīnus, a vine-shoot. Haec mālus signifies the apple-tree, and hic mālus, the mast. Hic epōdus is a shorter verse; haec epōdus, an epode.

3. Neuters are pelāgus, the sea; vīrus, juice, poison; and vulgus, the vulgar.†

C. THIRD DECLENSION. — The third declension exhibits the greatest variety of terminations, and includes nouns of every gender.

I. Nouns of the third declension ending in ō, ōr, ōs, ēr, or n are MASCULINE.

* Those in ōs, ōs, ūs, and ōn are Greek nouns.

† But vulgus is sometimes also masculine.

E. g. sermo, speech; honor, honor; flos, a flower; carcer, a prison; pecten, a comb; canon, a rule, canon.

EXCEPTIONS.

1. Feminines in o are, — a) caro, echo; Argo, and those in do and go, except ordo, cardo, ligo, harpago, and margo; b) abstract and collective terms in io; as, actio, lectio, portio, legio, &c. Pondo, a pound, is an indeclinable neuter.

2. Of those in or, arbor is feminine. Cor, marmor, and aequor are neuter. Ador is commonly indeclinable.

3. Of those in os, cōs and dos are feminine; ōs, ōris and ōs, ossis are neuter. So are also the Greek nouns cetos, chaos, epos, and melos.

4. Of those in er, cadaver, ūter, spinther, tūber, uber, ver, and the plural verbēra are neuter. Linter is more frequently feminine than masculine.

5. Of those in n, aēdōn, halcyōn, sindōn, and icōn are feminine. Gluten, inguen, unguen, sanguen, carmen, and others in men, are neuter.

II. Nouns of the third declension ending in ās, ēs, īs, aus, ys, x, and s preceded by a consonant, are FEMININE.

E. g. pietas, piety; rupes, is, a rock; quies, ētis, rest; iris, the rainbow; laus, praise; chelys, a cithern; pax, peace; hiems, winter; pars, part.

EXCEPTIONS.

1. Of those in as, the name of the Roman pound, as (gen. assis) is masculine.* So are also Greek nouns in as, antis; as, elephas, &c. Neuter are vas (gen. vasis), fas, nefas, and Greek nouns in ātis; as, erysipēlas, &c.

2. Nouns in es, ītis, and Greek nouns in ēs, ētis, are masculine; as, limes, limitis, a cross-road; † lēbes, lebētis, a caldron. So are also acināces, cōles, gausāpes, paries, pes, and praes (surety). Palumbes is f. or m., and ales, m. or f. Neuters are aes and Greek nouns, as cynosarges.

3. Masculines in is are amnis, assis, axis, caulis, collis, crinis, ensis, fustis, ignis, mensis, orbis, panis, piscis, sanguis, unguis, vomis, and others. Common are aqualis, clunus, corbis, and (pollen) pollinis. More commonly masculine are anguis, callis, canalis, canis, cinis, finis, funis, lapis, pedis, pulvis, scrobis (scrobs), tigris, and torquis; more rarely clunus, scobis (scobs), and volūcris.

4. Masculines in x are Greek nouns in ax, and many in ex; as, thorax, judez, pontifex, rex, &c. So also calix, formix, phoenix, saurix, varix; diox, esox, volvox, calyx, coccyx, and oryx. Common are imbrex, obex, and bombyx. More frequently masculine are grex, irpex, latex, and tradux. More frequently feminine, lodix, hystrix, perdix, natrix, sandyx, and calx (the heel, and lime).

* Masculine are also all the parts of this weight; as, sextans, quadrans, triens, quincunx, semis, &c.

† But merges, tis, "a sheaf," is feminine.

5. Of those ending in s preceded by a consonant, dens, fons, mons, pons, chalybs, and hydrops are masculine. So are the Greek names of animals; as, gryps, epops, &c. Common are adepts, seps, lens, frons, forceps, scobs, stirps, and serpens. Neuters are the philosophical terms ens, accidens, antecedens, consequens, animans.

III. Nouns of the third declension ending in ă, ě, i, y, or in c, l, t, ăr, ŭr, ŭs, are NEUTER.

E. g. diadēma, a crown; sedīle, a seat; hydromēli, mead; misŷ, mushroom; lac, milk; mel, honey; caput, the head; par, a pair; fulgur, lightning; corpus, a body.

EXCEPTIONS. — Masculine are sōl, mugil, sāl; furfur, turtur, vultur; lēpus, mūs, tripūs, and other compounds of trōūs. Feminine are those in us, gen. ŭdis or ŭtis; as, palus, ŭdis; salus, ŭtis; to which add tellus, ŭris; and pecus, ŭdis. The feminine of the common nouns grus and sus is the gender of the species.

D. FOURTH DECLENSION. — Nouns of the fourth declension ending in ŭs are masculine, those in ŭ neuter.

E. g. fructus, fruit; cantus, a song; cornu, a horn; gēlu, ice.

EXCEPTIONS. — Feminine are acus, manus, porticus, tribus, and the plurals Idus and Quinquātrus. Common are penus and specus. The obsolete genus (for genu), secus (for sexus, m.), and specus occur as neuters only in the Nominative and Accusative.

E. FIFTH DECLENSION. — Substantives of the fifth declension are feminine.

E. g. res, a thing; acies, an edge; spes, hope; fides, faith.

EXCEPT meridies, which is masculine. On the gender of dies, m. & f., compare Lesson VIII. B.

Which is the nearest way (via proxima or brevissima) to go to your uncle's castle ? — This way is shorter than the one we took yesterday ; but my father knows one which is the nearest of all. — Do you use my carriage ? — I do use it. — Has your father used my horse ? — He has used it. — What does this horse serve you for ? — It serves me to ride out upon. — Do you use the books which I lent you ? — I do use them. — May I (licetne mihi) use your knife ? — Thou mayest use it, but thou must not cut thyself. — May my brothers use your books ? — They may use them, but they must not tear them. — May we use your stone table ? — You may use it, but you must not spoil it. — For what purpose do your brothers want money ? — They want some to live upon. — What does this knife serve us for ? — It serves us to cut our bread, our meat, and our cheese with. — Is it cold to-day ? — It is very cold. — Will you draw near the fire ? — I cannot draw near it, for I am afraid of burning myself. — Why does your friend go away from the fire ? — He goes away from it because he is afraid of burning himself. — Art thou coming near the fire ? — I am coming near it, because I am very cold. — Are thy hands cold? — My hands are not cold, but my feet are. — Do you go away from the fire? — I do go away from it. — Why do you go away from it? — Because I am not cold. — Are you cold or warm? — I am neither cold nor warm. — Why do your children approach the fire? — They approach it, because they are cold. — Is anybody cold? — Somebody is cold. — Who is cold? — The little boy, whose father has lent you a horse, is cold. — Why does he not warm himself? — Because his father has no money to buy wood. — Will you tell him to come to me to warm himself? — I will tell him so. — Do you remember anything? — I remember nothing. — What does your uncle recollect? — He recollects your promise. — What have I promised him? — You have promised him to go to Germany with him next winter. — I intend to do so if it is not too cold. — Are your hands often cold? — My hands are scarcely ever (nunquam fere) cold, but my feet are often so. — Why do you withdraw from the fire? — I have been sitting near the fire this hour and a half, so that I am no longer cold. — Does your friend not like to sit near the fire? — He likes, on the contrary, much to sit near the fire, but only when he is cold. — May one approach your uncle? — One may approach him, for he excludes nobody (januā neminem prohibet).

Lesson LXXIX. — PENSUM UNDEOCTOGESIMUM.

DECLENSION OF GREEK NOUNS.

A. Many substantives of the Latin language are derived from the Greek. They consist partly of general terms (or common nouns), and partly of proper names of persons and places. These Greek nouns generally retain more or less of their original inflection, but are nevertheless referred to the first, second, and third declensions of Latin nouns.

B. FIRST DECLENSION. — Greek nouns of the first declension end in ē feminine, and in ās, ēs masculine. In the plural they are inflected like Latin nouns, but in the singular they deviate according to the following paradigms: —

Crambe, cabbage, f.; Borēas, the north-wind, m.; dynastes, a ruler, m.

NOM	crambē	Borēās	dynastēs
GEN.	crambēs	Borēae	dynastae
DAT.	crambae	Borēae	dynastae
ACC.	crambēn	Borēam or -ān	dynastēn
VOC.	crambē	Borēā	dynastē
ABL.	crambē.	Borēā.	dynastē.

Like crambē, decline alož, aloes; epitōmē, an abridgment; and the proper names Circē, Danaē, Phoenicē;—like Boreas: tiāras, a turban, and the proper names Aenēas, Andreas, Midas, Perdicas;—like dynastes: comētes, the comet; pyritēs, a species of stone; satrāpes, a satrap; and the proper names Anchises, Thersites, &c.

REMARKS.

1. The majority of these words are proper names. Many of them have a Greek and Latin termination at the same time. E. g. musica or musicē, Europa or Europe, Marsyas or Marsya, Sophistes or Sophista.*

2. The genitive ēs (from the nom. ē) belongs especially to proper names; as, Arachnēs, Penelopēs. So also musicēs, rhetoricēs. But with common nouns the genitive in ae is more frequent.

3. The accusative of those in as is sometimes an instead of the more common am: as, Aeneān, Pythagōrān. So that of nouns in e and es is occasionally am instead of en; as, Andromācham, Anchisam, &c.

4. The vocative of proper names and patronymics in es is sometimes (though rarely) a instead of ē; as, Anchisā. Sometimes also the Latin termination a; as, Atridā, Polydectā.

5. The ablative of words in e and es is sometimes a instead of ē. E. g. Semelā, Anchisā.

6. Geographical names sometimes form their genitive plural in ōn (instead of arum); as, Adulūōn.—Patronymics often have um instead of arum; as, Ausonidum, Dardanidum.

7. Many nouns in es, especially those which were originally patronymics, pass over into the third declension; as, Alcibiades, Euripides, Miltiades (gen. is), &c.

C. SECOND DECLENSION.—Greek nouns of the second declension end in ōs or ōs masculine, and in ōn neuter. They are thus declined:—

Scorpios, m., a scorpion; Athōs, m., Mount Athos; symposion, n., a banquet.

			SINGULAR.	PLURAL.
NOM.	scorpios	Athōs	symposion	symposia
GEN.	scorpi	Athō	symposi	symposiōn
DAT.	scorpio	Athō	symposio	symposiis
ACC.	scorpiōn	Athōn or -ō	symposion	symposia
VOC.	scorpi	Athōs	symposion	symposia
ABL.	scorpio	Athō	symposio ,	symposiis .

So decline barbēlos, a lute; phasēlos, the phasel (bean); and the proper names Andros, Parōs, Tilyōs; Ceās, Teōs; Ilion, Pellon, &c.

* The older Roman authors, Cicero included, prefer the Latin form of the most current of these words. E. g. grammatica, dialectica, rhetorica; Hecuba, Sophista, Philocteta. Yet Cicero has also Archias, Epaminondius, Pythagoras, Perseus, and Scythea. The Greek forms Europe, Helene, Penelope, rather belong to poetry.

REMARKS.

1. Many of the Greek nouns become Latinized, and assume the regular terminations us and um. E. g. caminus, cycnus; theatrum, antrum; Aeschylus, Coelus, Homērus, &c. The Greek ros is often changed into er; as, Alexander, Menander, Teucer, instead of Alexandros, &c.

2. Among the poets the accusative is often on, even in words which have assumed the Latin us; as, Menelaon, Noton, instead of Menelaum, &c.

3. The genitive plural of these nouns is generally the Greek ōn, which sometimes occurs even in those otherwise inflected like Latin words. E. g. Epodōn, Georgicōn, Satyrīcōn, &c. The genitive singular sometimes ends in u, and the nominative plural in oe; as, Menandrū (= Menandri); Canephōroe (= Canephōri).

4. Greek nouns in ūs generally retain this ūs, but sometimes change it into ūs; as, Athūs, Androgeūs, or Androgēūs, Tyndarēūs (gen. i and the remaining cases regular). Sometimes they pass over into the third declension; as, Athūs, Androgeūs, gen. ōnis.

5. Nouns, which in the original have oos, contracted ōus, have in Latin sometimes ōus and sometimes ūs; as, Alcinōus, Panthūs, periplūs. Hence the vocative Panthū of Virgil.

6. Nouns in eus are often inflected according to the second declension (as if they ended in the dissyllable ēus); as, Orpheus, i, o, um, eu, o. But words of this class also belong to the third declension. (Cf. D.)

D. THIRD DECLENSION. — 1. Greek nouns of the third declension are all those ending in ma, i, ān, īn, ōn, ēr, y, ŷn, yr, ys, eus, yx, īnx, ynx, and plurals in ē.

E. g. poēma, a poem; hydromēli, mead; Paēan, Apollo; delphīn, a dolphin; agōn, a contest; cratēr, a basin; misŷ, vitriol; Phorcyn; martyr, a witness; chlām̄ys, a cloak; Orpheus; calyx, a cup; syrinx, a reed; lynx, a lynx; celē, pl., a sea-monster.

2. Greek nouns are also many of those ending in the Latin terminations as, es, is, ōs, o, and ēn.

E. g. lampas, a torch; Demosthenes; basis, a pedestal; Mīnōs; rhinocerūs; echō; attagēn, a woodcock.

3. The majority of these words follow the declension of those of Latin origin. E. g. canōn, canōnis; calyx, calŷcis; chlām̄ys, chlām̄ydis; poēma, poēmātis; * gigas, gigantis, &c.

4. Many, however, retain their original terminations in some of the cases, especially among the poets. The following may serve as examples of their declension: —

* The dative and ablative plural of this word is more frequently poēmatibus than poēmatis.

REMARKS.

1. The genitive in os belongs chiefly to roots in d, y, and i; as, Pallādos, Tethýos, basēos, mathesēos. But it occurs far less frequently than the Greek accusative, and rather in poetry than in prose. With roots in o the os of the genitive becomes ūs; as, Echūs, Clūs, Dilūs, Sapphūs, from echo, &c. A number of proper names in es form their genitive in is or i; as, Demosthenis or i, Neoclīs or i, Periclīs or i, from Demosthenes, &c. So also Achilli, Ulyxi.

2. The Greek accusative singular exhibits the terminations a, in, yn, ēn, instead of the common Latin em or in.

a) The accusative in a occurs in the words aēr — aēra, aether — aethēra, and in proper names; as, Pan — Pana, &c. Some words have either a or em; as, Babylona or Babylonem.

b) The terminations in, yn, and ēn are often used by the poets, to

* Proper names in eus frequently pass over into the second declension.

EXERCISE 149.

Have you shaved to-day? — I have shaved. — Has your brother shaved? — He has not shaved himself, but has got shaved. — Do you shave often? — I shave every morning, and sometimes also in the evening. — When do you shave in the evening? — When I do not dine at home. — How many times a day does your father shave? — He shaves only once a day, but my brother has such a strong beard, that he is obliged to shave twice a day. — Does your uncle shave often? — He shaves only every other day (tertio quoque die) for his beard is not strong. — At what o'clock do you dress in the morning? — I dress as soon as I have breakfasted, and I breakfast every day at eight o'clock, or at a quarter past eight. — Does your neighbor dress before he breakfasts? — He breakfasts before he dresses. — At what o'clock in the evening dost thou undress? — I undress as soon as I return from the theatre. — Dost thou go to the theatre every evening? — I do not go every evening, for it is better to study than to go to the theatre. — At what o'clock dost thou undress when thou dost not go to the theatre? — I then undress as soon as I have supped, and go to bed at ten o'clock. — Have you already dressed the child? — I have not dressed it yet, for it is still asleep. — At what o'clock does it get up? — It gets up as soon as it is waked. — Do you rise as early as I? — I do not know at what o'clock you rise, but I rise as soon as I awake. — Will you tell my servant to wake me to-morrow at four o'clock? — I will tell him. — Why have you risen so early? — My children have made such a noise that they wakened me. — Have you slept well? — I have not slept well, for you made too much noise. — At what o'clock must I wake you? — To-morrow thou mayest wake me at six o'clock. — At what o'clock did the good captain awake? — He awoke at a quarter past five in the morning.

EXERCISE 150.

When did this man go down into the well? — He went down into it this morning. — Has he come up again? — He came up an hour ago. — Where is your brother? — He is in his room. — Will you tell him to come down? — I will tell him so; but he is not dressed yet. — Is your friend still on the mountain? — He has already come down. — Did you go down or up this river? — We went down it. — Has your brother dined already? — He dined as soon as he had alighted from his horse. — Is your uncle already asleep? — I believe that he is asleep, for he went to bed as soon as he had alighted. — Did my cousin speak to you before he started? — He spoke to me before he got into the coach. — Have you seen my brother? — I saw him before I went on board the ship. — How did my child behave? — He did behave very well. — How did my brother behave towards you? He behaved very well towards me, for he behaves well towards everybody. — Is it worth while to write to that man? — It is not worth while to write to him. — Is it worth while to alight in order to buy a cake? — It is not worth while, for it is not long since we ate. — Is it worth while to dismount from my horse in order to give something to that poor man? — Yes, for he seems to want it; but you can give him something without dismounting from your horse. — Is it better to go to the theatre than to study? — It is better to do the latter than the former. — Is it better to go to bed than to go a walking? — It is better to do the latter than the former. — Is it better to get into a coach than to go on board the ship? — It is not worth while to get into a coach or to go on board the ship when one has no wish to travel.

Lesson LXXX.—PENSUM OCTOGESIMUM.

DERIVATION OF ADJECTIVES.

A. Adjectives are either primitive or derivative; as, dōnus, mālus; puerilis, anabilis. Derivatives are formed from verbs (verbals), from nouns (denominatives), from other adjectives, and sometimes from adverbs (adverbials) and prepositions (prepositionals). All these are subdivided into various classes, and characterized by peculiar terminations.

B. Adjectives derived from verbs end in bundus, cundus, idus, ūus, īlis, īlis, āz, and ūlus.

1. Those in bundus are formed chiefly from verbs of the first conjugation, and generally agree in sense with the present participle. Sometimes, however, they convey the accessory notion of fulness or abundance. E. g. errabundus, populabundus, wandering, pillaging

(from errare, populari). So also hesitabundus, lacrimabundus, mirabundus, full of hesitation, of tears, of wonder. A few verbs in cundus have a similar sense; as, rubicundus, ruddy; iracundus, given to anger; verecundus, bashful, respectful.

2. Those in idus are generally from intransitive verbs, and simply express the quality implied in the verb. E. g. calidus, warm; algidus, cold; rubidus, red, reddish; rapidus, rapid (from calere, algere, rubere, rapere). A few in ius have a similar signification; as, assiduus, congruus, nocuus (from assidere, congruere, nocere). But those in ius from transitive verbs have a passive sense; as, conspicius, visible; indivicius, indivisible.

3. Those in ilis and bilis have a passive sense, and denote possibility or capacity. E. g. facilis, easy (to be done); fragilis, fragile; amabilis, amiable; delebilis, easy to destroy; placabilis, easily appeased. Some of them, however, are active; as, horribilis, terribilis, fertilis, &c.

4. Those in ax denote an inclination or propensity, frequently a vicious one. E. g. edax and vorax, voracious; furax, thievish; audax, audacious; rapax, rapacious (from edere, vorare, &c.). The few in ilus are analogous; as, bibulus, given to drinking; credulus, credulous; querulus, querulous.

C. The substantives from which derivative adjectives are formed are either common nouns or proper names of men and places.

I. Adjectives derived from common nouns end in eus, icus, ilis, acēus or icūs, ālis, ālilis, ius, inus (īnus), ārius, ōsus (nōsus), lentus, ivus, ernus, urnus, itimus, ster, ātus, ilus, and ūtus.

1. The termination eus designates the material of which anything consists or is made, and sometimes also resemblance. E. g. aurēus, ferrēus, plumbēus, made of gold, iron, lead; ignēus, vitreus, igneous, glassy. Some of this class end either in neus or nus; as, eburneus or eburnus, of ivory; querneus or quernus, of oak.

2. Those in icus and ilis signify "belonging or relating to," the former in a general, the latter in a moral sense. E. g. aulicus, bellicus, rusticus, relating to the court, to war, to the country; puerilis, senilis, virtilis, belonging (peculiar) to the age of boyhood, old age, manhood. Sometimes both from the same noun; as, civicus and civilis, hosticus or hostilis.

3. The terminations acēus and icūs sometimes denote the material, and sometimes descent. E. g. chartacēus, membranacēus, cementicius, made of paper, membrane, cement; patricius, tribunicus, patrician, tribunitian.

4. Those in ālis, āris, and ālilis are formed not only from nouns in a, but also from those of other terminations. E. g. ancorālis, relating to an anchor; convivālis, convivial; regālis, royal, regal; virginālis, virginal.* The termination āris is generally put when the letter l precedes; as, consulāris, puellāris, vulgāris, Apollināris; — atilis conveys the sense of fitness; as, aquātilis, volātilis.

5. The termination ius belongs principally to substantives in or; as, amatorius, censorius, imperatorius, pertaining to love (or lovers), to the censor, to a commander. Sometimes also to other substantives; as, regius, patrius, royal, fatherly.

6. Adjectives in inus are chiefly derived from names of animals, especially to denote the flesh of the same. E. g. anatinus, anserinus, asininus, caninus, equinus, ferinus, taurinus, of a duck, goose, ass, dog, horse, wild beast, bull.† Sometimes also from names of other beings; as, masculinus, femininus, divinus, libertinus. Those in inus are derived either from names of plants or minerals, or from words denoting time; as, cedrinus, faginus, adamantinus, of cedar, beech, adamant; crastinus, annotinus, hornotinus, of to-morrow, of last year, of this year.

7. Those in arius properly denote a trade or profession, sometimes also a more general relation. E. g. carbonarius, coriarius, ostiarus, statuarius, a collier, tanner, porter, statuary; ‡ aerarius, argentarius, relating to copper, to silver (or money).

8. The terminations osus and lentus express fulness or abundance. E. g. aerumnosus, artificiosus, tenebriosus, full of misfortune, of skill, of darkness; corpulentus, fraudulentus, pulverulentus, &c. Nouns of the fourth declension commonly have uosus; as, actuōsus, full of action; portuosus, saltuosus, abounding in ports, in woods.

9. The terminations ivus, ernus, urnus, ūlinus, and ster denote quality, manner, descent, time, place, &c. E. g. furtivus, aesticus, nativus, secret, of the summer, native; externus, maternus, paternus, external, maternal, paternal; diurnus, nocturnus, hibernus, vernus, of the day, night, winter, spring; — legitimus, maritimus, legitimate, maritime; — campester, of the plain; pedester, pedestrian.

10. An extensive class of adjectives, ending in atus (sometimes itus or utus), have the form and sense of the perfect participle, but are derived from nouns. E. g. barbatus, dentatus, galeatus, falcatus, furnished with a beard, with teeth, with a helmet, with scythes; auritus, provided with ears; pellius, covered with skins; cornutus, horned; nasutus, having a large (or acute) nose.

II. The adjectives derived from proper names may be divided into those formed from, — a) names of individuals; b) names of cities; c) names of nations; d) names of countries.

1. Adjectives derived from names of men end in iānus, ānus, ēus, and inus; as, Caesariānus, Catonianus, Ciceronianus; Cinnānus, Sulānus; Caesarēus, Herculēus; Jugurthinus, Plautinus, &c. The last

* So also from proper names; as, Augustālis, Flaviālis, Trajanālis, &c.

† When these adjectives denote the flesh of animals, the feminine is used with caro understood; as, anserina, anatina, ferina, taurina, &c.

‡ In this sense they stand substantively; but as adjectives proper they signify "relating to charcoal, leather, a door or doors, statuary."

of these terminations belongs more especially to derivative family names; as, Paulinus, Rufinus, Agrippina, Plautina, &c.

To these add the adjectives in ēus, tus, icus, and iācus, derived from Greek names of men. E. g. Achillēus, Sophoclēus; Antiochius, Aristotelius; Homericus, Isocratēus; Archidācus. Sometimes there are two of them (one in ēus, the other in icus) from the same noun; as, Philippēus and Philippicus, Pythagorēus and Pythagoricus.

2. Adjectives derived from names of cities end in ensis, inus, as, and ānus. E. g. Cannae — Canensis, Antiochia — Antiochensis; Florentia — Florentinus, Latium — Latinus; Arpinum — Arpinas, Privernum — Privernas; Roma — Romānus, Sparta — Spartānus. To these add those in tus and aeus derived from Greek names of cities; as, Corinthus — Corinthius, Ephesus — Ephēstus; Larissa — Larissaeus, Smyrna — Smyrnaeus.

3. Primitive names of nations give rise to adjectives in icus and tus. E. g. Afer — Africanus, Gallus — Gallicus, Scythia — Scythicus; Syrus — Syrus, Thrax — Thracius, &c. Some of them are patril substantives and adjectives at the same time; as, Graecus, Etruscus, Sardus.

4. The names of countries are generally themselves derivatives; as, Gallia, Italia, Thracia (from Gallus, Italus, Thrax). Some of these, however, give rise to adjectives in ensis and ānus; as, Graeciensis, Hispaniensis; Africanus, Germanicanus, &c. To these add two in iācus: Aegyptiācus, Syriācus.

D. Derivatives from other adjectives end in ūlus, ōlus, cūlus, ellus, and ānūs.

1. All of these except those in ānūs are diminutives. E. g. parvūlus, primūlus; paupercūlus, levicūlus; novellus, pulchellus; some have even a double diminutive; as, paucus — paulus and paulūlus (pauzillus and pauzillūlus), bonus — bellus, bellūlus.

2. Those in ānūs are formed from adjectives in us, and denote similarity of quality. E. g. rejectanūs, to be rejected; collectaneus, collected; subitaneus, sudden. And after the analogy of these, consentaneus, praecidaneus, succidaneus.

EXERCISE 151.

Have you already hired a room ? — I have already hired one. — Where have you hired it ? — I have hired it in William Street, number one hundred and fifty-one. — At whose house have you hired it ? — At the house of the man whose son has sold you a horse. — For whom has your father hired a room ? — He has hired one for his son who has just arrived from Germany. — Did you at last get rid of that man ? — I did get rid of him. — Why has your father parted with his horses ? — Because he did not want them any more. — Have you discharged your servant ? — I have discharged him, because he served me no more well. — Why have you parted with your carriage ? — Because I do not travel any more. — Has your merchant succeeded at last in getting rid of his damaged sugar? — He has succeeded in getting rid of it. — Has he sold it on credit? — He was able to sell it for cash, so that he did not sell it on credit. — Do you hope to arrive early in Paris? — I hope to arrive there at a quarter past eight, for my father is waiting for me this evening. — For what have you exchanged your carriage which you no longer made use of? — I have exchanged it for a fine Arabian horse. — Do you wish to exchange your book for mine? — I cannot, for I want it to study German with. Why do you take your hat off? — I take it off, because I see my old writing-master coming. — Do you put on another hat to go to the market? — I do not put on another to go to the market, but to go to the great concert.

EXERCISE 152.

Why does your father put on other clothes? — He is going to the king, so that he must put on others. — Have you put on another hat to go to the English captain? — I have put on another, but I have not put on another coat or other boots. — How many times a day dost thou put on other clothes? — I put on others to dine and to go to the theatre. — Do you often put on a clean shirt (change your shirt)? — I put on a clean one every morning. — When does your father put on a clean shirt? — He puts it on when he goes to the ball. — Does he put on a clean cravat (change his cravat) as often as you? — He puts one on oftener than I, for he does so six times a day. — Did you often take fresh horses when you went to Vienna? — I took fresh ones every three hours. — Will you change me this gold coin? — I am going to change it for you; what money (Quid nummorum) do you wish for it? — I wish to have crowns, florins, and kreutzers. — Do you correspond with my friend? — I do correspond with him. — How long have you been corresponding with my brother? — I have been corresponding with him these six years almost. — Why do you mix among those people? — I mix among them in order to know what they say of me. — Have you recognized your father? — I had not seen him for such a long time, that I did not recognize him. — Do you still speak Latin? — It is so long since I spoke it, that I have nearly (fere) forgotten it all (omnino).

Lesson LXXXI. — PENSUM UNUM ET OCTOGESIMUM.

OF THE FUTURE TENSE.

A. The future tense represents an action or event that will take place hereafter. This action may be considered either as incomplete or going on at some time to come (First or Simple Future), or as completed (Future Perfect). E. g.

Scribam, I shall write (shall be engaged in writing).

Amābitur, He will be loved (will be the object of love).

Scripsēro, I shall have written.

Amātus erit, He will have been loved.

B. FORMATION OF THE FIRST FUTURE.

1. The first future active is formed from the present indicative by changing, 1. o, 2. eo, 3. o (io), 4. io, into, 1. ābo, 2. ēbo, 3. am (iam), 4. iam. As,

1. āmo — āmābo, I shall or will love.

2. mōnēo — mōnēbo, I shall or will remind.

3. lēgo — lēgam, I shall or will read.

(3.) cāpio — cāpiam, I shall or will take.

4. audīo — audiam, I shall or will hear.

2. The first future passive is formed from the active, by changing the final m into r. As,

1. amābo — amābor, I shall or will be loved.

2. mōnēbo — mōnēbor, I shall or will be reminded.

3. lēgam — lēgar, I shall or will be read.

(3.) cāpiam — cāpiar, I shall or will be taken.

4. audiam — audiar, I shall or will be heard.

3. The future of deponent verbs follows the analogy of the passive. As,

1. hortor — hortābor, I shall or will exhort.

2. verēor — verēbor, I shall or will fear.

3. loquor — loquar, I shall or will speak.

4. blandior — blandiar, I shall or will flatter.

REMARK. — The subjunctive mood wants both the future tenses. On the manner of indicating future contingent action, see F.

INFLECTION OF THE FIRST FUTURE.

C. The following paradigms exhibit the inflection of the first future, active and passive.

ACTIVE.	FIRST CONJUGATION.	PASSIVE.
Amābo, I shall or will love.		Amābor, I shall or will be loved.
SING. āmābō		SING. āmābōr
āmābīs		āmābēris or -rē
āmābīt,		āmābītūr,

ACTIVE.
PLUR. āmābīmūs
āmābītīs āmābunt.

PASSIVE.
PLUR. āmābīmūr
āmābīmīni āmābuntur.

SECOND CONJUGATION.

Mōnēbo, I shall or will remind. Mōnēbōr, I shall or will be reminded.

SING. mōnēbō mōnēbīs mōnēbīt,

PLUR. mōnēbīmūs
mōnēbītīs mōnēbunt.

SING. mōnēbōr
mōnēbērīs or -rē
mōnēbītūr,

PLUR. mōnēbīmūr
mōnēbīmīni mōnēbuntūr.

THIRD CONJUGATION.

Lēgām, I shall or will read. Lēgār, I shall or will be read.

SING. lēgām
lēgēs lēgēt,

PLUR. lēgēmūs lēgētīs lēgent.

SING. lēgār
lēgērīs or -rē lēgētūr,

PLUR. lēgēmūr lēgēmīni lēgentūr.

FOURTH CONJUGATION.

Audīām, I shall or will hear. Audīār, I shall or will be heard.

SING. audīām audīēs audīēt,

PLUR. audīēmūs audīētīs audient.

SING. audīār
audīērīs or -rē
audīētūr,

PLUR. audīēmūr
audīēmīni audientur.

So conjugate apportābo, I shall bring; curābo, I shall order; dābo, I shall give; laudābo, I shall praise; lavābo, I shall wash; regnābo, I shall rule; secābo, I shall cut; stābo, I shall stand; vocābo, I shall call; — audebo, I shall dare; docēbo, I shall teach; gaudēbo, I shall rejoice; habēbo, I shall have; jubēbo, I shall command; studēbo, I shall study; tenēbo, I shall hold; — āgam, I shall act (do); faciām, I shall make (do); mittām, I shall send; pōnam, I shall place (put); scribām, I shall write; sumām, I shall take; — aperīam, I shall open; finīam, I shall finish; punīam, I shall punish; reperīam, I shall find; sentiām, I shall feel; venīam, I shall come; invenīam, I shall find, &c.

To the above add the impersonal futures: constābit, fulgurābit, gelābit, grandinābit, juvābit, praestābit, restābit; — apparebit, attinebit, debēbit, dolēbit, nocēbit, pertinēbit, placēbit, solēbit; — accidet, incipiet, lucescet, nigel, pluet, refēret; — conoventet, expediet, &c. (Cf. Lesson I.V.)

FUTURE OF DEPONENT VERBS.

D. The future of deponent verbs is inflected like that of the passive voice. Thus :—

Hortābor, I shall or will exhort. Lōquar, I shall or will speak.

SING. hortābōr	SING. lōquār
hortābēris or -rē	lōquēris or -rē
hortābītūr,	lōquētūr,
PLUR. hortābīmūr	PLUR. lōquēmūr
hortābīmīni	lōquēmīni
hortābuntūr.	lōquentūr.

Verēbor, I shall or will fear. Blandīar, I shall or will flatter.

SING. verēbōr	SING. blandīār
verēbēris or -rē	blandīēris or -rē
verēbītūr,	blandīētūr,
PLUR. verēbīmūr	PLUR. blandīēmūr
verēbīmīni	blandīēmīni
verēbuntūr.	blandientūr.

So arbitrābor, I shall think; comitābor, I shall escort; morābor, I shall delay; — merēbor, I shall earn; miserēbor, I shall pity; tuēbor, I shall defend; — lābar, I shall glide (fall); obliviscar, I shall forget; profiscar, I shall depart; sequar, I shall follow; — experīar, I shall experience; largīar, I shall lavish, &c.

FUTURE OF IRREGULAR VERBS.

E. The future of sum is irregular; volo, fero, edo, and fio follow the analogy of the third conjugation, ēo and quēo that of the fourth. E. g.

1. Ēro, I shall or will be.

SING. ēro, ēris, ērit; PLUR. ērimus, ēritis, ērunt.

So adēro, I shall be present; potēro, (from possum), I shall be able, and all the remaining compounds of sum.

2. Vōlam, I shall wish or be willing.

SING. vōlām, vōlēs, vōlēt; PLUR. vōlēmūs, vōlētis, vōlent.

So mālām, I shall prefer, and nōlām, I shall be unwilling.

3. Fēram, I shall bear (carry), ēdam, I shall eat, and fiam, I shall become, are regularly inflected like lēgam. So also their compounds; as, affēram, comēdam, calefiam, &c.

4. Ibo, I shall or will go.

SING. ibo, ibis, ibit; PLUR. ibimus, ibitis, ibunt.

So all its compounds; as, adibo, inibo, praeteribo, subibo, transibo, &c. And in the passive impersonally ibitur, inibitur, &c.

5. The future of queo and nequeo is defective, quibo, quibunt, and nequibunt being the only persons in use.

Shall you love ?	Amabísne ? Num amábis ?
I shall not love.	Nón amábo.
Will he have money ?	Habebítne pecúniám ?
He will not have any.	Nón habébit.
Shall you command him to leave ?	Jubebísne eúm abire ?
I shall command him.	Jubebo.
Shall you send me the book ?	Mittésne míhi líbrum ?
I shall send it.	Mittam.
Shall ye write letters ?	Scribetísne epístolas ?
We shall write some.	Véro, scribémus nonnúllas.
Will they come or go away ?	Útrum illi véniént an abibunt ?
They will come.	Vénient.
Will he be contented ?	Eritne conténtus ?
He will.	Érit.
They will not be contented.	Nón érunt conténti.
Will it rain or snow to-day ?	Pluétne hódie an nínget ?
Shall you exhort him to speak ?	Hortaberísne eúm, ut vérba fáciat ?
I shall exhort him.	Hortabor.
Will he defend us ?	Núm nós tuébítur ?
He will not defend us.	Nós nón tuébitur.
Will they forget their duty ?	Obliviscéntúrne officia súa ?
He will not forget them.	Nón obliviscéntur.
Shall ye squander any money ?	Númquid pecúniæ largiémini ?
We shall not squander any at all.	Núllam omníno largiémur.
Will we be loved ?	Amabimúrne ? Nónne amábimur ?
You will not be loved.	Nón amabímíni.
Will our books be read ?	Legéntúrne líbri nóstri ?
They will certainly be read.	Legéntur síne ullá dubitatíone.

FUTURE SUBJUNCTIVE.

F. Latin verbs have no special form for the future subjunctive. When, in dependent clauses, it becomes necessary to express future contingent action, the Romans proceed as follows : —

I. If the main clause contains a verb of the future tense, the present or imperfect subjunctive supplies the place of the first future subjunctive in the dependent clause. E. g.

Affirmo tibi, si hoc beneficium míhi tribuas, mē magnóperē gavisúrum.	If you will do me this favor, I assure you that I shall be greatly delighted.
Affirmābam tibi, si illud beneficium míhi tribúeres, magnóperē me gavisúrum.	I assured you that I should be greatly delighted, if you would do me that favor.
Affirmo tibi, si hoc beneficium míhi tribuátur, me magnóperē gavisúrum.	I assure you, that, if this favor is done me, I shall be greatly delighted.

Eum, ni páreat pátri, habitúrum infortúnium esse dixit.

He said that he (i. e. the son) would be unfortunate, unless he obeyed his father.

Ex his quidam dixisse dicítur, fore, ut brévi a Gállis Rôma caperétur.

One of these is reported to have said, that Rome would in a short time be taken by the Gauls.

Tû si quid fôrte ad mē scripsēris, perficiam, ne tē frustra scripsisse arbitrêre.

If you perchance shall write me, I will see that you shall not think that you have written to no purpose.

II. When no verb of the future tense precedes, and the construction still requires a future subjunctive, the participle in rus, with sim or essem, is employed. E. g.

Nôn dubito, quin reditúrus sit.

I do not doubt but that he will return.

Nôn dubitábam, quin reditúrus esset.

I did not doubt but that he would return.

His de rêbus, quid actúrus sis, rescribas mihi vélím.

I wish you to write to me, what you intend to do about these matters.

Nôn debes dubitare, quin sis futúrus, qui esse debes.

You should not doubt but that you will be what you ought to be.

Nôn dubito, quin futúrum sit, ut laudétur.

I do not doubt but he will be praised.

Múlti non dubitábant, quin futúrum esset, ut Caesar a Pompéjo vincerétur.

Many were convinced (did not doubt) that Caesar would be conquered by Pompey.

Nescio, num futúrum sit, ut crâs hóc ipso témpore jam redierit.

I do not know whether he will have returned to-morrow at this time.

The dust; the mud; the smoke.

Pulvis, éris, m.; lútum, i, n.; fûmus, i, m.

Dusty.

Pulverulentus, a, um.

Muddy.

Lutôsus, lutulentus, a, um.

Smoky.

Fumôsus, a, um.

Is it dusty?

Ortúsne est pulvis?

It is dusty.

Ortus est.

It is very dusty.

Vis pulvêris magna est.

Is it muddy out of doors?

{ Ecquid ést fôris lútum?

{ Sûntne viae lutôsae?

To be over, left.	Restāre, relinqui, reliquum esse.
To have left.	Reliquum habēre.
It remains (sc. that I should do this).	Rēstat, reliquum est, ut hoc faciam.
To fill.	(Impleo, ēre, ēvi, ētum. Complēre, explēre, replēre. (ALIQUID ALIQUA RE.)
Shall you go in ?	Idisne intro ?
I shall not go in.	Nōn ibo.
I shall sit down upon this chair.	Ego hāc in sellā assidam.
Will you sit down by my side ?	Visne mē assidēre ?
Let me sit down upon the ground.	Considāmus hūmo.
Will you please to sit down in the chair ?	Placētne tibi assidēre in sellā ?
No, I have no time to sit down.	Nōn, otio ad assidendum cāreo.
Where is your scholar sitting ?	Ūbi sēdet discipulus tuus ?
He is sitting over his books in school.	Assidet libris in scholā.
We sat down in the library.	In bibliothecā consēdimus.
Will you sit down by the fire ?	Visne assidēre apud carbōnes ?
No, I am not cold.	Nōlo; nam nōn algeo.
Will your boy come into the house ?	Veniētne puer tuus intro ?
He will (shall) come in immediately.	Sāne, veniet intro e vestigio.
Shall you go into the city with me ?	Inibisne mēcum in urbem ?
I shall not go.	Nōn infbo.
How much money have you left ?	Quanta tibi pecunia reliqua est ?
I have three florins left.	Reliqui sunt mihi trēs florēni.
I have but one florin left.	Ūnum tantum florēnum reliquum habeo.

If I pay him, I have but little left. Si illi debitum solvam, reliquum non habébo nisi párum.

G. Obs. The conjunction si, "if," and nisi, "if not," or "unless," is followed either by the indicative or subjunctive, according to the sense to be conveyed. (Cf. Lessons LXXXIV. and LXXXVI.)

If he comes, I shall speak to him. Si véniet (vénit or véniat), cum éo colloquar.

If the weather is fine to-morrow, I shall take a walk. Si tempéstatas crástina est (= érit) bóna, ibo ambulátum.

I shall pay you, if I receive my money. Solvam tibi débita, si pecúnias meas accipiam.

If he addresses (speaks to) me, I shall answer him. Si mé alloquétur, respondébo.

If you will promise me to keep it secret, I shall tell it to you. Si mihi pollicébëris rém tacère, tecum communicábo.

I have spent all my money, so that I have none left. Pecúniám meám ómnem expéndi, ut nùlla relinquitur.

Do you fill your goblet with wine? Implésne póculum túum víno?

I do fill it with pure wine. Impleo íd méro.

Did he fill his purse with money? Explevitne marsúpium súum pecúniá?

He was not able to fill it. Explère nòn pótuit.

Shall you fill the bottle with wine? Écquid lagénam implébis víno?

No, I shall fill it with pure water. Immo pótius éam áquā purā implébo.

EXERCISE 153.

Will your father go out to-day? — He will go out if it is fine weather. — Will your sister go out? — She will go out, if it is not windy. — Will you love my brother? — I shall love him with all my heart, if he is as good as you. — Will your parents go into the country to-morrow? — They will not go, for it is too dusty. — Shall we take a walk to-day? — We will not take a walk, for it is too muddy out of doors. — Do you see the castle of my relation behind yonder mountain? — I do see it. — Shall we go in? — We will go in, if you like. — Will you go into that room? — I shall not go into it, for it is smoky. — I wish you a good morning, madam. — Will you not come in? — Will you not sit down? — I will sit down upon that large chair. — Will you tell me what has become of your brother? — I will tell you. — Here is the chair upon which he sat often. — When did he die? — He died two years ago. — I am very much (vehementer) afflicted at it. — Hast thou spent all thy money? — I have not spent all. — How much hast thou left of it? — I have not much left of it; I have but one florin left. — How much money have thy sisters left? — They have but three crowns left. — Have you money enough left to pay your tailor? — I have enough of it left to pay him; but if I pay him, I shall have but little left. — How much money will your brothers have left? — They will have a hundred crowns left. — Will you speak to my uncle if you see him? If I see him, I shall speak to him. — Will you take a walk to-morrow? — If it is fine weather, I shall take a walk; but if it is bad weather, I shall stay at home. — Will you pay your shoemaker? — I shall pay him, if I receive my money to-morrow. — Why do you wish to go? — If your father comes, I shall not go; but if he does not come, I must go. — Why do you not sit down? — If you will stay with me, I will sit down; but if you go, I shall go along with you. — Will you love my children? — If they are good and assiduous, I shall love them; but if they are idle and naughty, I shall despise and punish them. — Am I right in speaking thus? — You are not wrong.

Lesson LXXXII. — PENSUM ALTERUM ET OCTOGESIMUM.

OF THE FUTURE PERFECT.

A. I. The future perfect of the active voice is formed from the perfect indicative by changing i into ěro. E. g.

1. amāvi — amāvěro, I shall have loved.
2. monūi — monučero, I shall have reminded.
3. lēgi — lēgěro, I shall have read.
4. audivi — audivěro, I shall have heard.

II. The future perfect passive is compounded of the perfect participle and ěro, “I shall be.” E. g.

1. amātus ěro or fuěro, I shall have been loved.
2. monītus ěro or fuěro, I shall have been reminded.
3. lectus ěro or fuěro, I shall have been read.
4. auditus ěro or fuěro, I shall have been heard.

INFLECTION OF THE FUTURE PERFECT.

B. The inflection of the future perfect, active and passive, is exhibited by the following paradigms: —

ACTIVE.

PASSIVE.

FIRST CONJUGATION.

Amāvěro, I shall have loved.

Amātus ěro, I shall have been loved.

SING. amāvěř
amāvěřis
amāvěřit,

SING. amātus ěro or fuěro
amātus ěris or fuěřis
amātus ěrit or fuěřit,

ACTIVE.

PLUR. amāverīmus amāverītis *
amāverint.

PASSIVE.

PLUR. amāti erīmus or fuerīmus amāti erītis or fuerītis amāti erunt or fuerint.

SECOND CONJUGATION.

Monuēro, I shall have reminded. Monitus ēro, I shall have been reminded.

SING. monuērō monuēris monuērit,
PLUR. monuērīmus
monuēritis monuērint.

SING. monitus ēro or fuēro monitus ēris or fueris monitus erit or fuerit,
PLUR. moniti erīmus or fuerīmus moniti erītis or fuerītis moniti erunt or fuerint.

THIRD CONJUGATION.

Lēgēro, I shall have read. Lectus ēro, I shall have been read.

SING. lēgērō lēgēris lēgērit,
PLUR. lēgērīmus
lēgēritis lēgērint.

SING. lectus ēro or fuēro lectus ēris or fueris lectus erit or fuerit,
PLUR. lecti erīmus or fuerīmus lecti erītis or fuerītis
lecti erunt or fuerint.

FOURTH CONJUGATION.

Audivēro, I shall have heard. Auditus ēro, I shall have been heard.

SING. audivērō audivēris audivērit,
PLUR. audivērīmus
audivēritis audivērint.

SING. auditus ēro or fuēro auditus ēris or fueris auditus erit or fuerit,
PLUR. auditi erīmus or fuerīmus auditi erītis or fuerītis auditi erunt or fuerint.

So conjugate apportāvēro, I shall have brought; curāvēro, I shall have ordered; laudāvēro, I shall have praised; vocāvēro, I shall have called; dēdēro, I shall have given; secuēro, I shall have cut; stēlēro, I shall have stood; — docuēro, I shall have taught; habuēro, I shall have had; jussēro, I shall have commanded; tenuēro, I shall have held; egēro, I shall have acted; fēcēro, I shall have done (made); misēro, I shall have sent; posuēro, I shall have put; scripsēro, I shall have written; sumpsēro, I shall have taken; — finivēro, I shall have finished; punivēro, I shall have punished; sitivēro, I shall have thirsted; aperuēro, I shall have opened; reperēro, I shall have found; venēro, I shall have come, &c.

* The i of the imus and itis of this tense (as of the perfect subjunctive) is either long or short, perhaps more frequently long. The is of the second person singular is sometimes long.

To these add the irregular verbs fuëro, I shall have been; potuëro, I shall have been able; votuëro (noluëro, maluëro), I shall have been willing (unwilling, more willing); tulëro, I shall have carried; ivëro (abivëro, prodicëro, &c.), I shall have gone (gone away, gone out).

REMARK. — The future perfect active is liable to syncopation, like the perfect (cf. page 239). E. g. amäro, delëro, consuëro, instead of amävëro, delëvëro, consuëvëro. That of the fourth conjugation is frequently derived from the secondary perfect in ti; as, audiëro, finiëro, puniëro, prodiëro, &c.

Will you have loved?

I shall have loved.

If you and I shall have loved.

Will you have reminded?

We will not have reminded.

Will they have read the book?

He will have read it.

Shall we have heard?

You will not have heard.

Shall I have been loved?

You will not have been loved.

Shall we have been punished?

You will not have been punished.

Will the letters have been written?

They will not have been written.

Amaverisne?

Vëro, amävëro.

Si égo et tû amaverimus.

Nûm vôs monueritis?

Nôs nôn monuerimus.

Legerintne librum?

Légerint.

Audiverimusne?

Nôn audiveritis.

Egon' éro amätus?

Nôn éris amätus.

Erimusne puniti?

Punsti nôn éritis.

Scriptaëne erunt epistolae?

Nôn erunt scriptae.

FUTURE PERFECT OF DEPONENT VERBS.

C. The future perfect of deponent verbs is the same as that of the passive voice. E. g.

Hortätus ëro, I shall have ex- Blanditus ëro, I shall have flathorted. tered.

SING. hortätus ëro or fuëro

hortätus ëris or fueris hortätus ërit or fuërit,

PLUR. hortäti erimus or fuerimus

hortäti eritis or fueritis

hortäti erunt or fuërint.

SING. blanditus ëro or fuëro blanditus ëris or fueris blanditus ërit or fuërit,

PLUR. blanditi erimus or fuerimus

blanditi eritis or fueritis

blanditi erunt or fuërint.

So, 2. veritus ëro, I shall have feared; 3. locutus ëro, I shall have spoken. To these add, according to the respective conjugations: arbiträtus ëro, I shall have thought; comitätus ëro, I shall have escorted; morätus ëro, I shall have delayed; — meritus ëro, I shall have earned; miseritus ëro, I shall have pitied; tuilitus ëro, I shall have defended; lapsus ëro, I shall have glided; oblitus ëro, I shall have forgotten; profectus ëro, I shall have departed; secutus ëro, I shall have followed; — expertus ëro, I shall have experienced; largitus ëro, I shall have lavished.

Will he have exhorted?	Eritne hortátus?
He will not have exhorted.	Nôn erit hortátus.
Will you have departed?	Erisne profectus?
Yes, I shall have departed.	Véro, profectus éro.
Shall we have flattered?	Núm nós blandíti érimus?
You will not have flattered.	Blandíti nōn éritis.
Will they have forgotten their duties?	Oblitine érunt officiōrum suōrum?
They will not have forgotten them.	(Eōrum) nōn obliti érant.

ON THE USE OF THE FUTURE PERFECT.

D. The future perfect declares that an action or event will be completed at or before the time of another future action or event. Hence it can only be used in connection with another future verb, with an imperative, or with a verb involving the notion of futurity. E. g.

Si in omnibus innocens fuero , quid mihi inimicitiae nocebunt ?	If I am (shall have been) innocent in everything, what harm can enmity inflict on me?
De Carthagine vereri nōn ante dēsinam , quam illam excisam cognōvērō .	I shall not cease to be afraid of Carthage, until I shall have heard of its destruction.
Morati melius erimus , quum didicerimus , quae natura desideret.	We shall be better men, when we shall have learnt what nature requires of us.
Respondēo ad ea , quae de tē ipso rogāro .	Reply to what I ask (shall have asked) with reference to your- self.
Dā mihi hoc, jam tibi maximam partem defensionis praecideris .	Grant me this one point, and you will have cut off the best part of your defence.
Ego de venditione villae meae nihil cogito , nisi quid, quod magis me delectet, invēnero .	I do not (shall not) think of the sale of my villa, unless I shall have found something that can afford me greater pleasure.

REMARKS.

1. The distinction expressed by the future perfect is always observed in Latin, and is frequently put where the English idiom substitutes the first future, the present, or the perfect. E. g. Ut sementem feceris, ita metes, As you have (shall have) sown, so you will reap. Si invēnērō, tecum comunicābo, If I find it (shall have found it), I will communicate it to you. And so frequently in conditional clauses, where the result is dependent on the previous fulfilment of a condition; as, si voluērō, si potuērō, si licuērūt, si placuērūt, si otium habuērō, where in English we commonly put the present or first future.

2. The future perfect is often elegantly put for the simple future, in order to impart an air of rapidity or certainty to the event. E. g. Ah, si pergis, abiĕro, If you proceed, I am off. Quid inventum sit, paulo post vidĕro, I shall see presently what has been found. Respirāro, si te vidĕro, I shall breathe again, if I have seen you. Pergrātum mihi fecĕris, si dedĕris operam, ut, &c., You will oblige me very much, if you see to it that, &c. Qui Antonium oppresserūt, is hoc bellum teter-rimum confecĕrit, He who puts down (shall first have put down) An-tonius, will put an end to this destructive war.*

SUBJUNCTIVE OF THE FUTURE PERFECT.

E. The subjunctive of the future perfect, like that of the simple future, is wanting. (Cf. Lesson LXXXI. F.) Its place is supplied by the perfect and pluperfect subjunctive. E. g.

Affirmo tibi, si hoc beneficium mihi tribuĕris, mē quamcūque pōssim grātiam tibi relatūrum. I assure you, that, if you shall have done me this favor, I shall render you all the thanks in my power.

Affirmābat mihi, si illud benefi-cium ipsi tribuĭssem, sē quam-cūque pōsset grātiam mihi relatūrum. I assured you, that, if you should have done me that favor, I would render you all the thanks in my power.

Quis hoc nōn perspĕcit, praeclāre nobiscum actum iri, si pōpulus Rōmānus istius unius supplicio contētus fuĕrūt? Who does not see, that we shall fare nobly, if the Roman people shall have been contented by the punishment of this one individual.

De Rosciōrum audaciā tūm mē dictūrum pollicĭtus sūm, quum Erūcii crimina diluĭssem. I have promised to discourse on the audacity of the Roscii, as soon as I shall have refuted the charges preferred against Erucius.

I shall have written my letters before you return. Epistolās mēas, āntequam redibis, scripsero.

When I shall have paid for my horse, I shall have but ten florins left. Quum ēqui prĕtium persolvero, decem tantum florēnos reliquos habēbo.

What will you do when you shall have dined? Quid faciēs, quum coenāveris?

EXERCISE 154.

When will you go to Italy? — I shall go as soon as I have learnt Italian. — When will your brothers go to Germany? — They will go thither as soon as they know German. — When will they learn it? — They will learn it when they have found a good master. — How much money shall we have left when we have paid for our horse? — When we have paid for it we shall have only a hundred crowns left. — Have you told my brother that I have been obliged to sell the carriage? — I have told him so. — Have you written to the same man to whom my father wrote? — I have not written to the same, but to another. — Have they already answered you? — Not yet, but I hope to receive a letter next week. — Have you ever seen such a person? — I have never seen such a one. — Have you already seen our church? — I have not seen it yet. — Where does it stand? — It stands outside the town. — If you wish to see it, I will go with you in order to show it to you. — Who is there? — It is I. — Who are those men? They are foreigners who wish to speak to you. — Of what country are they? — They are Americans. — Where have you been since I saw you? — We sojourned long on the sea-shore, until a ship arrived, which brought us to France. — Will you continue your narrative? — Scarcely had we arrived in France when we were taken to the king, who received us very well (nos benigne excepit), and sent us back to our country. — Whom are you looking for? — I am looking for my little brother. — If you wish to find him, you must go into the garden, for he is there. — The garden is large, and I shall not be able to find him, if you do not tell me in which part (quā in parte) of the garden he is. — He is sitting under the large tree under which we were sitting yesterday. — Now I shall find him.

EXERCISE 155.

Why do your children not live in France? — They wish to learn English, that is the reason why they live in England. — Why do you sit near the fire? — My hands and feet are cold, that is the reason why I sit near the fire. — What do the people live upon that live on the sea-shore? — They live upon fish alone. — Why will you not go a hunting any more? — I hunted yesterday the whole day, and I killed nothing but an ugly bird, that is the reason why I shall not go a hunting any more. — Why do you not eat? — I shall not eat before I have a good appetite. — Why does your brother eat so much? — He has a good appetite, that is the reason he eats so much. — If you have read the books which I lent you, why do you not return them to me? — I intend reading them once more, that is the reason why I have not yet returned them to you; but I shall return them to you as soon as I have read them a second time. — Why did you not bring me my clothes? — They were not made, therefore I did not bring them; but I bring them to you now; here they are. — You have learnt your lesson; why has your sister not learnt hers? — She has taken a walk with my mother, that is the reason why she has not learnt it; but she will learn it to-morrow. — When will you correct my exercises? — I will correct them when you bring me those of your sister. — Do you think you have made mistakes in them? — I do not know. — If you have made mistakes, you have not studied your lessons well; for the lessons must be learnt well, if you wish to have them free from errors. — It is all the same, if you do not correct them (for) me to-day, I shall not learn them before to-morrow (ante diem crastinum non discam). — You must make no mistakes in your exercises, for you have all you want to write them without any errors.

Lesson LXXXIII. — PENSUM OCTOGESIMUM TERTIUM.

OF THE CONSECUTIO TEMPORUM.

A. The tenses of the indicative mood may be connected with each other, according to the requirements of the speaker, and are subject to no limitation. E. g. Ego, qui heri ludēbam, hodie scribo, cras mane autem, quum litteras ad te dēdēro, in urbem proficiscar. But in dependent clauses, introduced by a conjunction or a pronoun, the tense of the subjunctive is always determined by that of the verb in the leading clause. This order or connection of tenses is called consecutio temporum, and is subject to the following laws: —

I. The Present, the Perfect Definite, and the Future Tenses of the leading clause, are followed by the Present or Perfect Subjunctive in the dependent clause. E. g.

Vídeo (vidi, vidébo, vidēro), quid agas or quid egēris. I see (have seen, shall see, shall have seen) what you are doing, or what you have done.

Dic mihi, quid agat or quid egērit. Tell me what he is doing, or what he has done.

Rógo (rogavi, rogábo, rogávero), ut scribas. I beg you (have begged, shall beg, shall have begged you) to write.

Hoc ideo facio (feci, faciám, fecēro), ut intēlligas. I do (have done, shall do, shall have done) this, in order that you may understand.

Nemo ita caecus est (fuit, erit, fuerit), ut nōn intēlligat or intēllixerit. No one is (has been, will be, will have been) so blind, as not to comprehend or to have comprehended.

Nemo est (fuit, erit, fuerit), qui nōn intēlligat or intēllixerit. There is (has been, will be, will have been) no one, but what comprehends or has comprehended.

Nemo est, qui nōn intellecturus sit. There is no one, but what will comprehend.

II. The Imperfect, the Perfect Indefinite, and the Pluperfect of the leading clause, are followed by the Imperfect or Pluperfect Subjunctive in the dependent clause. E. g.

Vidēbam (vidi, vidēram), quid ageret or egisset. I was seeing (I saw, had seen), what he did, what he had done.

Rogābam (rogavi, rogāvēram), ut scribēres. I begged (did beg, had begged) you to write.

Hoc ideo faciēbam (feci, fecēram), ut intēlligeres. I was doing (I did, had done) this, that you might understand.

Nemo ita caecus erat (fuit, fuerat), ut nōn intēlligeret or intēllixisset. No one was (had been) so blind, as not to comprehend or to have comprehended.

Nemo erat (fuit, fuerat), qui nōn intēlligeret or intēllixisset. There was (had been) no one, but what comprehended or had comprehended.

Nemo erat, qui nōn intellecturus esset. There was no one, but what would comprehend.

NOTE. — The dependent clauses in which this construction occurs are, — a) those containing an indirect question; b) those introduced by ut or ne; c) those introduced by a relative pronoun, or by one of the relative conjunctions quo, quin, quominus, &c. The following examples will illustrate this still further: —

Quaeritur, Corinthiis bellum indicamus, an nōn. The question is, whether we shall declare war against the Corinthians, or not.

Quaesivi, écquis esset ventûrus.	I inquired, whether any one was about to come.
Difficile dictu est, útrum hóstes mágis virtútem ejus pugnántes tímuerint, an mansuetúdinem victi diléxerint.	It is difficult to say, whether his enemies dreaded his valor more in battle, than they cherished his clemency after being conquered.
Tâ hortor, ut oratiónes méas studiósé légas.	I exhort you to read my orations carefully.
Obsecro vós, ut diligénter attendátis.	I beseech you to attend diligently.
Míhi opus est, ut lávem.	It is necessary for me to wash.
Equidem véllem, ut aliquándo redíres.	I could wish, that you might return at last.
In eo érat, ut in múros eváderet miles.	The soldier was on the point of escaping within the walls.
Mê obsecras, ne oblivíscar vigiláre.	You conjure me, not to forget to watch.
Timóleon orávit ómnes, ne id fúcérent.	Timoleon requested them all, not to do that.
Decrêvit senátus, ut cónsul vídêret, ne quíd respública detriménti cáperet.	The senate decreed, that the consul should see that the republic sustained no injury.
Ex his delécti Dêlphos deliberátam míssi súnt, qui consúlêrent Apóllinem.	A select number of these were sent to Delphi, for the purpose of consulting Apollo.
Stúlti súmus, qui Drúsum cum Clódio conférre auleámus.	We are fools for venturing to compare Drusus with Clodius.
Teníri nón potúi, quín declarárem.	I could not be prevented from declaring.
Níhil impêdit, quo mínus id, quód máxime placeat, fícere possimus.	Nothing prevents us from being able to do what we like best.

REMARKS.

1. The tenses, which may thus enter into connection with each other, are called similar tenses. Similar are,—a) the present, the perfect definite, the futures, and the periphrastic tenses in sim and fuërim; b) the imperfect, the perfect indefinite, the pluperfect, and the periphrastic tenses in essem and fuissem. Tenses, of which one belongs to the first, and the other to the second of these classes, are called dissimilar; as, the present and the imperfect, &c.

2. When, in historical narration, the present tense is used instead of the perfect indefinite, it is sometimes followed by the present and sometimes by the imperfect or pluperfect subjunctive. E. g. Scribit (= scripsit) ad quosdam Melienses, ut ea vasa perquirant, He writes (wrote) to certain inhabitants of Malta, to inquire after those vases. Nulli, quid scriptum esset, enunciat (= enuntiavit), He discloses (disclosed) to no one what had been written. Ad propinquum suum scribit (= scripsit), ut iis, qui a Verre venissent, responderet, He writes to his relative to reply to those who had come from Verres.

3. The present indicative is followed by the imperfect subjunctive, when it is intended to convey the idea of duration in the past. E. g. Hujus praecepti tanta vis, tanta sententia est, ut ea non homini cuiquam, sed Delphico deo tribueretur, The force and moral weight of this injunction are so great, that it was attributed not to any man, but to the Delphic deity. Sciōte, oppidum esse in Sicilia nullum, quo in oppido non isti delecta mulier ad libidinem esset, Know, then, that there is not a town in Sicily in which this fellow had not an object of his lust.

4. The imperfect or pluperfect indicative may be followed by the perfect subjunctive, when the result of a past action is represented as extending into the present. E. g. Ardēbat autem Hortensius cupiditate dicendi sic, ut in nullo unquam flagrantius studium vidērim, Hortensius was so fond of speaking, that (up to this time) I have never witnessed a more ardent passion in any one.

5. The perfect definite requires the imperfect subjunctive, whenever it is intended to represent the action as in operation, and not merely as a result. E. g. Quoniam, quae subsidia novitatis habēres, et habere posses, exposui, nunc de magnitudīne petitiōnis dicam, Having shown what resources you have, or can have, I will now speak of the importance of the demand. Adduxi enim hominem, in quo satisfacere extēris nationibus possētis, I have produced a man, through whom you can satisfy the demands of foreign nations.

6. The imperfect and perfect indefinite are sometimes followed by the present subjunctive, to denote that the contents of the dependent clause are not limited to the time of the leading verb, but universally applicable. E. g. Nesciebat, quid sit philosophia, He did not know what philosophy is (i. e. was and still is). Ad priores conditiones nihil additum (est), Africano praedicante, neque Romanis, si vincantur, animos minui, neque, si vincant, secundis rebus inolescere, No additions were made to the former conditions, Africanus declaring, that the Romans neither lost their courage when conquered, nor ever grew insolent in their success when victorious.

7. When the verb of a subordinate clause depends upon an infinitive, its tense is determined as follows :—

a) The present infinitive is followed by the tense required by the verb, on which the infinitive depends. E. g. Incipite deinde mirari, cur pauci jam vestram suscipiant causam, Begin then to wonder why so few now defend your cause. Ipsē metuere incipies, ne innocenti periculum facessēris, You will yourself begin to be afraid of having accused an innocent man. Praefixerat his, ut parati essent facere, quod ipsum vidissent, He had directed them beforehand to be ready to do whatever they might see himself do.

b) The perfect infinitive is commonly followed by the imperfect or pluperfect subjunctive, but when it represents the perfect definite, sometimes also by the present or perfect. E. g. Satis mihi multa verba fecisse videor, quare esset hoc bellum necessarium, I think I have said enough to show why this war is necessary. Nisi docet, ita se possēdisse, ut nec vi, nec clam, nec precario possēderit, Unless he shows that he has taken possession in such a manner, as to have employed neither force nor secrecy nor entreaty.

8. Dissimilar tenses sometimes occur in the same construction, with different shades of signification. E. g. Summa difficultate rei frumentarii affecto exercitu . . . usque eo, ut complures dies milites frumento caruerint, et extremam famem sustentarent, nulla tamen vox est ab iis audita, Although the army labored under the greatest difficulty in procuring its necessary supplies, to such an extent, that for several days the soldiers had no corn and were famishing, yet not a word of discontent was heard from them.

She is rather tall.	Grandiúscula est.
It is rather far.	Longiúsculum est.
Was my hat hanging on the nail ?	Pendebátne de clávo píleus méus ?
It was hanging on it.	Sáne quídem, pendēbat.
Who has hung the basket on the tree.	Quis cōrbem suspendit árbōri (de árbore) ?
No one.	Némo.
The thief has been hanged.	Fūr est patíbulo affixus (árbori infelici suspēsus est).

I hang my coat on the nail.	Ēgo tógam méam clávo (de clavo) suspéndo.
You are breaking this man's heart.	Péctus hujúsce vúlneras.
The basket.	Corbis, is, f. & m.; dim. corbúla, ae, f.

EXERCISE 156.

How is your father? — Ho is only so so. — How is your patient? — He is a little better to-day than yesterday. — Is it long since you saw your brothers? — I saw them two days ago. — How were they? — They were very well. — How art thou? — I am tolerably well. — How long has your brother been learning German? — He has been learning it only three months. — Does he already speak it? — He already speaks, reads, and writes it better than your cousin, who has been learning it these five years. — Is it long since you heard of my uncle? — It is hardly three months since I heard of him. — Where was he staying then? — He was staying at Berlin, but now he is in London. — Do you like to speak to my uncle? — I do like very much to speak to him, but I do not like him to laugh at me. — Why does he laugh at you? — He laughs at me, because I speak badly. — Why has your brother no friends? — He has none, because he criticises everybody. — What do you get your livelihood by? — I get my livelihood by working. — Does your friend get his livelihood by writing? — He gets it by speaking and writing. — Do these gentlemen get their livelihood by working? — They do not get it by doing anything, for they are too idle to work. — Do you see what he has done? — I do see it. — Did he know that you had arrived? — He did not know it. — Have I advised you to write? — You have not asked me. — Is any one so blind, as not to understand that? — No one is so blind. — Did he exhort us to read his book? — He did exhort us to read it diligently. — Was he on the point of (in eo, ut) escaping? — He was not. — He could not be prevented from escaping (evadére). — Nothing could prevent him from escaping.

Lesson LXXXIV. — PENSUM OCTOGESIMUM QUARTUM.

OF THE INDICATIVE MOOD.

A. By the Indicative Mood the speaker asserts the action or state expressed by the verb as an absolute existence or a positive fact. Hence this mood is used, —

I. In leading and subordinate clauses, to denote that something really takes place, has taken place, or will take place hereafter. E. g.

Nihil est amabilius virtute.

Nothing is worthier of esteem than virtue.

Omnia mutantur; nihil interit.

Everything changes; nothing is lost.

Ut völes më esse, ita éro.

I shall be what you desire me to be.

Éas léges, quas Cæsar recitávit, pronuntiávit, tñlit, nõs everténdas putábmus?

Shall we imagine, that the laws, which Cæsar has read, proclaimed, and enacted, are to be abolished?

Ecce bíbit árcus; plúet, crédo, hódie.

Behold the rainbow drinks (draws up the water), I think it will rain to-day.

Quám nõn ést fácilis vírtus!

How easy the practice of virtue is!

Ut sæpe súmma ingénia in ocúltis lótent!

How often the most distinguished talents lie buried in obscurity!

II. In direct questions, i. e. in those which require an immediate answer. E. g.

Cújus híc líber ést? — Méus.

Whose book is this? — Mine.

Quis hómo és? — Égo sum Pámphilus.

Who are you? — I am Pamphilus.

Únde déjéctus ést Cínna? — Ex úrbe.

From what place was Cinna expelled? — Out of the city.

Quis Aristídem nõn mórtuum díligit? — Nemo.

Who does not love Aristides, though dead? — No one.

REMARK. — In indirect questions, on the other hand, the verb is in the subjunctive. E. g. Dic míhi, cújus híc líber sit, Tell me whose book this is. Nescio, quis hómo sis, I do not know who you are. (Cf. Lesson LXXXVII. D.)

III. In conditional clauses, when the case is asserted as a real, and not as a hypothetical or doubtful one. E. g.

Póma ex arbóribus, si crúda súnt, ví avellúntur; si matúra et cócta, decídunt.

Unripe fruit is plucked from the trees by force; if ripe and mellow, it falls of its own accord.

Sí quis oriénte Caniculá nátus ést, in mári non moriétur.

If any one is born when the dog-star rises, he will not die at sea.

Ista véritas, etiámsi jucúnda nõn ést, míhi támen gráta ést.

This truth, although it is not a pleasant one, is nevertheless agreeable to me.

Qui pósum putáre më restitútum, sí dístrahor ab ús, per quós restitútus súm?

How can I consider myself restored, if I am distracted by those through whom I was restored?

Núllá aliá in civitáte, nísi in quá pópuli potéstas súmma ést, úllum domicílium hábet líbertas.

Liberty can have no abode in any state, except where the power of the people is supreme.

Égo, ni pūgna restitūtur, fortūnam cum omnibus, infāmiam sōlus sentiam. Unless the contest is renewed, I shall feel our misfortune in common with all, and the disgrace alone.

REMARK. — When the condition expressed by si and nisi is not a real, but merely a hypothetical one, the verb is in the subjunctive, on which see Lesson LXXXVI.)

PECULIAR USE OF THE INDICATIVE.

B. The Romans sometimes use the indicative in constructions in which the English idiom requires the subjunctive.

I. With verbs and expressions denoting ability, permission, duty, necessity, and the like, the present indicative is commonly put instead of the imperfect subjunctive, and the imperfect, the perfect indefinite, and the pluperfect indicative instead of the pluperfect subjunctive.

Such verbs are possum, licet, debeo, decet, oportet, necesse est; longum, aequum, par, consentaneum, satis, satius, melius, optimum est, erat, fuit, fuerat, and the like. So also the participle in dis with sum, eram, &c. In all these cases the present is rendered by the English might, could, would, or should, and the past tenses by might, could, would, or should have. E. g.

Pōssum pērsequi mūlta oblectamēta rērum rusticārum, sed &c.

I could enumerate the many pleasures of agriculture, but, &c.

O quām fācile erat orbis impērium occupāre!

O how easy it would have been to obtain the command of the entire world!

Perturbatiōnes animōrum pōtēram égo mōrbos appellāre; sed nōn conveniret ad omnia.

I might have called the disorders of the mind diseases, but the name would not have been applicable to all cases.

Oh, rēgem mē ésse opōrtuit.

I ought to have been king.

Jēcī fundamēta rēpublicae, sērius omnino, quām dēcuit.

I have laid the foundation of the republic, later doubtless, than I should have done.

Lībēros tuos institūere atque erudire debuisti.

You ought to have instructed and educated your children.

Hōc facere debēbas.

You should have done this.

Lōnge utilius fuit, angustias altitatus occupāre.

It would have been far better to occupy the defile.

Haec via tibi erat ingrediēda.

You should have entered upon this road.

Nōn Asiae nōnen objiciēdum Murēnae fuit, ex quā laus familiae constituta est.

Murena ought not to have been taunted with the name of Asia, from which the glory of his family is derived.

REMARKS.

1. In conditional sentences the historians sometimes likewise employ one of the past tenses of the indicative, instead of the more usual pluperfect subjunctive, to denote that something would have taken place under certain conditions. E. g. Jam fames quam pestilentia tristior erat (= fuisset), ni annonae foret subventum, The famine would have been a sadder calamity than the pestilence, unless additional supplies had been procured. Temere fecerat (= fecisset) Nerva, si adoptasset alium, Nerva would have acted inconsiderately, if he had adopted another.

2. In like manner, the imperfect indicative sometimes (though less frequently) stands instead of the imperfect subjunctive, when the verb of the conditional clause is of the same tense. E. g. Stultum erat (= esset) monēre, nisi fieret, It would be folly to admonish, unless your advice were heeded. Omnino supervacua erat (= esset) doctrina, si natūra sufficeret.

II. In general relative expressions, i. e. in those introduced by quisquis, quotquot, quicumque, quantuscunque, quantuluscunque, utut, utcunque, and other compounds of cunque, the verb is more commonly in the indicative than in the subjunctive. E. g.

Quidquid id est.

Whatever that may be.

Quoquo modo res se habet; or

However that may be.

Utcunque se habet res.

Quicumque is est.

Whoever he may be.

Quidquid habuit, quantumcunque fuit, illud totum habuit ex disciplina.

Whatever property or greatness he possessed, he owed it all to his discipline and skill.

Quem sors diorum cunque dabit, lucro appone.

Mark as clear gain, whatever day your destiny may grant you.

Quidquid ul est, timeo Danaos et dona ferentes.

Whatever that may be, I dread the Greeks, even when they offer presents.

Homines benévolos, qualescunque sunt, gráve est insequi contumelia.

It is hard to pursue benevolent men of any description with insults.

Utcunque sese res habet, tua est culpa.

However that may be, the fault is yours.

REMARK. — The words above enumerated are sometimes also followed by the subjunctive, especially among the later Roman authors. E. g. Quibuscunque verbis uti velis, Whatever words you may wish to employ. In quacunque parte sit titubatum, In whatever part there may have been a failure.

III. In clauses introduced by sive — sive, the verb is generally likewise in the indicative. E. g.

Sive tacēbis, sive loquēris, mihi perinde est.

Whether you are silent, or whether you speak, it is all the same to me.

Sive vërum est, sive fälsüm, mishi quidem ita renuntiätum ést. Whether it is true or false, it has been so reported to me.
Véniet témpus mórtis, et quidem celériter, et sive retractäbis, sive properäbis. The time of death will come, and that quickly, whether you resist it or accelerate it.

REMARK. — Instances of the subjunctive also occur. E. g. Nam sive illa defensione uti voluisses, sive häc, quä ulëris, condemnëris necesse est. For, whether you had intended to use that defence or the one you are using now, you must be condemned.

To doubt, to be uncertain. Dubitäre, dubitum or in dubio esse.
To doubt, question anything. { Dubitäre de aliquä re or aliquid.
I doubt whether. { Rem in dubium vocäre.
I doubt, whether . . . or. { Dubito, in dubio sum, num (with the subj.).
I do not doubt, that (but that). { Dubito, utrum . . . an (with the subj.).
Do you doubt that ? { Nön dubito, quin (with the subj.).
I do not doubt it. { Dubitäsne hoc ?
It is not to be doubted. { Vocäsne rem in dubium ?
What do you doubt ? { Nön dubito.
I doubt what that man has told me. { Rém in dubium nön voco.
I doubt whether he has arrived. { Dubitári nön pötest.
Who doubts that my father has left ? { Quid dubitas ?
I do not doubt but that he will come. { In dubium voco id, quod ille mishi narrävit.
He is sure that he will not come. { Dubito, num advenerit.
Who doubts that man is mortal ? { Quis dubitat, quin päter méus profectus sit ?
No one can question it. { Nön dubito, quin ventürus sit.
It is doubtful whether the judges or the lawyers are to blame. { Non dubito, eum ventürum esse.
I am inclined to, perhaps, probably. { Nön dubitat, quin nön ventürus sit.
I am inclined to give him the first place. { Quis dubitat, hominem mortälem esse ?
A man of consummate wisdom, and perhaps the most distinguished of them all. { Nemo rem in dubium vocäre possit.
It is perhaps enough. { Dubium ést, utrum júdices an juris-consúlti vituperändi sint.
To agree or consent to a thing. { Dubito an, haud scio an, nescio an (with the subj.).
Haüd scio (nescio) an satis sit.
Consentio, ire, sensi, sensum.
Convénit mishi (CUM ALIQUO DE ALIQUA RE).

To disagree, differ.	Discrepāre, dissentire.
We agree.	{ Convēnit inter nōs.
Peace has been agreed upon.	{ Nōs convēnimus.
	Pāx convēnit.
To admit, confess.	{ Fateor, ēri, fessus sum.
To concede, grant.	{ Confitēri (ALIQUID ALICUI).
	Concēdo, ēre, cessi, cessum (ALICUI ALIQUID).
To agree, or to compose a difference.	{ Compōnere. In gratiam redire.
	{ De controversiis transigere (ēgi, actum).
To become reconciled to one.	Cum aliquo in gratiam redire.
To consent (to do anything).	Consentire, assentiri (FACERE, REM FIERI, UT FIAT).
Did you agree about the price?	{ Convēnitne tibi eum eo de pretio?
We did agree.	{ Convēnitne tibi pretium?
	{ Convēnit mihi cum eo.
What did you agree upon?	{ Convēnit pretium.
We were agreed upon the safety of the republic.	Quā de re consensistis inter vōs?
Did you agree in praising him?	De reipublicae salutē consensimus.
We did not agree.	{ Vōs in sūlo laudādo consensistis?
	{ Nōn consensimus.
The age of Homer is not agreed upon.	{ Immo vērō dissensimus.
Do you consent to my doing that?	Super Homēri aetate nōn consentitur.
I do consent.	Consentiane, ut hoc faciā?
Do you confess (admit) that to be a fault?	Consentiane, ut hoc faciā?
I admit it.	Nōn dissēntio.
Do you confess your error?	Faterisne illud esse vitium?
I do confess it.	Fateor.
How much did you pay for that hat?	Confiterisne tuum errōrem?
I paid three dollars for it.	Confiteor.
At what price did he buy the horse?	Quātam pecūniam isto pro pileo solvisti?
He bought it for* five hundred dollars.	Trēs thalēros.
Did they compose their difference?	Quāti emit ille equum?
They have composed it.	(Emit eum) quingēntis thalēris.
They have become reconciled.	Transegerūntne de controversiis?
He has become reconciled to me.	Composuerunt et transegerunt.
	In grātiam inter sē redierunt.
	In grātiam inēcum rediit.

* "For" with the price is not expressed, according to Lesson LXXI. A.

To wear (clothes, a ring, &c.).	Gēro, ěre, gessi, gestum. Gestāre (VESTEM, ANULUM, &c.). Indūtum esse veste, &c.
To wear a coat, a cloak.	Amictum esse togā, pallio.
To wear a sword.	Cinctum esse gladio.
Did he wear black or white clothes?	Ūtrum vēstem gerēbat nīgram an cāndidam?
He wore white ones.	Cāndidam gerēbat.
Had he boots or shoes on?	Caligisne an cālceis indūtus erat?
He had shoes on.	Indūtus erat cālceis.
He habitually wore a gem on his finger.	Gestābat gēmmam dīgīto.
The custom, habit.	Consuetudo, ĩnis, f.; mōs, gen. mōris, m.

He has been able.	Pōtuit.
I cannot get anything to eat.	Ēgo, quōd ēdam, comparāre nēqueo.
He has acquired wealth, honor, and influence.	Divītiās, honōres, auctoritatēque acquīsitvit.

EXERCISE 157.

What have you gained that money by? — I have gained it by working. — What have you done with your wine? — I have spilt it on the table. — Where is yours? — It is on the large table in my little room; but you must not drink any of it, for I must keep it for my father who is ill. — Are you ready to depart with me? — I am so. — Why are you laughing at that man? — I do not intend to laugh at him. — I beg of you not to do it, for you will break his heart if you laugh at him. — Why have they hanged that man? — They have hanged him, because he has killed somebody. — Have they hanged the man who stole a horse (from) your brother? — They have punished him, but they have not hanged him: they only hang highway-men in our country. — Where have you found my coat? — I found it in the blue room; it was hanging on a nail. — Will you hang my hat on the tree? — I will hang it thereon? — Do you doubt what I am telling you? — I do not doubt it. — Do you doubt what that man has told you? — I do doubt it, for he has often told me what was not true. — Why have you not kept your promise? — I know no more what I promised you. — Did you not promise us to take us to the concert (on) Thursday? — I confess that I promised you; but the concert did not take place. — Does your brother confess his fault? — He does confess it. — What does your uncle say to that letter? — He says that it is written very well; but he admits that he has been wrong in sending it to the captain. — Do you confess your fault now? — I confess it to be a fault. — Have you at last bought the horse which you wished to buy? — How could I buy the horse, if I am unable to procure money? — Unless you pay me what you owe me, I shall not be able to go. — Ought I to have gone into the country yesterday? — You ought to have done it. — You ought to have educated and instructed your son. — This letter ought to have been written by you. — O how easy it would have been to learn your lesson! — It would have been far better to remain at home. — Do you know that man? — Whoever he may be, I do not wish to know him. — However that may be, you have not done your duty (officium tuum non servavisti). — Whether you go or stay, it is all the same to me. — I shall have to write, whether I am sick or well.

Lesson LXXXV.—PENSUM OCTOGESIMUM QUINTUM.

OF THE FORM OF SENTENCES.

A. In respect to their form, sentences are either absolute or conditioned, positive, negative, or interrogative. (Cf. Lessons LXXXIV. and LXXXVI.)

I. A positive or affirmative proposition asserts the existence of a state in a given subject as present, past, or future by means of a finite verb only. Its force may be augmented by an adverb.

Adverbs of this class are called adverbia asserendi. The principal are nae, surely; sâne, profecto, really; utîque, to be sure; vêro, in truth, truly; to which add the (generally) ironical scilicet, videlicet, nimirum, nempe, and quippe, of course, certainly, forsooth. E. g.

Nae illi vehementer errant, si illam meam pristinam lenitatem perpetuam sperant futuram.
Terra profecto mundi pars est.

They are certainly very much mistaken, if they expect that former lenity of mine to be perpetual.

The earth is doubtless a part of the universe.

Estne ipse an non est? — Is est, certe is est, is est profecto.
Illud scire utique cupio.

Is it he himself or not? — It is he, certainly it is, it is the very man.

I desire to know that at all events.

Ego vero cupio, te ad me venire.
Ego istius pecudis consilio scilicet aut praesidio uti volebam?

I certainly wish you to come to me.

Did I forsooth desire to use the advice or help of a beast like this?

Hic de nostris verbis errat videlicet.

He is manifestly mistaken about our language.

Demosthenes apud alios loqui videlicet didicerat, non multum ipse secum.

Demosthenes had learnt to speak with others, I suppose, not much by personal effort privately.

Non omnia nimirum eidem dii dedere.

The gods have certainly not granted everything to one man.

Quos ego orno? — Nempe eos, qui ipsi sunt ornamenta rei publicae.

Whom do I honor? Those certainly who are themselves the ornaments of the republic.

Sol Democrito magnus videtur, quippe homini erudito, in geometriâque perfecto.

The sun seems large to Democritus, he being a learned man and perfect in geometry.

II. A negative sentence asserts the non-existence of a state in the subject, and is thus directly opposed to an affirmative one.

Negative sentences are formed by means of the adverbs non, not; haud, not at all; minime, by no means; ne, lest, that not. Also by nemo, nullus, nihil, nunquam, nondum, nec, neque, &c. To these add the negative verbs nescio, nôlo, nêgo, and vêlo. E. g.

Nives in alto mari non cadunt.

Snow does not fall on the main sea.

Pausinias haud ita magnâ manu Graeciâ fugatus est.

Pausanias was put to flight by not so very large a Grecian band.

Potestis efficere, ut male moriar: ne moriar, non potestis.

You can make me die a cruel death, but you cannot prevent my dying.

Ita sum afflictus, ut nemo unquam.

I am so distressed as no one ever was before.

Nōn ūquam alias ante tātus tēror senātum invāsit.	Never at any time before did such a terror invade the senate.
Nemo vir magnus sine aliquo af-flātu divino ūquam fuit.	There never was a great man without a certain divine enthusiasm.
Epicūrus negat, ūllum esse tēmpus, quō sapiens nōn beātus sit.	Epicurus denies that there is any time at which a wise man is not happy.
Flētum duodēcim tabulæ in funēribus adhiberi vetuerunt.	The twelve tables prohibited the practice of wailing at funerals.

III. When two negations occur in the same sentence, the first or emphatic one generally destroys the second.

Such are non nemo, some one ; non nihil, something ; non nunquam, sometimes ; non nisi, not except, i. e. only ; non ignoro, I know very well ; non possum non loqui, I cannot but speak. So also nemo non, every one ; nihil non, everything ; nullus non, each, every ; nunquam non, always ; nusquam non, everywhere. E. g.

Hōstis est in ūrbe, in fōro ; nōn nemo etiam in illo sacrārio rei publicæ, in ipsa, inquam, cūriā nōn nemo hōstis est. The enemy is in the city, in the forum ; there is an enemy even in the sanctuary of the republic ; in the senate-house itself, I say, there is an enemy.

Mihi liber esse nōn videtur, qui nōn aliquādo nihil agit. He does not seem to me to be a free man, who is not sometimes disengaged from business.

Nōn sūm nēcūsus, quāto periculo vivam in tantā multitudine improborum. I am not unaware of the great danger in which I live, in the midst of such a multitude of rascals.

Nōn ūi nēmīni, sed nōn sēmpēr ūni parere voluerunt. It was not their wish to obey no one, but not perpetually the same individual.

Qui mortem in malis pōnit, nōn potest eam nōn timere. He who considers death an evil cannot avoid fearing it.

Nemo potest nōn beatissimus esse, qui in se ūno sua pōnit omnia. No one can avoid being the happiest man in the world, who makes everything depend upon himself alone.

Athenienses Alcibiādem nihil nōn efficere posse dūcebant. The Athenians thought that Alcibiades could do everything.

Nihil agere animus nōn potest. The mind cannot be inactive.

Alexādro nullius pūgnæ nōn secūda fortūna fuit. Alexander had fortune in his favor in every battle fought by him.

Diūtius nescire nōn possum. I can be ignorant no longer.

Nusquam esse nōn possunt. They cannot be nowhere (= they must be somewhere).

INTERROGATIVE SENTENCES.

B. A sentence becomes interrogative, when the speaker asks another person for information, for instruction, or assent to his opinion. A sentence of this kind is complete only in connection with the answer.

I. If the inquiry is made merely for information, the emphatic word is put at the beginning, and the expected answer is "yes" or "no." If assent is required, then the answer to a positive inquiry is "no," and to a negative one "yes." E. g.

Scis Appium censorem hic ostenta facere?	Do you know that Appius, the censor, is doing wonders here?
Nun patrem ego te nomen, ubi tu tuam me appelles filiam?	Shall I not call you father, when you call me your daughter?
En inquam cuiquam contumeliosius audistis factam injuriam, quam haec est mihi?	Did ye ever hear of an injustice practised upon any one more insolently, than this is upon me?
Quid? Si te rogavero aliquid, non respondēbis?	What? If I have asked you anything, will you not reply?
Infelix est Fabricius, quod rus suum fodit? — Non.	Is Fabricius unhappy, because he digs his farm? — No.
Non vobis videor cum aliquo declamatore disputare? — Etiam.	Do I not seem to you to be disputing with some declaimer? — Yes.

II. Questions requiring a more definite explanation or assent are introduced by interrogative pronouns, adjectives, and adverbs.

Such are quis, qui, who? quid, what? quantus, how great? quot, how many? quod, which, what (of a certain number)? quālis, what kind of? quoties, how many times? quam, ut, how? quando, when? ubi, where? quo, whither? quā, which way? unde, whence? To these add cur, why? quare, wherefore? quā, or quomodo, how? quidni, why not? &c. E. g.

Quis homo est? — Ego sum Pamphilus.	Who is the man? — I am Pamphilus.
Qui status, quod discrimen, quae fuerit in re publica tempestas illa, quis nescit?	Who does not know, what a state of things, what a danger, what a stormy time that was in the republic?
Heus, ecquis in vīlā est? Ecquis hoc recludit?	Holla! Is there any one in the house? Is any one opening the door?
Quālis est istorum oratio?	What is the character of the language used by these?
Quālis oratoris et quānti hominis in dicendo putas esse, historiam scribere?	What sort of an orator, and how great a man in the use of language, do you suppose it requires to write a history?
Unde iste amor tam improvisus ac tam repentinus?	Whence this love of yours so unexpected and so sudden?
Cur Africanum domestici parietes non texerunt?	Why did his domestic walls not protect Africanus?
Deus falli qui potest?	How can the Deity be deceived?
Quin, quod est ferendum, fers?	Why do you not bear what has to be borne?
Quidni possim?	Why should I not be able?

III. Questions in Latin are frequently modified by particles; such as ne, perhaps? then? nonne, not? is it not so? num, numne, then? an, or perhaps? anne, annon, or not?

To nonne and annon the expected answer is always "yes"; to num and an, commonly "no." The enclitic ne is always subjoined to the emphatic word. When this word is the verb of the sentence, the answer may be "yes" or "no"; when another word, it is commonly "no." E. g.

Pergisne eam artem illudere, in qua excellis ipse?

Ubi aut qualis sit tua mens?

Potésne dicere?

Quam rem agis? — Egône? Argentum cūdo, quod tibi dēo.

Salisne est, nobis vōs timēdos esse?

Ain' tū? — Mēn' rōgas? — Itāne (sc. est)?

Quid nunc? Quā spē ant quō consilio hūc inus? Quid cōēptas, Thrāso? — Egône?

Nonne animadvērtis?

Num quīdnam, inquam, nōvi?

Num negāre aūdes?

Nūquid dūas habētis patrias?

Ecquid * sentitis, in quāto contēmtu vivātis?

Quid? Dēum ipsum nūne vidisti?

An quisquam pōtest sine perturbatione mēntis irisci?

An est ūllum majus malum turpitudine?

Anne est intus Pāmphilus?

An nōn dixi esse hoc futūrum?

An nōn est ōmnis mētus sērvitus?

Do you persist in deriding the very art in which you yourself excel?

Where or what is the nature of your mind? Can you tell?

What are you driving at? — I? I am coining silver, to give to you.

Is it not true, that you are to be feared by us?

Do you really say so? — Do you ask me? — Is it so?

What now? With what expectation or for what purpose do we come hither? What are you after, Thraso? — I?

Do ye not perceive?

Is there anything new, I say?

Do you dare to deny it?

Have you two native countries?

Do you perceive in what contempt you live?

What? Hast thou beheld the Deity himself?

Can any one be angry without agitation of the mind?

Is there any greater evil than dishonor?

Pamphilus is not in the house, is he?

Did I not say that this would be so?

Is not fear of every kind servitude?

IV. Questions, to which a mere "yes" or "no" is expected, may be answered, —

1. By the repetition of the emphatic word of the question, with or without the addition of an intensive word.

2. "Yes," by sane, etiam, vērūm, vērō, ūa, ūa est, ita enīn vērō.

3. "No," by non, non vērō, minīme, minīme vērō, nihil minus. E. g.

Estne pōpulus Collatinus in suā potestāte? — Est. Is the people of Collatia master of itself? — It is.

* After numquid and ecquid the answer is generally "no"; after ecquid, sometimes "yes."

Dāsne hōc nōbis ? — Dō sīne.	Do you concede this to us ? — I do.
Tūne nēgas ? — Nēgo hērcle vērō.	Do you deny it ? — I verily deny it.
Virtūtes nārro. — Mēas ? — Tūas.	I report virtues. — Mine ? — Yours.
Abīti Clitiphō. — Sōlus ? — Sōlus.	Clitiphō has left. — Alone ? — Alone.
Nōn irāta ēs ? — Nōn sūm irāta.	Are you not angry ? — I am not angry.
Ēstne frāter intus ? — Nōn ēst.	Is your brother in ? — He is not.
Nōn existimas, cādere in sapiētem aegritūdinem ? — Prorsus nōn arbitror.	You do not suppose that a philosopher can be affected by misfortune ? — I do not think it possible.
Haecce tūa dōmus ēst ? — Ita, inquam.	Is this your house ? — It is.
Fācies ? — Vērūm.	Shall you do it ? — Yes.
Visne sermōni rēliquo dēmū operam sedētes ? — Sīne quīdem.	Is it your wish that we attend to the rest of the discussion sitting ? — Certainly.
Cur nōn intrōeo in nōstram dōmum ? — Quid dōmū vēstram ? — Ita enim vērō.	Why do I not go into our house ? — What, into your house ? — Ay, to be sure.
Dic mihi, cūjum pēcus ? an Mōeliboēi ? — Nōn, vērūm Aegōnis.	Tell me, whose flock this is ? that of Maelibæus ? — No, but of Ægon.
Nōn ōpus est ? — Nōn hērcle vērō.	It is not necessary ? — No, by my troth, no.
An tū hōc nōn crēdis ? — Mīnime vērō.	Or do you not believe this ? — By no means.
An Gāllos existimātis hic versāri animo dēmissō utque hūmili ? — Nihil vērō minus.	Do you think the Gauls remain here humble and submissive ? — Far from it.

REMARKS.

1. Recte and optime are either "yes" or "no," according to the nature of the question. Scilicet, "doubtless," "to be sure," affirms ironically. E. g. Satin' salve ? dic mihi. — Recte, Are you very well ? tell me. — I am. Quid est ? — Nihil, recte perge, What is it ? — Nothing. Thucydidem, inquit, imitāmur. — Optime, We imitate Thucydides, he says. — Very well. Ego tibi irascērer ? tibi ego possem irasci ? — Scilicet ! I angry with you ? Could I be angry with you ? — Forsooth !

2. Imo or immo always corrects the preceding question, and either raises doubt or opposes something else to it (sometimes the very opposite). Hence it is sometimes "yes," "to be sure," and sometimes "no," "O no." E. g. Credisne ? — Imo certe (Ay, to be sure). — Non patria præstat omnibus officiis ? — Immo vērō (certainly). — Tenaxne est ? — Imo pertinax (Nay, even pertinacious). — Silebitne filius ?

Immo vero (on the contrary) obsecrabit patrem, ne faciat. — Dic, me orare, ut veniat. — Ad te? — Imo ad Philumenam (No, but to Philumena).

3. If the answer is given with a noun, adjective, or pronoun, its case must be the one required by the verb of the question. E. g. Cujus liber est? — Caesaris. — Mene vis? — Te. Quanti emisti? — Parvo.

DISJUNCTIVE QUESTIONS.

C. I. An interrogative sentence may be composed of two or more members, in such a manner that one excludes the other. Such questions are called disjunctive or double, and are of two kinds, viz. :—

1. The second member is simply the negation of the first. E. g. Is ambition a virtue, or none (i. e. or is it not a virtue)?

2. The second member contains another question opposed to the first. E. g. Has he conquered, or you (i. e. or have you conquered)? If, in the answer to a double question, one of the cases is affirmed, the other is denied, and vice versa. E. g. It is not a virtue. He has conquered, and not you.

II. The particles employed in such disjunctive questions are as follows :—

1. The first member is either introduced by utrum, num, — ne, or stands without any particle.

2. The “or” of the second member is generally an, but when the first member is without a particle, the enclitic ne may take the place of an. When the question contains more than two members, the formula is utrum, &c. . . . an an, &c.

3. The “or not” of the second member is annon (or an non), and more rarely necne.

The use of these particles gives rise to five different formulas for disjunctive questions. They are as follows :—

utrum,	utrumne	—	an,	anne,	annon.
num,	numquid	—	an,	annon.
— ne		—	an,	annon.
—		—	an,	annon.
—		—	— ne,	necne.

EXAMPLES.

Num tábulas hábet, annon?	Has he the pictures, or not?
Utrum ánimos sociórum ab rê públicâ abalienábas, án nón?	Did you alienate the minds of our allies from the republic, or not?
Ísne est, quém quaéro, annon?	Is it he whom I am looking for, or not?
Súnt hæc túa vérba, nécne?	Are these your words, or not?
Dicam huic, án nón dicam?	Shall I tell him, or shall I not tell?

Ūtrum igitur hās cōrporis, an Pythāgorae tibi mālīs vires ingēnii dūri?

Which would you then rather have, physical strength like this, or the intellectual powers of Pythagoras?

Ūtrum tándem perspicuísne dúbīa aperiúntur, an dúbīis perspicua tollúntur?

Are doubtful things elucidated by those that are clear, or are the clear corrected by the doubtful?

Nūmquid dúas habētis pátrias, an ést illa pátria commúnis?

Have you two countries, or is that your common country?

Aristóteles ipséne érrat, an álios vult érrāre?

Is Aristotle himself mistaken, or does he wish others to be so?

Récto itinere duxísti exércitum ad hóstes, an per anfráctus viárū?

Did you march the army directly against the enemy, or by a circuitous route?

Ūtrum hóc tū párum commeminísti, an égo nōn sátis intellexi, an mutásti senténtiam?

Do you not recollect this very well, or did I not sufficiently comprehend it, or have you changed your opinion?

Romámne vénio, an híc máneo, an Arpinum fúgio?

Shall I go to Rome, or remain here, or flee to Arpinum?

REMARKS.

1. Ūtrum indicates at the very outset that a second question is to follow. In direct double questions beginning with num, the first member is expected to be denied, and the second affirmed. (Cf. Lesson LXXXV. B. III.) In double questions otherwise introduced, either member may be affirmed or denied.

2. The ne of the second member is almost entirely confined to indirect questions. E. g. Sine sciam, captiva matris in castris tuis sim, I wish to know whether I am a captive or your mother in your camp. Albus aternus fueris, ignorat, He knows not whether you were white or black. On the use of these particles in indirect disjunctive questions generally, see Lesson LXXXVII. D.

3. When "or" introduces no second question, but only another word of the same question, it is expressed by aut. E. g. Tibi ego aut tu mihi servus es? — Voluptas melioremne efficit aut laudabiliorem virum?

4. If the second member of a double question is introduced by the English "and not," the Romans put simply non. E. g. Ergo histrio hoc videbit in scena, non videbit vir sapiens in vita? Will the actor see this on the stage, and the philosopher not in life? Hujus vos animi monumenta retinebis, corporis in Italia nullum sepulcrum esse patiemini? Will you retain the monuments of his genius, and not suffer a sepulchre for his body in Italy?

EXERCISE 158.

Are you not surprised at what my friend has done? — I am much surprised at it. — At what is your son surprised? — He is surprised at your courage. — Are you sorry for having written to my uncle? — I am, on the contrary, glad of it. — At what art thou afflicted? — I am not afflicted at the happiness of my enemy, but at the death of my friend. — How are your brothers? — They have been very well for these few days. — Are you glad of it? — I am glad to hear that they are well. — Are you a Saxon? — No, I am a Prussian. — Do the Prussians like to learn French? — They do like to learn it. — Do the Prussians speak German as well as the Saxons? — The Saxons and the Prussians speak German well; but the Austrians do not pronounce it very well. — Which day of the week do the Turks celebrate (agere or festum habere)? — They celebrate Friday; but the Christians celebrate Sunday, the Jews Saturday, and the negroes their birthday (natalis, sc. dies). — Has your sister my gold ribbon? — She has it not. — Who has my large bottle? — Your sister has it. — Do you sometimes see your mother? — I see her often. — When did you see your sister? — I saw her three months and a half ago. — Who has my fine nuts? — Your good sister has them. — Has she also my silver forks? — She has them not. — Why does your brother complain? — He complains because his right hand aches. — Which bottle has your little sister broken? — She broke the one which my mother bought yesterday. — Have you eaten of my soup or of my mother's? — I have eaten neither of yours nor your mother's, but of that of my good sister. — Have you seen the woman that was with me this morning? — I have not seen her. — Has your mother hurt herself. — She has not hurt herself. — Have you a sore nose? — I have not a sore nose, but a sore hand. — Have you cut your finger? — No, my lady, I have cut my hand. — Will you give me a pen? — I will give you one. — Will you (have) this (one) or that (one)? — I will (have) neither. — Which (one) do you wish to have? — I wish to have that which your sister has. — Can you write with this pen? — I can write with it. — Shall you remain at home, or ride out or drive out? — I shall remain at home. — Has he washed his hands or his feet? — He had done both. — Has he learnt his lesson or not? — He has learnt it. — He has not learnt it. — You certainly are mistaken, if you suppose that you will be praised, unless you are assiduous.

Lesson LXXXVI. — PENSUM OCTOGESIMUM SEXTUM.

OF THE SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD.

A. By the subjunctive mood the speaker does not absolutely assert the existence of an action or state, but represents it as he conceives it, as dependent upon other circumstances, and as possible only in consequence of them. Hence this mood serves to express that which is contingent, conditional, or hypothetical; or, in general, that which may, can, might, could, would, or should be or be done.

The subjunctive is used more extensively in Latin than in English, and is often put where the latter idiom requires or prefers the indicative. It most commonly occurs in subjoined or dependent clauses, as its name implies, but frequently also as the leading verb of an independent clause.

THE SUBJUNCTIVE IN HYPOTHETICAL PROPOSITIONS.

B. An hypothetical sentence is composed of two members, called the protasis and apodosis. The former contains the condition, and is commonly introduced by one of the conjunctions si, nisi, etsi, etiamsi, or tametsi; the latter denotes the inference or conclusion. The subjunctive may occur in both these members of an hypothetical proposition, and represents an action or state as the possible consequence of other circumstances; in other words, that something would take place or would have taken place, if or unless something else were so or had been so. In this use of the subjunctive (as conditionalis), the Latin language makes an important distinction between the present and the past tenses of that mood.

I. In the protasis of a hypothetical proposition, the imperfect and pluperfect subjunctive imply that the fact or reality does not or cannot correspond with the supposition made, and in the apodosis that something would be or would have been, if the fact supposed were or had been a real one. E. g.

Si sēper optima tenēre possēmus, haud sāne consilio multum egerēmus.	If we were always able to keep what is best, we surely would not stand in need of much deliberation.
Nōn possem vivere, nisi in litteris vivērem.	I could not live, unless I lived in letters.
Si Neptūnus, quod Thēseo promiserat, nōn fecisset, Thēseus filio Hippolyto nōn orbātus esset.	If Neptune had not done what he had promised Theseus, Theseus would not have lost his son Hippolytus.
Aurum et argentum, aēs, ferrum frustra natūra divina genuisset, nisi eādē docuisset, quemadmodum ad eōrum vēnas pervenirētur.	Divine Nature would have produced gold and silver, brass, iron, to no purpose, unless she at the same time had taught us how to get at their veins.
Nec tū, si Atheniēnsis esses, clārus unquam fuisses.	Nor would you ever have been a distinguished man, if you had been an Athenian.
Id, nisi hic in tuo rēgno essēmus, nōn tulissem.	We would not have submitted to that, unless we were here in your kingdom.
Nōn, si redisset filius, ei pater vēniā diceret?	If the son had returned, would not his father give him leave?
Haec, si, bis bina quot essent, dulcisset, certe nōn diceret.	If he knew how much twice two are, he would certainly not say this.

REMARKS.

1. The protasis and apodosis both generally contain either the imperfect or the pluperfect subjunctive. The imperfect, however, frequently takes the place of the pluperfect in one of the clauses, as in several of the preceding examples. When thus used, it serves to transfer a past action, partly at least, into the present time. E. g. Quod certe non fecisset, si suum numerum navilarum naves haberent (= habuissent), Which he would certainly not have done, if the ships had had (lit. were then possessed of) their usual complement of men. And in the apodosis: Cimbri si statim infesto agmine urbem petissent, grande discrimen esset (= fuisset), If the Cimbri had at once invaded the city, there would have been a desperate struggle.

2. The mood of the verb in the apodosis is sometimes the indicative instead of the subjunctive. (Cf. Lesson LXXXIV. A. III.) E. g. Quem hominem, si qui pudor in te fuisset, sine supplicio dimittere non debuisti, If there had been any shame left in you, you ought not to have dismissed the man without punishment. Quod si Pompeius prius esset hoc tempore, tamen erat mittendus, Even if Pompey were at this time a private man, it would still be necessary to send him. Jamque castra excindere parabant (= pararissent), ni Mucianus sextam legionem opposuisset. And now they would have already begun to destroy the camp, unless Mucianus had opposed the sixth legion to them. Praeclare viceramus (= vicissemus), nisi Lepidus recipisset Antonium. We would have won a signal victory, unless Lepidus had received Antony. This usage is confined chiefly to the pluperfect.

II. The present and perfect subjunctive in the protasis indicate that the reality either does, or at any rate may, correspond with the supposition made. The apodosis to such a clause then contains, either one of the same tenses of the subjunctive, or a tense of the indicative mood. E. g.

Memória minuitur, nisi eam exerceas, aut si sis naturā tardior.

Your memory grows weaker, unless you exercise it, or if you by nature are somewhat slow of comprehension.

Aequabilitatem vitae servare non possis, si aliorum virtutem imitans omittas tuam.

You cannot preserve consistency of life, if while imitating the virtues of others you neglect your own.

Dies deficiat, si velim numerare, quibus bonis male evenierit.

The day would fail me, if I wished to enumerate the good men that have suffered evil.

Si injuriæ non sint, haud sæpe auxilii egeas.

If there were no injuries (inflicted), you would not often stand in need of help.

Si existat hodie ab inferis Lycurgus, gaudeat murorum Spartaë ruinis.

If Lycurgus were to-day to rise from the dead, he might rejoice in the ruins of the walls of Sparta.

Sim imprudens, si plus potestem, quam homini a rerum naturā tribui potest.

I would be imprudent, if I demanded more than can be conceded to man from the nature of things.

Thucydidis orationes ego laudare soleo; imitare neque possim, si velim, nec velim fortasse, si possim.

I am accustomed to praise the orations of Thucydides, but imitate them I neither could, if I would, nor would I perhaps, if I could.

Si scieris aspidem occulte latere uspian, improbe feceris, nisi monueris alterum, ne assideat.

If (for example) you should know of an asp lying concealed anywhere, you would do wrong, if you did not caution another not to sit down there.

Nemo de nobis unus excellat; sin quis exstiterit, alio in loco et apud alios sit.

Let no one of our number excel alone; but if any one has won distinction, let him be among others and in another place.

Si a coronâ relictus sim, non quæm dicere.

If I am deserted by my audience, I cannot speak.

REMARKS.

1. From the above examples it will be perceived, that in conditional clauses the present and perfect subjunctive may generally be rendered by the corresponding tenses of the indicative, from which they differ but little. Sometimes, however, it is better to translate them by the imperfect or pluperfect subjunctive. In Latin, however, the distinctions, already laid down, respecting the different tenses of the subjunctive, are never disregarded, and the present tenses (i. e. the present and perfect) always imply the reality or possibility of the fact supposed, while the past tenses (i. e. the imperfect and pluperfect) represent it as wanting or impossible. E. g. Hæc si tecum patria loquatur, nonne impetrare debeat? If your country should thus talk to you (an event which the speaker considers possible), ought it not to obtain what it requires of you? But, Si universa provincia loqui posset, hæc voce uteretur, If the entire province could speak (an event which the speaker deems impossible), it would use this language towards you. And so in every instance of the kind.

2. When the clause introduced by nisi, nisi forte, or nisi vero stands as a correction of what has gone before, its verb is commonly in the indicative. E. g. Nemo fere saltat sobrius, nisi forte insanit, No one scarcely ever dances when he is sober, unless perchance he is insane. Erat autem nihil novi, quod scriberem, nisi forte hoc ad te putas pertinere, I have nothing new to write you, unless perhaps you consider this of importance to you. — On the Indicative after si, nisi, &c., generally, see Lesson LXXXIV. A. III.

Were he at any time to beat his dog.	{ Si aliquando canem suam percütëret (percütat).
If you were rich.	{ Si tû dives esses.
If he is not ill, why does he send for the physician?	{ Si æger non est, quid causae est, cur medicum accëssat?

Should you (= if you should) still receive my letter to-day, I beg you to call on me instantly.

EXERCISE 159.

Would you have money, if your father were here? — I should have some, if he were here. — Would you have been pleased, if I had had some books? — I should have been much pleased, if you had had some. — Would you have praised my little brother, if he had been good? — If he had been good, I should certainly not only have praised, but also loved, honored, and rewarded him. — Should we be praised, if we did our exercises? — If you did them without a fault, you would be praised and rewarded. — Would my brother not have been punished, if he had done his exercises? — He would not have been punished, if he had done them. — Would your sister have been praised, if she had not been skilful? — She would certainly not have been praised, if she had not been very skilful, and if she had not worked from morning until evening. — Would you give me something, if I were very good? — If you were very good, and if you worked well, I would give you a fine book. — Would you have written to your sister, if I had gone to Dresden? — I would have written and sent her something handsome, if you had gone thither. — Would you speak, if I listened to you? — I would speak, if you listened to me, and if you would answer me. — Would you have spoken to my mother, if you had seen her? — I would have spoken to her, and have begged of her to send you a handsome gold watch if I had seen her. — If the men should come, you would be obliged to give them something to drink. — If he could do this, he would do that. — A peasant having seen that old men used spectacles to read, went to an optician and asked for a pair. The peasant then took a book, and having opened it, said the spectacles were not good. The optician put another pair of the best which he could find in his shop upon his nose; but the peasant being still unable to read, the merchant said to him: "My friend, perhaps you cannot read at all?" "If I could," said the peasant, "I should not want your spectacles." — I have always flattered myself, my dear brother, that you loved me as much as I love you; but I now see, that I have been mistaken. I should like to know why you went a walking without me? — I have heard, my dear sister, that you are angry with me, because I went a walking without you. — I assure you that, had I known that you were not ill, I should have come for you; but I inquired at your physician's about your health, and he told me that you had been keeping your bed the last eight days.

Lesson LXXXVII. — PENSUM OCTOGESIMUM SEPTIMUM.

THE SUBJUNCTIVE IN INDEPENDENT PROPOSITIONS.

A. The present and perfect subjunctive are frequently used independently in a potential sense, and rendered by the English may, can, &c. In this construction the perfect is generally equivalent to the present. E. g.

*Forsitan quaerâtis.
Quis dubitet?*

You may perhaps inquire.
Who can doubt?

Velim (nōlin, mālīm) sic existimes.

I wish you to (I do not wish you to, I would rather you would) think so.

Nemo istud tibi concēdat.

No one can concede this to you.

Forſitan témere fecerim.

I may perhaps have acted rashly.

Hic quærat quispiam, cuiusnam causā tāta rerum molitio facta sit.

Here some one may inquire, on whose account so great exertions were made.

Ita facillime sine invidiā laudem inveniās et amicos pāres.

You may thus easily win glory without any envy, and gain friends.

Faveas tū hosti? bonorum spēm virtutēque debūles? et te consulārem, aut senatōrem, aut dēnique civem putes?

Can you favor the enemy? Can you deject the hope and courage of the patriotic? and still consider yourself a man of consular rank, or a senator, or even a citizen?

At nōn historiā cēssērim Græcis, nec oppōnere Thucydidi Sallustium vērear.

But still I cannot surrender the palm in history to the Greeks, nor am I afraid to oppose Sallust to Thucydides.

Hoc sine dubitatione confirmāverim, eloquentiam rēm esse omnium difficillimam.

I can assert this without any hesitation, that eloquence is the most difficult of all things.

REMARKS.

1. The use of the present subjunctive instead of the perfect is an energetic expression, by which an unfinished action is represented as already completed. It is confined chiefly to the active form of verbs, but sometimes also occurs in the passive. E. g. Ne illi quidem se nobis merito prætulērint gloriatique sint, Not even they can justly call themselves better than us, and glory in it.

2. The imperfect subjunctive is rarely used in this potential sense, except where the idea of unreality or impossibility is to be conveyed. Thus of wishes to which no fulfilment is (or can be) expected: Vellem, I could wish; nollem, I should be unwilling; mallet, I should rather wish. To these add the second and third persons singular of dico, pūto, crēdo, video, cerno, and discerno, which frequently occur in a potential sense, instead of the pluperfect subjunctive. E. g. Reos dicēres, You would have called them guilty (i. e. if you had seen them). Signum datum credēres, ut vasa colligērent, You would have supposed that a signal had been given to collect vases. Haud facile discerēres, You could not have easily distinguished. Quis unquam credēret (or arbitrārētur)? Who could ever have believed (or supposed)?

B. The present and perfect subjunctive are often used in independent clauses to express a wish, an asseveration, a request, command, or exhortation, and also a concession or permission. E. g.

With the subjunctive thus used, the English "not" is expressed by ne, and not by non. When a wish or request is conveyed, one of the verbs velim, suadeo, or censeo is often added.

Dñi bñe vèrant! May the gods grant success to it!

REMARKS.

1. The subjunctive instead of the imperative is especially frequent in the third person; as, dicat, faciat, scribant, let him say, let him do,

* So also moriar, inteream, peream, Let me die, perish (if that is so).

† In exhortations the subjunctive is commonly in the plural.

let them write. The second person thus used is commonly connected with a negative, and the perfect is put in the sense of the present; as, ne dixeris, ne hoc feceritis, do not say, do (ye) not do this. The subjunctive implies a gentleness of command, which is sometimes increased by the addition of words like quaeso, oro, I beseech you; dum, now, pray; and sis (= si vis), please. E. g. Quaeso, parcas mihi, I beg you to spare me. Taceas (iace), sis, Please be silent.

2. In prescriptions which relate to the past, the imperfect and pluperfect subjunctive are employed. E. g. Pater ejus fortasse aliquando iniquior erat; pateretur, His father was perhaps at times unjust; he was obliged to bear it. Forsitan non memo vir fortis dixerit, resistisses, A brave man may say, perhaps, you ought to have resisted.

3. In exhortations non is sometimes used instead of ne. E. g. Non (for ne) desperemus, Let us not despair.

C. The subjunctive is also used in doubtful questions, to which no positive answer is expected, and which imply the idea of the contrary.

These negative questions are commonly rendered by can, shall, could, &c. The subjunctive of this connection is called the dubitative.

Quid fá ciam?	Quô é am?	What can I do? Where can I go?
Quid fá cërem?	Quô î rem?	What could I do? Where could I go?
Quid fá ciam?	rô ger, anne rô gem?	What shall I do? Shall I ask or be asked?
Quém tê app ëllem?		What shall I call you?
Quid fá ceret á liud?		What else could he do?
Cur fortû nam pericû larëtur?		Why should he try his fortune?
Nam, quém fér ret, si paréntem nôn fér ret sû um?		Who could he bear, if he could not bear his own parent?
Cum tempestâ te pû gnem pericu lôse pó tius, quam î lli obî mpërem et pár ëam?		Shall I fight with the storm at my own peril, rather than yield to and obey it?
Apud exércitum mî hi fú eris, inquit, tót á nnos? fó rum nôn attíg eris? abfú eris tá mdiú?		You have been with the army, said he, for so many years? You have not come in contact with the forum? You have been absent so long?

REMARK. — In these questions the answer implied is commonly the opposite. E. g. Quis possit, Who can (could)? — No one. Quis non possit? Who could not? — Every one could. Hoc non noceat? This is not hurtful? — It is certainly so.

SUBJUNCTIVE IN INDIRECT QUESTIONS.

D. When a question is stated indirectly, or merely quoted, its verb is in the subjunctive.

A clause containing an indirect question is generally dependent upon another verb. The verbs on which an indirect question may depend are not only those of asking, but many others, especially those requiring the accusative with the infinitive. (Cf. Lesson LIII.)

All the words and particles used in direct questions may also introduce an indirect one. They are quis, quid; qui, quae, quod; quot, quantus, quam, ubi, unde, quare, cur, uter, quo, quomodo; utrum, an, — ne, num. (Cf. Lesson LXXXV. B. 11.)

When the question is double, it follows the construction of direct questions of the same class. (Cf. Lesson LXXXV.)

EXAMPLES.

Quaeritur, quid faciendum sit.	The question is, what is to be done.
Mors ipsa quid sit, primum est videndum.	We must first see what death itself is.
Quâlis sit ânimus, ipse ânimus nescit.	The mind itself is ignorant of what mind is.
Disce, quid sit vivere.	Learn what it is to live.
Quid quâcque nôx aut dies fêrat, incertum est.	It is uncertain what every night or day may bring.
Quaeritur, cur doctissimi homines de maximis rebus dissentiunt.	The question is, why the most learned differ on the most important points.
Difficile dictum est, quâenam causa sit.	It is difficult to say, what the reason is.
Nôn, quantum quisque possit, sed quanti quisque sit, ponderandum est.	We are not to consider what any one can do, but what he is morally worth.
Nôn est, cur spēs eorum infringatur.	There is no reason why their hope should be dejected.
Videamus primum, deorûmne providentiâ mûndus regatur.	Let us see first, whether the world is governed by the providence of the gods.
Inter sē rogābant, num* quēm plebēi cōsûlis poenitēret.	They inquired of each other, whether any one was tired of the plebeian consul.
Antigonus nōndum statuerat, conservāret Eûmenem, nec ne.	Antigonus had not yet determined whether he would save Eumenes or not.
Delibērat senātus, captīvos ab hōstibus redimat, an nōn.	The senate is deliberating, whether to redeem the captives from the enemy, or not.
Ipse qui sit, utrum sit, an nōn sit, id quōque nescit.	He himself does not know what he is, nor whether he is or is not.
Quōd nescire mālum est, agitēmus, utrūmne divitiis hōmines, an sint virtūte beāti.	Let us discuss what it is a misfortune not to know: whether men are made happy by riches, or by virtue.

* The particle num in indirect questions does not imply a negative answer, as in direct questions.

REMARKS.

1. When the question is regarded as direct, the indicative is sometimes used, especially after imperatives like dic, vide. E. g. Dic, quaeso, num te illa terrent? Pray tell me, whether those things frighten you? Quaeramus, ubi maleficium est (for sit), Let us inquire where the mischief is. But instances like these are comparatively rare.

2. The expressions nescio quis, nescio quid, in the sense of aliquis or quidam, aliquid or quiddam, are not linked to any particular mood of the verb. E. g. Nescio quid (= paululum) turbatus esse mihi vidēris, You seem to me to be somewhat agitated.

EXERCISE 160.

Well, does your sister make any progress? — She would make some, if she were as assiduous as you. — You flatter me. — Not at all; I assure you that I should be highly (magnopere) satisfied, if all my pupils worked like you. — Why do you not go out to-day? — I would go out if it were fine weather. — Shall I have the pleasure of seeing you to-morrow? — If you wish it, I will come. — Shall I still be here when you arrive? — Will you have occasion to go to town this evening? — I do not know, but I would go now if I had an opportunity. — You would not have so much pleasure, and you would not be so happy, if you had not friends and books. — Man would not experience so much misery in his career, and he would not be so unhappy, were he not so blind. — You would not have that insensibility towards the poor, and you would not be so deaf to their supplication, if you had been yourself in misery for some time. — You would not say that, if you knew me well. — Why has your sister not done her exercises? — She would have done them, if she had not been prevented. — If you worked more, and spoke oftener, you would speak better. — I assure you, sir, that I should learn better, if I had more time. — I do not complain of you, but of your sister. — You would have had no reason to complain of her, had she had time to do what you gave her to do. — What has my brother told you? — He has told me that he would be the happiest man in the world, if he knew the Latin language, the most beautiful of all languages. — I should like to know why I cannot speak as well as you. — I will tell you: you would speak quite as well as I, if you were not so bashful. But if you had studied your lessons more carefully, you would not be afraid to speak; for, in order to speak well, one must learn; and it is very natural, that (necesse or par est, ut) he who does not know well what he has learnt should be timid. — You would not be so timid as you are, if you were sure to make no mistakes. — There are some people who laugh when I speak. — Those are impolite people; you have only to laugh also, and they will no longer laugh at you. If you did as I (do), you would speak well. — You must study a little every day, and you will soon be no longer afraid to speak. — I will endeavor to follow your advice, for I have resolved to rise every morning at six o'clock, to study till ten o'clock, and go to bed early. — I wish your son would be more assiduous. — Let us be more diligent. — Let them listen to the advice of their friend, and not be deaf to the words of wisdom. — Let us imitate the best and wisest among men. — Do you know what that is? — I do not know what it is. — I do not know whether he will go out or remain at home. — Do you know whether he has finished his letter or not? — I do not know. — I beg you not to write. — Please be silent.

Lesson LXXXVIII.—PENSUM DUODENONGESIMUM.

THE SUBJUNCTIVE AFTER CONJUNCTIONS.

A. Dependent clauses denoting an intention, purpose, object, or result are put in the subjunctive. These clauses are commonly introduced by the conjunctions ut, ne, quo, quin, and quominus. The tense of the subjunctive is determined by that of the leading verb, according to Lesson LXXXIII.

I. Ut or uti, "that," "in order that," "so that," indicates the purpose, object, consequence, or effect of another action. When it expresses a result, it is commonly preceded by one of the words sic, ita, tam, tālis, tantus, ejusmodi, &c. E. g.

Lēgum idcirco sērvī sūmus, ut liberī ēsse possimus.

We are therefore the servants of the law, that we may be able to be free.

Esse opōrtet ut vivas, nōn vivēre, ut ēilas.

You should eat to live, and not live to eat.

Romāni eūm ab arātro abduxērunt, ut dictātor esset.

The Romans called him from the plough, that he might be dictator.

Pylades quum sis, dices tē esse Orēstem, ut moriāre pro amico?

Since you are a Pylades, will you say that you are Orestes, in order to die for your friend?

Si ōmnia fēcit, ut sanāret, perēgit mēdicus pārtes suas.

If the doctor has done everything (he could) to cure, he has performed his duty.

Cum Antōnio sic agēmus, ut perspiciat, tōtum mē futurum sūum.

Let us treat with Antonius in such a manner, that he may see that I will be entirely in his favor.

Siciliā Vērres ita vexāvit, ut ea restitui in pristinū stātum nullo mōdo possit.

Verres has harassed Sicily to such an extent, that it cannot by any means be restored to its former condition.

Adeo aēqua postulātis, ut ūltro vōbis dēferēnda fuerint.

Your demands are so reasonable, that it was necessary to accede to them voluntarily.

Pompēius ea est virtūte ac fortūnā, ut ea potuerit sēmp̄r, quae nemo praeter illum.

Pompey's valor and success is such, that he has always been able to accomplish what no one else could.

Tālis est ōrdo actiōnum adhibēndus, ut in vitā ōmnia sint apta inter se et conveniētia.

We should observe such an order of our actions, that everything in life may be harmonious and consistent.

REMARKS.

1. The adverbs ita, sic, tam before the verbs and adjectives preceding ut are sometimes omitted, and the latter then is rendered by so that. (See examples on page 387.)

2. Ut is originally an adverb of manner and the correlative of ita, so—as. E. g. Ut initium, sic finis est. In this sense it is not followed by any particular mood, but has either the indicative or subjunctive, as the construction may require. When, in the sense of as soon as, it indicates a relation of time, it generally takes the indicative perfect. E. g. Ut primum loqui posse coepi, As soon as I could speak. — On ut with the sense of would that and supposing that, see Lesson LXXXIX.

II. Ne always implies a purpose or intended effect, and is equivalent to the English “lest,” or “that not.” E. g.

Cura, ne denūo in mōrbum incidas. See that you do not fall sick again.

Efficio, ne cui molēsti sint. I see to it, that they do not become troublesome to any one.

Ne id fieri posset, obsidiōne fiebat. The possibility of that was prevented by the blockade.

Timoleon orāvit omnes, ne id facerent. Timoleon begged them all not to do that.

Mē obsecras, ne obliviscar vigilare. You beseech me not to forget to watch.

Hortatur eos, ne animo deficiant. He exhorts them not to lose their courage.

Quod potuisti prohibere, ne fieret. Which you could have prevented from being done.

REMARKS.

1. Ut non is used instead of ne, when no intended effect, but a mere consequence, is to be expressed (in the sense of so that not), and also when the negation does not relate to the entire sentence, but only to a particular word of it. E. g. Tum forte aegrotabam, ut ad nuptias tuas venire non possem, I happened to be sick then, so that I could not come to your wedding. Confer te ad Manlium, ut a me non ejectus ad alienos, sed invitatus ad tuos isse videaris, Go to Manlius, so that you may not have the appearance of having been cast out among strangers by me, but of having gone invited to your friends.

2. As a continuation of ut and ne in negative sentences the particle neve is used, which after ne stands in the sense of aut ne, “or lest,” “or that not,” and after ut in the sense of et ne, “and that not.” E. g. Legem tulit, ne quis ante actarum rerum accusaretur neve multaretur, He enacted a law, that no one should be accused of past offences, nor (or) punished for them.*

* Instead of neve preceded by ut, neque (or nec) is not unfrequently employed. E. g. Persuadent, ut paterentur, nec ultima experiri vellent, They exhort them to suffer it, and not to attempt to resort to extremes.

3. Instead of ne, the double conjunction ut ne is also used, especially in legal language. E. g. Operam dant, ut judicia ne fiant, They are endeavoring to prevent judgment. Ut hic, qui intervēnit, ne ignoret, quae res agatur, That he who happens to come in may not be ignorant of what is going on.

III. After verbs denoting fear or apprehension, ne is equivalent to the English "that," or "lest," and ut or ne non to "that not." E. g.

Tímeo, ne plúat.	I am afraid that it will rain.
Tímeo, ut plúat.	I am afraid that it will not rain.
Tímeo, ne nōn * plúat. }
Véreor, ut ápte dicam.	I fear I do not speak correctly.
Véreor, ut matúre vénias.	I fear you will not come in proper time.
Métuo, ne frustra labórem suscēperis.	I am afraid that you have worked in vain.
Timēbam, ne evenírent éa, quae acciderunt.	I was afraid that that would come to pass, which (actually) has occurred.
Veréndum est, ne brévi témpore fames in úrbe sí.	It is to be feared that in a short time there will be a famine in the city.
Omnes labóres tē excíperé vídeo.	I perceive that you are undertaking the whole of the labor.
Tímeo, ut sustíneas.	I am afraid that you will not hold out.
Verétur Híempsal, ut sátis firmum sí (foédus) et rítum.	Hiempsal was afraid that the compact would not be sufficiently firm and safe.
Verebámini, ne nōn id fácērem, quód recepíssem sémel.	Ye were afraid that I would not perform what I had undertaken.
Metuēbat scilicet, ne indicárent, ne dolórem férre nōn póssent.	He was afraid perhaps they might declare, that they would be unable to endure the pain.
Pávor céperat mílites, ne mortíférus ésset vúl nus Scipiōnis.	The terror had invaded the soldiers, that Scipio's wound might be mortal.

REMARKS

1. This construction includes also substantives denoting fear, apprehension, or danger (as the pavor of the last example). So also the causative verbs terrere, conterrere, and detertere. To these add carere, to beware, and videre and observare, in the sense of "to see, reflect, consider." E. g. Cavendum est, ne assentatoribus patefaciāmus aures, We should guard against opening our ears to flatterers. Videndum est, ne quis nervus laedātur, We must see, that no nerve is hurt.†

* Ne non in this construction is equivalent to ut.

† In this sense, Vide ne = "See whether not or that," and Vide ne non =

2. When verbs of fearing do not imply a wish (that something might or might not take place), but merely an emotion of the mind, they take the infinitive. E. g. Vereor dicere, I am afraid to speak. Metuit tangi, He is afraid of being touched.

IV. Quo generally occurs only in connection with a comparative, and is equivalent to ut eo, "that," "so that," "in order that." Non quo, followed by sed, is equivalent to non quod, "not that," "not as if." E. g.

Áger nōn sēmel arātur, sed novātur et iterātur, quō meliōres fētus possit et grandiores ēdēre.

The land is not ploughed once only, but a second and a third time, in order that it may produce better and larger crops.

Cohortārer vōs, quō ánimo fortiōre essētis.

I should exhort you to be more resolute in mind.

Lēgem brevem esse oportet, quō facilius ab imperitiis teneātur.

A law should be brief, in order that it may be the more easily remembered by the simple.

Ad tē lītteras dēdi, nōn quō habērem magnopere, quod scribērem, sed ut loquērer tēcum absens.

I have written to you, not that I had anything particular to communicate, but in order that in my absence I might converse with you.

REMARKS.

1. Quo with the subjunctive always denotes a purpose. In the sense of et eo, "and by this means," and in the formula quo — eo or hoc (with comparatives), it has the indicative. E. g. Quo plures erant, (hoc) major caedes fuit, The larger their number, the greater the massacre.

2. Instead of non quo in the sense given above, it is more common to say non quod, non eo quod, non ideo quod, non quia, and negatively non quin. E. g. Non quod sola ornent, sed quod excellent, Not that they are the only ornaments, but because they excel as such. Non quin pari virtute et voluntate alii fuerint, sed, &c., Not as if others were not his peers in virtue and resolution, but, &c.

V. Quin (= qui + non) is used after negative propositions, or after general questions involving a negation, and may generally be resolved either into qui non or into ut non.

1. In the sense of qui (quae, quod) non, it occurs principally after expressions like nemo (nullus, nihil, viz, aegre) est, reperitur, quin, &c., and after general questions introduced by quis or quid. E. g. Quis est, quin intelligat? Who is there (or is there any one), that does not comprehend? Nemo venit, quin videret, No one came who did not see (without seeing).

"See whether or that not." E. g. Vide ne hoc tibi oblit, See whether this does not hurt you. Vide ne non satis sit, See whether this is enough.

2. In the sense of ut non it occurs after expressions like facere non possum, quin; fiēri non potest, quin; nulla causa or nihil causae est, quin, &c. E. g. Facere non possum, quin mittam, I cannot but send (cannot do otherwise than send). Nulla causa est, quin hoc faciam, There is no reason why I should not do this (I am authorized to do it).

3. It is moreover used, in the sense of the English but that or that, after verbs and expressions signifying doubt, distance, prevention, or omission, such as non dubito, non est dubium, non ambigo, quin; non abest, nihil (or paucum, non procul, haud multum) abest, quin; non (viz, aegre) abstineo, quin; temperāre mihi (or tenēre me) non possum, quin; non impedio, non recuso, non or nihil praetermitto, quin, &c. E. g. Non dubito, quin profectus sit, I do not doubt that he has left (his having left). Nihil abest, quin miserimus sim, I lack nothing of being a most unhappy man.

4. Additional examples of all these constructions of quin are the following:—

Nihil est, quin possit depravari.	There is nothing but what can be corrupted.
Quis est, quin cernat, quanta vis sit in sensibus?	Who is there that does not perceive what a power there is in our senses?
Nihil tam difficile est, quin quaerendo investigari possit.	There is nothing so difficult that cannot be investigated by examination.
Nulla mora fuit, quin decernerent bellum.	There was no delay about their finishing the war.
Facere non potui, quin tibi sententiam meam declararem.	I could not refrain from declaring to you my opinion.
Non dubito, quin domi sit.	I do not doubt but that he is at home.
Non est dubium, quin Helvetii plurimum possint.	There is no doubt but that the Helvetii are the most powerful and influential.
Haud multum absuit, quin ab exilibus interficeretur.	He had a narrow escape from being murdered by the exiles.
Teneri non potui, quin (hoc) tibi declararem.	I could not refrain from declaring this to you.
Impediri non potest, quin progrediatur.	He cannot be prevented from advancing.
Non possumus, quin alii a nobis dissentiant, recusare.	We cannot refuse to allow others to dissent from us.
Dubitandum non est, quin nunquam possit utilitas cum honestate contendere.	It is not to be doubted, that utility can never pretend to compete with honor.

REMARKS.

1. Quin in the sense of qui, quae, quod non commonly is used only for the nominative; and where it seems to stand for quo non or cui non, it may be resolved into ut non. Yet it is also found for quod non

acc. E. g. Nego in Siciliâ quidquam fuisse, quin (= quod non) conquiescitur, I maintain that there was nothing in Sicily which he has not tried to rake together.

2. Qui non frequently occurs instead of quin; and so likewise ut non. E. g. Quis est, qui hoc non sentiat? Who is there that does not feel sensible of this? Fieri non potest, ut eum tu in tuâ provinciâ non cognôris, It is not possible that you should not have made his acquaintance in your own province.*

3. After non dubito, "I doubt not," the Acc. cum Inf. is sometimes put instead of quin. E. g. Pompeius non dubitat, ea, quae de republicâ nunc sentiat, mihi valde probari, Pompey doubts not but that his present sentiments with reference to the republic are acceptable to me. Dubito and non dubito, in the sense of "I hesitate," are commonly followed by the infinitive, but sometimes also by quin. E. g. Non dubito respondere, I do not hesitate to reply. Non dubitâri, id a te per litteras petere, I did not hesitate (or scruple) to ask that of you by letter. Dubitâti, iudices, quin hunc vindicetis, Do you hesitate, judges, to defend this man?

4. The English "I doubt whether" is expressed by dubito sitne, dubito num or numquid, or in double sentences by dubito sitne — an, dubito utrum — an. But the expressions dubito an, dubium est an, have (like nescio an, page 538) the affirmative sense, "I am inclined to." E. g. Dubitât an turpe non sit, He is inclined to consider it no disgrace.

5. Quin in the sense of why not? has the indicative; sometimes also, with a similar force, the imperative or the first person plural of the subjunctive. E. g. Quin conscendimus equos? Why not mount our horses immediately? Quin uno verbo dic, Say it in one word! Quin experiamur, Let us make the attempt at once!

VI. Quomînus (= ut eo mînus, "that not") is generally put only after verbs denoting prevention or hinderance, and which may likewise be followed by ne, or, where a negative precedes, by quin.

The principal verbs of this class are defendere, detertere, impedire, intercedere, obstistere, obstare, officere, prohibere, recusare. To these add stat or fit per me, quomînus; non pugno, nihil moror, non contineo, quomînus, and many others. E. g.:—

Aetas non impedit, quô mînus litterarum stûdia teneamus, usque ad ultimum tēpus connectûti. Age does not prevent us from adhering to the study of letters, even to the very end of our life.

Rēbus terrēnis multa extēra, Many external circumstances can

* Qui non and ut non, instead of quin, are necessary when no negation precedes, or when non belongs not to the leading verb, but to some other word of the sentence. E. g. Non adeo imperitus sum, ut nesciam, I am not so ignorant as not to know (where non belongs to imperitus).

quominus perficiantur, possunt obsistere.	act as obstacles to the accomplishment of earthly things.
Quid obstat, quominus deus sit beatus?	What prevents God from being happy?
Epaminondas non recusavit, quominus legis poenam subiret.	Epaminondas did not refuse to submit to the penalty of the law.
Cæsar cognovit, per Afranium stare, quo minus proelio dimicaret.	Cæsar was informed, that it was owing to Afranius, that they did not engage in battle.
Ego tecum in eo non pugabo, quominus, utrum velis, eligas.	I will not oppose your choosing whichever of the two you please.

REMARKS.

1. After the verbs impedio, deterreo, prohibeo, and recuso, the infinitive is sometimes used instead of quominus. E. g. Pudor impedit exquirere, Shame prevents further inquiry. Prohibentur exire, They are prohibited from going out. Quae facere ipse recuso, Which I myself refuse to do.
2. Quo secius may take the place of quominus. E. g. Impedimento est, quo secius lex feratur, It prevents the bill from passing.

EXERCISE 161.

Where is your cousin? — He is in the kitchen. — Where is your mother? — She is at church. — Is your sister gone to school? — She is gone thither. — Does your mother often go to church? — She goes thither every morning and every evening. — She goes thither as soon as she gets up. — At what o'clock does she get up? — She gets up at sunrise. — Dost thou go to school to-day? — I do go thither. — What dost thou learn at school? — I learn to read, write, and speak there. — Where is your aunt? — She is gone to the play with my little sister. — Do your sisters go this evening to the opera? — No, madam, they go to the dancing-school? — Is your father gone a hunting? — He has not been able to go a hunting, for he has a cold. — Do you like to go a hunting? — I like to go a fishing better than a hunting. — Is your father still in the country? — Yes, madam, he is still there. — What does he do there? — He goes a hunting and a fishing there. — Did you hunt when you were in the country? — I hunted the whole day. — How long have you stayed with (apud) my mother. — I stayed with her the whole evening. — Is it long since you were at the castle? — I was there last week. — Did you find many people there? — I found only three persons there. — Who were those three persons? — They were the count, the countess, and their daughter. —

Are these girls as good as their brothers? — They are better than they. — Can your sisters speak German? — They cannot, but they are learning it. — Have you brought anything to your mother? — I brought her good fruits and a fine tart. — What has your niece brought you? — She has brought us good cherries, good strawberries, and good peaches. — Do you like peaches? — I do like them much. — How many peaches has your neighbor (fem.) given you? — She has given me more than twenty of them. — Have you eaten many cherries this year? — I have eaten many of them. — Were there many pears last year? — There were not many. — Have you read the newspaper to-day? — I have read it. — Is there anything new in it? — I have not read anything new in it. — Does he eat to live, or does he live to eat? — He lives to eat. — Why do you study Latin? — I study it, in order that I may read, speak, and write it. — Is he so bad, that he must be punished? — He is. — Did your father exhort you not to go to the play? — He begged and conjured me not to go there. — He was sick yesterday so that he could not come to the lesson (ad scholam). — Are you afraid that it will rain to-day? — I am rather afraid that it will not rain. — Is your brother afraid to speak Latin? — He is afraid; for he is as yet ignorant of the language. — He should be more diligent, in order that he may be able to speak more readily (facilius). — I give you this advice, not that I think you need it, but in order to encourage (animum alicui addere) you. — I cannot refrain from writing to you. — There is no doubt but that you are correct. — I do not doubt but that he will arrive to-morrow. — Can he prevent you from advancing? — He cannot prevent me. — He could refrain from weeping, when he heard that you were so unfortunate and unhappy. — What can prevent us from being happy? — Nothing can prevent us from being as happy as any one ever was.

Lesson LXXXIX. — PENSUM UNDENONAGESIMUM.

SUBJUNCTIVE AFTER CONJUNCTIONS. — Continued.

A. The subjunctive is put after various other particles, besides those already considered in the preceding Lesson.

I. After particles denoting a wish, such as utinam, utinam ne, ut or uti, o or o si, "O that," "would that," the verb is always in the subjunctive.

In this construction the present and perfect subjunctives are used of things considered as possible, the imperfect and pluperfect when the wish is regarded as a vain or impossible one. E. g.

Utinam habeam! Utinam habuerit! O that I may have! I wish that he may have had!

Ūtinam habērem ! Ūtinam habuisset !	Would that I had ! O that he had had !
Ūtinam mōdo cōnāta efficere possim !	May I but be able to accomplish my endeavors !
O mihi praeteritos réferat si Jūppiter ānnos !	O that Jupiter may restore to me my past years !
Illud ūtinam ne vére scribērem !	Would to God that what I have written were no reality !
Ūtinam mínus vítae cūpidi fuissēmus !	O that we had been less desirous of preserving life !
Ut tē dūi pérduint !	May the gods destroy you !

REMARK. — The particle si is sometimes omitted. E. g. Tecum ludēre sicut ipsa possem !

II. After the particles of comparison quasi, quam si, and after tamquam, ut, velut, similiter ac, idem ac, aeque ac, perinde ac, proinde ac, with or without si, and ceu, "as if," "just as if," the verb is always in the subjunctive. E. g.

Sed quid ego his tēstibus ūtor, quasi rēs dūbia aut obscura sūt ? But why do I use witnesses like these, as if the case were a doubtful or an obscure one ?

Quaestor est factus, quam si esset sūmmo lōco nātus. He was made questor, as if he had been of the highest rank by birth.

Parvi primo ōrtu sic jacent, tāmquam omnino sine ānimo sint. Infants, when they are just born, lie as if they were entirely without life.

Crudelitatem ejus, vélut si coram adēset, horrēbant. They shrunk from his cruelty, as if he were present before them.

Similiter faciis, ac si mē rōges. You act just as if you were asking me.

Delēta est Ausōnum gens, perinde ac si internecivo bello certāset. The Ausonian nation has become extinct, as if it had engaged in internecine warfare.

III. The particles non quod, non eo quod, non ideo quod, and non quia, "not because," non quo, "not as if," and non quā, "not but that," are followed by the subjunctive, but the sed quod or sed quia of the subsequent clause requires the indicative. E. g.

Nōn idcirco quorūdam amicōrum ūsum dimisēram, quod sīs succēnsērem, sed quōd eōrum me suppēbat. I had given up the acquaintance of certain friends, not because I was angry with them, but because I was somewhat ashamed of them.

Nōn quō vērba ūnquam pōtius, quān rēs, exercuerim, sed quia assuēvēram militāribus ingēniis. Not that I have ever dealt in words rather than in substance, but because I had become accustomed to military minds.

Crasso commendationem non sum pollicitus, non quin eam valituram apud te arbitrarer, sed (quod) mihi egere commendatione non videbatur. I did not promise Crassus any recommendation, not because I thought that it would have no effect with you, but because he did not seem to me to need any recommendation.

IV. The subjunctive is likewise put after the conjugations dum, modo or dummodo, "provided," and dum ne, modo ne or dummodo ne, "provided not." So also after ut and ne, when they signify "although," "although not," and after nēdum or ne, "not to say," "much less," "much more." E. g.

Neque, dum sibi regnum pararet, quidquam pensi habebat. Nor did he have a regard for anything, provided he might win royal authority.

Cicero omnia postposuit, dummodo praecipis patris pareret. Cicero disregarded everything, provided he might obey the instructions of his father.

Dum ille ne sis, quem ego esse nolo, sis mea causa, qui lubet. So long as you are not what I do not wish to be, you may be what you please, for aught I care.

Ut desint vires, tamen est laudanda voluntas. Although the strength be wanting, yet the wish is to be commended.

Verum ut hoc non sit, tamen servet rempublicam. Though this be not so, it may nevertheless save the republic.

Ne sit summum malum dolor, malum certe est. Although pain is not the greatest evil, it is still unquestionably an evil.

Nunquam sufferre ejus sumptus queat, nēdum tu possis. He never can defray his expenses, much less can you.

Vix in ipsis tectis frigus vitatur, nēdum in mari et in via sit facile abesse ab injuria temporis. The cold can scarcely be avoided in the houses themselves; much less easy it is to be exempt from the ill effects of the season at sea and on the roads.

Quippe secundae res sapientium animos fittigant; ne illi corruptis moribus victoriae temperarent. Since prosperity tries the minds of the wise even, much less could they who are men of corrupt morals restrain themselves from an abuse of the victory.

V. Quamvis (quantumvis, quantumlibet), "however," and licet, "although," commonly take the subjunctive; but utut, "however," and quamquam, "although," have more frequently the indicative. E. g.

Licet strenuum metum putes esse, velocior tamen spes est. Although you may consider fear rapid in its operation, yet hope is quicker.

Quámvis licet Ménti delúbra et Virtúti et Fidei consecrémus, támen hæc in nobis ípsis sita vidémus.	Although it be true, that we dedicate shrines to the Intellect, to Virtue, and to Faith, we nevertheless perceive that they reside in ourselves.
Quód turpe ést, id, quámvis occultétur, támen honéstum fieri nullo módo pótest.	That which is morally disgraceful, however it may be concealed, can never by any means become honorable.
Vítia méntis, quantúmvis , exígua súnť, in május excéľunt.	The vices of the mind, however small they may be, increase and spread.
Út haéc súnť, támen hoc fáciám.	However these things may be, I shall nevertheless do it.
Quámquam excellébat abstinentiá, támen exsilio décem annórum multátus ést.	Although he was noted for his moderation, he yet was punished with an exile of ten years.

REMARK. — Tacitus uses the subjunctive after quamquam as after quámvis. Cicero only occasionally. Later authors reverse the rule, and put quamquam with the subjunctive, and quámvis with the indicative.

VI. Dum, donec, and quoad, in the sense of "as long as," or "while," require the indicative; but when they signify "until," they may have either the indicative or subjunctive. E. g.

Aegróto dum ánima ést, spés ésse dicitur.	As long as the patient keeps up his spirits, there is said to be hope.
Cáto quoad víxít, virtútum laúde crevíť.	Cato advanced in renown for virtue as long as he lived.
Delibéra hoc, dum égo réleo.	Think this over until I return.
De comítiis, donec rediit Marcellus, siléntium fúit.	Respecting the election, there was nothing said until Marcellus returned.
Expectáte, dum cónsul aut dictátor fiat Kaeso.	Wait, until Caeso becomes consul or dictator.
Quoad pervénťum sít éo, quo súmpta návis ést.	Until they may have arrived at the spot for which the ship was taken.

VII. Antequam and priusquam are commonly followed by the present subjunctive, when they imply a reference to the future, and by the imperfect or pluperfect subjunctive when they imply a causal connection between two past events. But when these conjunctions express merely a relation of time, the verb is in the indicative. E. g.

Tragoédi quotidie, antequam pronant, vócem sénsim éxciťant.	Tragic actors gradually tune their voice every day, before they begin to declaim.
--	---

Ante vidēmus fulguratiōnem, quam sonum audīamus.

In omnibus negotiis prius, quam aggrediāre, adhibēda est praeparatio diligens.

Caesar ad Pompēii castra per-venit prius, quam Pompeius sentire posset.

Saepe magna indoles virtutis, priusquam rei publicae prodesse potuisset, exstincta fuit.

Dabo operam, ut istuc veniam ante, quam plane ex tuo ani-mo effluo.

Mēbris utimur prius, quam di-dicimus, cūjus ea utilitatis causa habeamus.*

We perceive the lightning before we hear its voice.

You should make diligent preparations in every transaction, before you set to work at it.

Cesar arrived at Pompey's camp before Pompey could perceive it.

It has often been the case, that a great natural capacity for virtue was lost, before it could become an advantage to the republic.

I shall endeavor to come to your place, before I am entirely forgotten by you.

We use our limbs, before we have learnt the end for which we have them.

OF THE CONSTRUCTION OF "QUUM."

B. Quum or cum expresses either a relation of time, and is equivalent to tum quum, eo tempore quum, or ex eo tempore quum, "then when," "when," "while," "after," or "since"; or it denotes the relation of cause and effect, and is equivalent to the English "since,"
"although," "because." The former is called the quum temporale, and is generally followed by the indicative, the latter the quum causale, and is followed by the subjunctive.

I. The clause introduced by quum temporale may either be the leading or a subordinate one, and the verb may be in any tense of the indicative.

Facile omnes, quum valēmus, recta consilia aegrotis dāmus.

Ager quum multos annos quieverit, uberiores efferre fructus solet.

Qui non defendit injuriā, neque propulsat a suis, quum potest, injuste facit.

Quum haec in Hispaniā gerebātur, comitiōrum jam appetē-bat dies.

Vos tūm parvistis, quum paruit nemo, qui noluit.

When we are well, we all of us can easily give advice to those who are sick.

When land has been left fallow for many years, it usually yields more abundant crops.

He who does not repel injustice,
nor protect his friends against it,
when he can, acts unjustly.

While these things were carried on in Spain, the day of the elections was approaching.

You obeyed at a time when no one obeyed, that was not disposed to do so.

* In the last two of these examples, these conjunctions express merely a relation of time.

Quum inimici nostri ventre dicentur, tum in Epirum ibo.

When our enemies will be reported as coming, then I shall go into Epirus.

Jam vēr appetēbat, quum Hannibal ex hibernis movit.

Spring was already approaching, when Hannibal moved out of his winter-quarters.

Vix annus intercēsserat, quum Sulpicius accusārit C. Norbanum.

A year had scarcely elapsed when Sulpicius preferred an accusation against Norbanus.

Multī anni sūnt, quum Fabius in aēre meo est.*

It is many years since Fabius is my debtor.

Triginta diēs erant ipsi, quum hās dabam litteras.

There were thirty entire days, since the date of this letter.

REMARK. — On the imperfect and pluperfect subjunctive after quum temporale, see III.

II. Quum causāle is rendered by the English since, because, although, and is followed by the subjunctive. E. g.

Quae cum ita sint.

Since these things are so.

Quum sciam, scirem.

Since I know, though I knew.

Quum intellēxerim, intellēxissem.

Since I have understood, had understood.

Socratis ingēnium variōsque sermonēs immortalitāti scriptis suis trādidit Plāto, quum litteram Socrates nullam reliquisset.

Plato in his writings has bequeathed us an immortal record of the genius and various discourses of Socrates, though Socrates himself had not left a syllable.

Dionysius quum in communibus suggestis consistere nōn aulēret, concionāri ex tūrre altā solēbat.

Dionysius was in the habit of haranguing the people from a high tower, as he did not dare to stand upon the usual platforms.

Coelo serēno interdū obscurāta lūx est, quum lūna sub orbem solis subisset.

Daylight has sometimes been darkened, even under a clear sky, on account of the moon having passed beneath the orbit of the sun.

Druentia, quum aquae vim vehat ingentem, nōn tamen navium patiēns est.

The (river) Durance, although it carries a large quantity of water, is yet unfit for navigation.

Ego mē saepe nova vidēri dicere intēlligo, quum pervētēra dicam.

I know that I have often the appearance of saying new things, when (i. e. although) I say something that is quite old.

Phocion fuit perpetuō pauper, quum divitissimus esse posset.

Phocion was perpetually poor, when (i. e. although) he might have been very rich.

III. In narration quum is commonly followed by the imperfect and pluperfect subjunctive, though generally rendered by the English when or after. E. g.

* On this use of quum, compare Lesson LVII.

Zenōnem, quūm Athēnis essem, audiēbam frequēter.

Fuit tēpus, quum rūra colērent hōmīnes, nēque * urbem habē- rent.

Ibi ēum quūm Cæsar vidisset,
nihil aspere, nihil acerbe dixit.

Thucydides libros suos tūm scrip-sisse dicitur, quūm a repūblicā remōtus atque in exsilium pulsus esset.

I frequently heard Zeno's discourses, when I was at Athens.

There was a time when men inhabited the country, and had no cities.

When Cæsar saw him there, he said nothing that was harsh, nothing that was bitter.

Thucydides is said to have written his books after he had been removed from public life and driven into exile.

REMARKS.

1. The subjunctive sometimes stands after quum where we might expect the indicative. E. g. Si tibi tum, quum petēres consulātum, affui, If I assisted you at the time you were a candidate for the consulate, &c. But in most such cases there are generally other reasons for the subjunctive. E. g. Qui dies est, quæ nox, quum ego non ex istorum insidiis divino consilio eripiar? † What day is there, what night, in which I was not saved from the wiles of these wretches, by a Divine Providence?

2. In Livy and Tacitus quum is sometimes also followed by the historical infinitive. E. g. Nec multum erat progressa navis, quum dato signo ruere tectum loci, Nor had the ship advanced far, when at the given signal the deck fell in.

* In this construction the first non is generally omitted, when both members of the sentence have a common predicate, as in the second of the following examples, where audēbit is the common verb, and ne — quidem equivalent to etiam non.

EXERCISE 162.

Will you dine with us to-day? — With much pleasure. — What have you for dinner? We have good soup, some fresh and salt meat, and some milk-food. — Do you like milk-food? — I like it better than all other food. — Are you ready to dine? — I am ready. — Do you intend to set out soon? — I intend setting out next week. — Do you travel alone? — No, madam, I travel with my uncle. — Do you travel on foot or in a carriage? — We travel in a carriage. — Did you meet any one in your last journey (ultimo in itinere tuo ad) to Berlin? — We met many wanderers. — What do you intend to spend your time in this summer? — I intend to take a short journey. — Did you walk much in your last journey? — I like very much to walk, but my uncle likes to go in a carriage. — Did he not wish to walk? — He wished to walk at first, but after having taken a few steps, he wished to get into the carriage, so that I did not walk much. — What have you been doing at school to-day? — We have been listening to our teacher, who made a long speech on the (qui verba faciebat multa de) goodness of God. — What did he say? — After saying, "God is the creator of heaven and earth; the fear of the Lord is the beginning of all wisdom"; he said, "Repetition is the mother of studies, and a good memory is a great benefit of God." — Why did you not stay longer in Holland? — When I was there, the living was so dear that I had not money enough to stay there any longer. — What sort of weather was it when you were on the way to Vienna? — It was very bad weather; for it was stormy, and snowed, and rained very heavily. — May I have leisure to read through the book? — Would that I had an opportunity to do (faciendi) what you have done! — O that he had never written that letter! — You act as if you were sad; what is the matter with you (quid tristis es)?

EXERCISE 163.

What are you doing all the day in this garden? — I am walking in it. — What is there in it that attracts you? — The singing of the birds attracts me. — Are there any nightingales in it? — There are some in it, and the harmony of their singing enchants me. — What does your niece amuse herself with in her solitude? — She reads a good deal and writes letters to her mother. — What does your uncle amuse himself with in his solitude? — He employs himself in painting and chemistry. — Does he no longer do any business? — He no longer does any, for he is too old to do it. — Why does he meddle with your business? — He does not generally meddle with other people's business (alienis negotiis se immiscere non assolet); but he meddles with mine, because he loves me. — Has your master made you repeat your lesson to-day? — He has made me repeat it. — Did you know it? — I did know it pretty well. — Have you also done some exercises? — I have done some, but what is that to you, I beg? — I do not generally meddle with things that do not concern me; but I love you so much (tantopere), that I concern myself much about what you are doing. — Does any one trouble his head about you? — No one troubles his head about me; for I am not worth the trouble. — Not only for the sake of cleanliness, but also for the sake of health, prudent people avoid (vitare) uncleanness, and wash themselves often. — Shall you buy that horse? — I shall buy it, although it is not an English one. — Though he is my cousin, he nevertheless does not come to see me. — Although they are not rich, they are nevertheless very benevolent. — I do not know, whether he is at home or not. — The question is (quaeritur), whether he will do it or not.

Lesson XC. — PENSUM NONAGESIMUM.

SUBJUNCTIVE AFTER RELATIVES.

A. Relative pronouns and adverbs are followed by the subjunctive, when the clause introduced by them contains the consequence or result, or the cause, reason, purpose, or motive of what has gone before.

B. When the relative is preceded by is, hic, ille, tālis, tantus, ejusmodi, hujusmodi, adeo or tam, so as to denote a consequence or result, its verb is in the subjunctive.

In this construction qui becomes equivalent to ut ego, tu, ille, &c.; — cujus to ut mei, tui, sui, illius, ejus; — cui to ut mihi, tibi, sibi, ei, illi, and so through all the cases. E. g.

Ego is sum, qui nihil unquam meā potius, quam meorum ci-vium causā fecerim.

My character is such, that I have never done anything on my own account rather than on that of my fellow-citizens.

Ecce est Romana gens, quae victa quiescere nesciat.

Such is the character of the Roman race, that it cannot rest when conquered.

Non tu is es, qui, qui sis, nescias.

You are not such a man as to be ignorant of what you are.

Non ego sum ille ferreus, qui fratris moerore non movear.

I am not so heartless a man as not to be moved by the sorrow of my brother.

Innocentia est affectio talis animi, quae noceat nemini.

Innocence is that disposition of the mind which does nobody any harm.

Est hujusmodi reus, in quo homine nihil sit, praeter summa peccata.

He is so guilty, that there is nothing in the man but the most culpable offences.

In corpore si quid ejusmodi est, quod reliquo corpori noceat, uri secarique patimur.

If there is anything in our body of such a character as to injure the remaining parts of it, we suffer it to be burnt or cut.

Nulla gens tam fēra, nemo omnium tam immānis est, cuius mētem nōn imbūerit deōrum opinio. There is no race so savage, no man so monstrous, whose mind is not imbued with the idea of a God.

REMARKS.

1. The demonstrative to which the relative refers is sometimes to be supplied. E. g. Nunc dicis aliquid (sc. ejusmodi), quod ad rem pertineat, Now you say something to the point.

2. This rule includes relative expressions containing a limitation or restriction. Such are, — Quod sciam or intelligam, As far as I know or understand. Quod commodo tuo fiat, So far as it can be done without inconvenience to you. Quod sine alterius injuriā fiat or fieret, As far as it can be done without injury to another. Quod salvā fide possim, So far as I can honorably.*

3. When a comparative precedes, the clause introduced by quam (qui quam cuius, cui, quorum, &c.) requires the subjunctive. E. g. Major sum, quam cui possit fortuna nocere, I am superior to the injuries of fortune. Majora deliquērant, quam quibus ignosci posset, They had been guilty of too grave offences to be pardoned.†

C. When the relative is preceded by an indefinite expression, positive or negative, or by an indefinite question involving a negation, its verb is in the subjunctive.

Such expressions are est, sunt, existunt, inveniuntur, reperiuntur (with homines understood); — nemo, nullus, nihil est; — quis est? quid est? qui, quae, quod (sc. negotium, &c.) est? quantum est? quotusquisque est? &c. E. g.

Sunt, qui dicant, censeant.

There are those who say, those who suppose.

Sunt, qui dixerint, viderint.

There are those who have heard, those who have seen.

Inventus est, qui flammis impōneret manum.

There was one found who put his hand into the flames.

Fuerunt, qui dicērent.

There were those who said.

Est aliquid, quod nōn oporteat, etiāsi licet.

There is something which does not behoove us, although not unlawful.

Multi erunt, quibus recte litteras dare possis.

There will be those whom you can properly trust with letters.

Nemo est orator, qui se Demosthenis similem esse nōli.

There is no orator who is unwilling to be like Demosthenes.

Nōn deerunt, qui Cassi et Bruti meminerint.

There will not be wanting those who remember Cassius and Brutus.

* So frequently with quidem; as, Quos quidem aut invenīrim aut legērim, As far at least as I have been able to find or read. But quantum in this construction has the indicative; as, Quantum possum, As much as (as far as) I can.

† For the same reason quam, even without a relative, is sometimes followed by the subjunctive. E. g. In his litteris longior fui, quam aut vellem (instead of valle), aut quam me putāvi fore.

Helvétiiis dómi nihil erat, quó famem tolerarent.	The Helvetii had nothing at home, wherewith to still their hunger.
Quis est, qui utilia fugiat?	Who is there that seeks to avoid the useful?
Quótus quisque est, qui voluptátem neget esse bonum?	How many are there among men, that deny pleasure to be a good?
Plúres auctóres invénio,* qui Romános Horátios vocent.	I find several authors who call the Horatii Romans.
Núm ámplius quid desideras, quod respondeas?	There is nothing else that you desire to reply?
Nihil habébam nóvi, quód post accúdisset, quam dedissem ad tē litteras.	I have nothing new to communicate, that occurred after my writing this to you.

REMARKS.

1. This rule includes also the expressions non est quod, nihil est quod (quare or cur), "there is no ground or reason why"; and est ut (when it = est cur), "there is ground, reason." E. g. Est quod gaudeas, You have reason to rejoice. Non est, quod te puléat, You need not be ashamed. Nihil est, quod pertimescat, He has no cause to dread. Non est, cur eorum spes infringátur, There is no reason why they should be dejected. Ille erat ut odisset defensorem salutis meae, He had reason to hate the defender of my safety. Non est igitur ut mirandum sit, There is consequently nothing to be wondered at. Quid est, cur virtus ipsa per se non efficiat beatos? What is the reason that virtue of herself does not make men happy?

2. The subjunctive also follows habeo quod, non habeo quod. E. g. Non habeo, quod dicam, I have nothing to say. Quid habes, quod reprehendas? What fault have you to find? Non habeo, qui (= quare) utar, I have nothing to live on. Quo se vertéret, non habébat, He knew not where to turn to.†

3. When, in connection with the expressions sunt qui, a particular and determinate subject is expressed, the verb is in the indicative. E. g. Sunt autem bestiae quaedam, in quibus inest aliquid simile virtutis, There are certain animals in which there is something that resembles virtue. But when the subject is merely a general one, such as multi, pauci, nemo, &c., or is entirely suppressed, the subjunctive is the common construction, and the indicative in these cases is generally employed by poets only.

D. When the relative clause denotes the purpose, object, or motive of what has gone before, it may be resolved into a clause with ut, and the verb is in the subjunctive.

* This rule extends to the active verbs habeo, reperio, invenio, nanciscor, desidero, quaero, and relinquo, after all of which the relative may take the subjunctive. Cf. note 2.

† But this last example more properly belongs to Lesson LXXXVII. D. So likewise, Non habeo quid dicam, I know not what to say. Quid faceret, non habébat, He knew not what to do. These are indirect questions.

The relative is then either qui in the sense of ut is, or quo, "in order that" (before a comparative), or quā, ubi, unde, "where," "whence," in the sense of "in order that there, or thence."

The verbs on which such clauses depend are especially those of choosing, ordering, devoting, sending, coming, going, and receiving. E. g.

Litterae posteritatis causā repertae sunt, quae subsidio oblivioni esse possent.

Letters were invented for the benefit of posterity, as a protection against oblivion.

Dolabella venerat ipse, qui esset in consilio, et primus sententiam diceret.

Dolabella had appeared in person, so that he might take a part in the deliberation, and gave his opinion first.

Sunt multi, qui eripiunt aliis, quod aliis largiantur.

There are many who rob some of that which they wish to lavish upon others.

Cohortarer vōs, quō animo fortius essetis.

I should exhort you to be more resolute.

Darius pontem fecit in Istro flumine, quā copias traduceret.

Darius constructed a bridge, over the Danube, over which he might lead his forces.

Themistocli Artaxerxes Lampsaecum urbem donarat, unde vinum sumeret.

Artaxerxes made Themistocles a present of the city of Lampsaecum, from which he might get his wine.

E. When the clause introduced by the relative contains the ground or reason of what has gone before, the verb is in the subjunctive.

The relative is then either qui, rendered by "that," "because," or "since," or quippe qui, ut qui, utpote qui, "as one who," "inasmuch as he," &c. E. g.

Magna est Pelōpis culpa, qui nōn eruditū filium, nec docuerit, quātēnus esset quidque curandum.

The great fault of Pelops is, that he did not educate his son, nor teach him to what extent to carry everything.

Actio malūmus iter facere pedibus, qui incōmmodē navigassēmus.

We preferred to start from Actium on foot, because we had had a bad passage at sea.

Solis cādor illustrior est, quippe qui in immēso mūdo tam longē latēque collūceat.

The light of the sun is brighter (than any other), inasmuch as it shines so far and wide in the immensity of the universe.

Sunt homines naturā curiosi, ut qui sermunculis etiā fabellis-que ducantur.

Men are naturally curious, since they are influenced even by idle talk and fables.

A Catilinā Antonius nōn procul iberat, utpote qui in fugā sequeretur.

Antonius was not far from Catiline as he pursued him in his flight.

O fortunâte adolêscena, qui tûae virtûtis Homêrum praeconem invênêris !

Mê infelicem, qui per tôt annos tê vidêre nòn potuêrim ! *

O lucky young man, for having found a Homer to proclaim thy valor !

How unfortunate I am, that I have not been able to see you for so many years !

F. After the adjectives dignus, indignus, aptus, and idoneus, the question for what? is answered by the relative with the subjunctive, and sometimes by a simple infinitive. E. g.

Dignus, indignus est, qui amêtur.

He is worthy, unworthy of being loved.

Idôneus est, qui imperet.

He is competent to command.

Qui modêste paret, vidêtur, qui aliquândo impêret, dignus êsse.

He who modestly obeys seems to be worthy of commanding at some future time.

Liviânae fâbulae nòn sâtis dignae sunt, quae itêrum legântur.

The dramas of Livy are scarcely worth reading a second time.

(Méntem) sôlam censêbant idôneam (êsse), cui credêrêtur.

They held that the intellect alone was fit to be relied upon.

Nûlla videbâtur âptior persôna, quae de aetâte loquerêtur.

There seemed to be no person better qualified to discourse on old age.

Lyricôrum Horâtius fêre sôlus lêgi dignus êst.

Of the lyrical poets Horace is almost the only one worth reading.

Utêrque ôptimus êrat, dignûsque âlter êlêgi âlter êlêgere.

They both were men of the first order; and worthy the one to be chosen, and the other to choose.

G. In narration, the imperfect and pluperfect subjunctive are sometimes put after relative pronouns and adverbs, when a repeated action is spoken of. E. g.

Elephânti tâtum ab hôstibus, quacûmq; incêderent, âgmen praebebant.

The elephants formed a safe protection against the enemy, wherever they might march.

Domitiânus, quôties ôtium êssel, âlêa sê oblectâbat.

Domitian amused himself with dice-playing, whenever he was at leisure.

Sôcrates quam sê cûnque in pârtem dedisset, ômnium fâcile fuit princeps.

Socrates was confessedly the first in everything to which he had applied himself.

Nêc quisquam Pyrêrum, quâ tulisset impêtum, sustinêre vâ-luit.

Nor could any one stand against Pyrrhus, where he had charged upon the enemy.

REMARK.—The subjunctive is thus sometimes put after quum,

* In this and the preceding example, the student should notice the person of the verb, which adapts itself to that of the antecedent of the relative.

"when"; ubi and ut, in the sense of "as soon as," and after si. E. g. Id ubi dixisset, hastam in fines eorum mittebat, When (or as soon as) he had said that, he sent the javelin within their limits. But in all the cases of this rule, the indicative is even more frequently used than the subjunctive.

EXERCISE 164.

Of what illness did your sister die? — She died of the fever. — How is your brother? — My brother is no longer living. He died three months ago. — I am surprised at it, for he was very well last summer when I was in the country. — Of what did he die? — He died of apoplexy. — How is the mother of your friend? — She is not well; she had an attack of ague the day before yesterday, and this morning the fever has returned. — Has she the intermitting fever? — I do not know, but she often has cold fits. — What has become of the woman whom I saw at your mother's? — She died this morning of apoplexy. — Did the wine sell well last year? — It did not sell very well; but it will sell better next year, for there will be a great deal of it, and it will not be dear. — Why do you open the door? — Do you not see how it smokes here? — I do not see it; but you must open the window instead of opening the door. — The window does not open easily; that is the reason why I open the door. — When will you shut it? — I will shut it as soon as there is no more smoke. — Why do you not put those beautiful glasses on the small table (mensûla)? — If I put them upon that little table they will break. — Did you often go a fishing when you were in that country? — We often went a fishing and a hunting. — If you will go with us into the country, you will see the castle of my father. — You are very polite, sir; but I have seen that castle already. — Are you such a man, as to be capable of doing that (hoc facere possis)? — I am by no means so heartless; nor are you such a man as not to know who I am. — Such is our character, that we cannot be contented with anything but liberty. — Are there any who affirm that this is not true? — There are none. — Is there any one who does not understand? — There is no one. — There were many who said that you were mistaken. — Had your brother anything new to write to you? — He had many things to write to me. — Are you not fortunate for having found such a book? — I am as happy as any man in the world (for it). — Did he begin to write this morning? — He could not begin, because he had no ink. —

Is your brother competent (idoneus) to teach? — He is not competent to teach, but to write. — Is he worthy to command? — He is as worthy as any one. — Did your teacher often go out walking? — He took a walk as often as he was at leisure. — Has my son been diligent? — He was confessedly the first in everything to which he applied himself.

Lesson XCI. — PENSUM UNUM ET NONAGESIMUM.

OF THE SUBJUNCTIVE IN INTERJECTED CLAUSES.

A. Interjected clauses, in which the language or thoughts of the person spoken of are conveyed, or which are essential to the definition of what has gone before, have a verb in the subjunctive.

Clauses of this kind always occur in sentences, which are themselves dependent upon another proposition; e. g. in the construction of the Acc. cum Inf., or in sentences dependent on a conjunction, &c. They are commonly introduced either by a relative (pronoun or adverb), or by a conjunction. E. g.

Thales, qui sapientissimus in septem fuit, homines existimare dixit oportere, omnia, quae cernerentur, deorum esse plena.

Caesar hortatus est milites, ne ea, quae accidissent, graviter ferrent.

Thales, who was the wisest of the seven sages, said that men ought to consider all things beheld by our senses as full of divinities.

Caesar exhorted his soldiers not to be chagrined at what had happened.

REMARK. — Sentences, in which the language or sentiments of another (or of one's self) are stated indirectly, are said to be in the oratio obliqua, in contradistinction to the oratio directa, in which they are quoted as they were uttered. Thus the above clauses stated in the oratio directa are: "Omnia, quae cernuntur, deorum plena sunt." — "Ne ea, quae acciderunt, ferre graviter" (Do not be chagrined at what has happened).* Thus also in English: I wrote him, "I shall come to-morrow" (oratio directa); and: I wrote him that I would come to-morrow (oratio obliqua). And in the third person: He said, "I have conquered"; and indirectly: He said that he had conquered. — The following rules will elucidate these cases more fully.

B. When an interjected clause occurs in the construction of the accusativus cum infinitivo, either as an expression of the language or sentiments of the person spoken of, or otherwise as an essential part of that which is advanced in the statement, the verb of that clause is in the subjunctive. E. g.

* The student will notice here the change of mood and tense in the direct statement: quae acciderunt instead of quae accidissent; quae cernuntur instead of quae cernerentur, and the imperative ne — ferre instead of ne — ferrentur.

Mōs est Athénis, laudári in concione eos, qui sint in proéliis interfécti.

Sócrates dicere solébat, omnes in eo, quod scirent, satis ésse eloquentes.

Eléus Hippias, quum Olympiam venisset, gloriátus est, nihil esse ullá in arte rerum omnium, quód ipse nesciret; nec solum has artes, quibus liberales doctrinae atque ingenuae contineréntur; sed anulum, quem habéret, pallium, quó amictus, sóccos, quibus indútus esset, se suá manu confecísse.

It is customary at Athens to deliver public eulogies on those who have fallen in battle.

Socrates was in the habit of saying, that all men were eloquent enough in what they knew.

Hippias of Elis, having come to Olympia, boasted, that there was nothing in any one of all the arts, which he himself did not understand; and that these arts were not only those, in which the liberal sciences were contained, but that he himself had manufactured with his own hand the ring which he wore, the cloak which he had on, and the shoes that were on his feet.

Príncipes Aeduórum, nōn dubitare se, dicébant, quin, si Helvétios superávérint Románi, uná cum reliquá Galliá Aeduís libertátem sint ereptúri.

The leaders of the Aedui said, that they had no doubt but that, if the Romans conquered the Helvetii, they would deprive the Aedii, together with all the rest of Gaul, of their liberties.

REMARKS.

1. When the interjected clause is an addition of the speaker or writer himself, and not the language or sentiments of the subject spoken of, the verb is in the indicative. E. g. Cave tibi amicos esse crédas, quos vicisti, Beware of regarding those whom you have conquered as your friends.

2. If the interjected relative clause is merely explanatory of a fact, or a circumlocution for a noun or adjective, its verb is sometimes in the indicative. E. g. Caesar per exploratores certior factus est, ex eá parte vici, quam Gallis concessérat, omnes noctu discessisse, Cæsar was informed by his scouts, that during the night all had left that section of the village which he had conceded to the Gauls. Nam sic habetúte, magistratibus íisque, qui praesunt, rempublicam continéri, For these shall be your sentiments, that the republic is maintained by its magistrates and by those who are at the head of it.

C. When the interjected clause occurs in a sentence introduced by a conjunction, as an essential part of the purpose, request, precept, command, or supposition of the same, the verb of that clause is in the subjunctive. E. g.

Ubi orabant, ut sibi Cæsar auxilium ferret; vel, si id facere prohiberetur, exercitum modo Rhenum transportaret.

Rex imperavit, ut, quæ bello opus essent, pararentur.

Eo simus animo, ut nihil in malis ducamus, quod sit vel a deo immortalis vel a natura constitutum.

The Ubi besought Cæsar to come to their assistance, or, if he was prevented from doing so, to bring at least his army across the Rhine.

The king ordered such preparations to be made, as might be necessary for the war.

Let us be so disposed, as to consider nothing an evil, that may have been appointed either by the immortal God or by nature.

REMARKS.

1. When the subjunctive clause introduced by ut does not denote a purpose, command, &c., but merely a result or definition (as after *tam, ita, talis, &c.), the verb of the interjected clause is in the indicative. E. g. Eloquendi vis efficit, ut ea, quæ ignoramus, discere, et ea, quæ scimus, alios docere possimus. The power of speech enables us to learn the things we are ignorant of, and to teach others what we know. Asia tam optima est et fertilis, ut multitudine earum rerum, quæ exportantur, facile omnibus terris antecellat. Asia is so rich and fertile, that in the multiplicity of exportable products it easily excels all other countries.

2. The verb of the interjected clause is sometimes in the indicative, when the speaker adds it on his own account. E. g. Xerxem litteris certiores feci, id agi, ut pons, quem in Hellesponto fecerat, dissolveretur, I informed Xerxes by letter, that a plan was on foot to destroy the bridge which he had constructed over the Hellespont.

D. Dependent clauses generally, introduced by relatives or conjunctions, take a verb in the subjunctive, when they convey the sentiments of the person or party spoken of, and not of the speaker himself. E. g.

Ennius non censet, lugendam esse mortem, quam immortalitas consequatur.

Socrates accusatus est, quod corrumpere juventutem et novas superstitiones induceret.

Noctu ambulabat in publico Themistocles, quod somnum capere non posset.

Plinius major perire omne tempus arbitrabatur, quod studiis non impertiretur.

Ennius does not think that death is to be regretted, which (in his opinion) is followed by immortality.

Socrates was impeached, because (as his enemies alleged) he corrupted the youth, and introduced new superstitions.

Themistocles was in the habit of walking abroad at night, because (he said that) he could not get any sleep.

Pliny the elder considered all the time lost which (he said) was not devoted to his studies.

Aristides nōne ob eam causam Was not Aristides expelled from expulsus est patriā, quod prae- his country, because (it was alter modum iustus esset? leged) that he was too just?

REMARKS.

1. In all the above examples the writer himself does not indorse or positively affirm the opinion advanced in the dependent clause; if he did, the verb would be in the indicative.

2. On the use of the reflexives se, sui, sibi, and suus in this construction, see Lesson LXXV. C.

3. Instead of the subjunctive of the verb itself, the expressions quod dicēret, quod arbitrarētur, "because he said," "because he thought," are sometimes put, and the verb is made dependent upon these. E. g. *Ab Atheniensibus, locum sepulturae intra urbem ut darent, impetrare non potui, quod religione se impediri dicērent, I could not prevail upon the Athenians to grant me a burial-place within the limits of the city, because they said that they were prevented from doing so by religious scruples.

EXERCISE 165.

When did you see my father's castle ? — I saw it when I was travelling last year. It is one of the finest castles that I have ever seen ; it is seen far off. — How is that said ? — That is not said. That cannot be comprehended. — Cannot everything be expressed in your language ? — Everything can be expressed, but not as in yours. — Will you rise early to-morrow ? — It will depend upon circumstances ; if I go to bed early, I shall rise early, but if I go to bed late, I shall rise late. — Will you love my children ? — If they are good, I shall love them. — Will you dine with us to-morrow ? — If you will get ready (si vis apparare) the food I like, I shall dine with you. — Have you already read the letter which you received this morning ? — I have not opened it yet. — When will you read it ? — I shall read it as soon as I have time. — Of what use is that ? — It is of no use. — Why have you picked it up ? — I have picked it up, in order to show it to you. — Can you tell me what it is ? — I cannot tell you, for I do not know ; but I shall ask my brother, who will tell you. — Where have you found it ? — I have found it on the bank of the river, near the wood. — Did you perceive it from afar ? — I did not want to perceive it from afar, for I passed by the side of the river. — Have you ever seen such a thing ? — Never. — Is it useful to speak much ? — If one wishes to learn a foreign language, it is useful to speak a great deal. — Is it as useful to write as to speak ? — It is more useful to speak than to write ; but in order to learn a foreign language, one must do both. — Is it useful to write all that one says ? — That is useless. — Does your uncle walk often ? — He walks every morning before breakfast, because (he says) it is wholesome (salutare). — Why was he expelled from the academy ? — He was expelled from it, because (it was alleged that) he was sick. — What did he boast of? — He boasted that he had not only learnt all the lessons which are contained in this book, but that he himself had with his own hand written all the exercises, belonging to every one of them. — What did your master command you to do? — He commanded me to bring him the book which he had lent me.

EXERCISE 166.

Where did you take this book from? — I took it out of the room of your friend (fem.). — Is it right to take the books of other people? — It is not right, I know; but I wanted it, and I hope that your friend will not be displeased; for I will return it to her as soon as I have read it. — What is your name? — My name is William. — What is your sister's name? — Her name is Eleanor. — Why does Charles complain of his sister? — Because she has taken his pens. — Of whom do those children complain? — Francis complains of Eleanor, and Eleanor of Francis. — Who is right? — They are both wrong; for Eleanor wishes to take Francis's books and Francis Eleanor's. — To whom have you lent Schiller's works? — I have lent the first volume to William and the second to Elizabeth. — How is that said in French? — That is not said in French. — How is that said in German? — It is said thus. — Has the tailor already brought you your new coat? — He has brought it to me, but it does not fit me well. — Will he make you another? — He must make me another; for rather than wear it, I will give it away. — Will you use that horse? — I shall not use it. — Why will you not use it? — Because it does not suit me. — Will you pay for it? — I will rather pay for it than use it. — To whom do those fine books belong? — They belong to William. — Who has given them to him? — His good father. — Will he read them? — He will tear them rather than read them. — Are you sure that he will not read them? — I am sure of it, for he has told me so.

Lesson XCII. — PENSUM ALTERUM ET NONAGESIMUM.

OF THE IMPERATIVE MOOD.

A. The imperative of Latin verbs has two forms, called the imperative present and the imperative future. Both of these serve to express a command, sometimes also a wish, an advice or exhortation, that something should be done. But the imperative present requires the immediate performance of an injunction, whereas the future implies that something should be done in connection with (i. e. in consequence of, after, or simultaneously with) some other act. E. g. PRES. Discède! Leave (be off)!

Discēdīte! Leave ye! FUT. Quum legēris, tum discedīto!
Leave, after you have read!

NOTE.—The second action, on which the imperative future depends, is not always expressed, but may generally be supplied from the context. — Compare F. II.

B. FORMATION OF THE IMPERATIVE.

1. The imperative present active is formed from the present infinitive, by dropping the termination “re.” As,—

1. amāre — āmā, love thou.
2. monēre — mōnē, remind thou.
3. legēre — lēgē, read thou.
- (3.) capēre — cāpē, take thou.
4. audire — audi, hear thou.

2. The imperative present passive has the same form as the present infinitive active in all the conjugations. As,—

1. amāre, be thou loved.
2. monēre, be thou reminded.
3. legēre, be thou read.
- (3.) capēre, be thou taken.
4. audire, be thou heard.

3. The imperative future active is formed from the present by changing, 1. ā, 2. ē, 3. ě, 4. ī, into, 1. āto, 2. ēto, 3. yto, 4. ito, and the passive, by adding r to these terminations of the active As,—

1. amā — amāto, amātor, thou shalt love, be loved.
2. monē — monēto, monētor, thou shalt remind, be reminded.
3. legē — lēgito, lēgitor, thou shalt read, be read.
- (3.) capē — capito, capitor, thou shalt take, be taken.
4. audi — audito, auditor, thou shalt hear, be heard.

INFLECTION OF THE IMPERATIVE.

C. The following paradigms exhibit the inflection of the imperative, active and passive.

FIRST CONJUGATION.

ACTIVE.		PASSIVE.
Present.		Present.
S.	āmā , love (thou).	S.	amāre , be thou loved.
P.	amāte , love ye.	P.	amāminī , be ye loved.
Future.		Future.
S.	2. amāto , thou shalt love.	S.	2. amātor , thou shalt be loved.
S.	3. amāto , let him love.	S.	3. amātor , let him be loved.
P.	2. amatōte , ye shall love.	P.	2. amāminor , ye shall be loved.
P.	3. amanto , let them love.	P.	3. amantor , let them be loved.

SECOND CONJUGATION.

ACTIVE.		PASSIVE.
Present.		Present.
S.	monē, remind (thou).	S.	monēre, be thou reminded.
P.	monēte, remind ye.	P.	monēminī, be ye reminded.
Future.		Future.
S. 2.	monēto, thou shalt remind.	S. 2.	monētor, thou shalt be reminded.
S. 3.	monēto, let him remind.	S. 3.	monētor, let him be reminded.
P. 2.	monetōte, ye shall remind.	P. 2.	monēminor, ye shall be reminded.
P. 3.	monento, let them remind.	P. 3.	monentor, let them be reminded.

THIRD CONJUGATION.

Present.		Present.
S.	legē, read (thou).	S.	legere, be thou read.
P.	legite, read ye.	P.	legimini, be ye read.
Future.		Future.
S. 2.	legito, thou shalt read.	S. 2.	legitor, thou shalt be read.
S. 3.	legito, let him read.	S. 3.	legitor, let him be read.
P. 2.	legitōte, ye shall read.	P. 2.	legiminor, ye shall be read.
P. 3.	legunto, let them read.	P. 3.	leguntor, let them be read.

FOURTH CONJUGATION.

Present.		Present.
S.	audī, hear (thou).	S.	audire, be thou heard.
P.	audite, hear ye.	P.	audimini, be ye heard.
Future.		Future.
S. 2.	audito, thou shalt hear.	S. 2.	auditor, thou shalt be heard.
S. 3.	audito, let him hear.	S. 3.	auditor, let him be heard.
P. 2.	auditōte, ye shall hear.	P. 2.	audiminor, ye shall be heard.
P. 3.	audifunto, let them hear.	P. 3.	audifuntor, let them be heard.

So conjugate apportā, bring; dā, give; laudā, praise; regnā, rule; — audē, dare; gaudē, rejoice; habē, have; jubē, command; studē, strive; — agē, come on (stir); mitte, send; pōne, put; scribe, write; sūme, take; — apēri, open; puni, punish; repēri, find; sentī, feel; veni, come.

IMPERATIVE OF DEPONENT VERBS.

D. The imperative of deponent verbs follows the analogy of the passive voice. Thus:—

FIRST CONJUGATION.

Present.

- S. hortāre, exhort (thou).
 P. hortāmini, exhort ye.

Future.

- S. 2. hortātor, thou shalt exhort.
 S. 3. hortātor, let him exhort.
 P. 2. hortāminor, ye shall exhort.
 P. 3. hortantor, let them exhort.

SECOND CONJUGATION.

Present.

- S. verēre, fear (thou).
 P. verēmini, fear ye.

Future.

- S. 2. verētor, thou shalt fear.
 S. 3. verētor, let him fear.
 P. 2. verēminor, ye shall fear.
 P. 3. verentor, let them fear.

THIRD CONJUGATION.

Present.

- S. loquēre, speak (thou).
 P. loquimini, speak ye.

Future.

- S. 2. loquitor, thou shalt speak.
 S. 3. loquitor, let him speak.
 P. 2. loquimīnor, ye shall speak.
 P. 3. loquuntor, let them speak.

FOURTH CONJUGATION.

Present.

- S. blandire, flatter (thou).
 P. blandimini, flatter ye.

Future.

- S. 2. blanditor, thou shalt flatter.
 S. 3. blanditor, let him flatter.
 P. 2. blandimīnor, ye shall flatter.
 P. 3. blandiuntor, let them flatter.

So inflect comilāre, escort; morāre, delay (stay); laetāre, rejoice; recordāre, remember; — merēre, earn; miserēre, pity; tuēre, defend; — fruēre, enjoy; morēre, die; obliviscēre, forget; ulciscēre, revenge; utēre, use; — experire, experience (try); largire, spend; opperire, wait for (expect); ordire, begin; partire, divide.

IMPERATIVE OF IRREGULAR VERBS.

E. Of the irregular verbs, possum, volo, malo, queo, nequeo, and fiō want the imperative mood. That of the rest is as follows: —

1. Esse, to be. — PRES. ēs — este, be thou, be ye. FUT. 2. esto — estōte, thou shalt be, ye shall be; 3. esto — sunto, let him be, let them be.

So the compounds abes, ades, dees, &c. Some of which, however, like possum, do not admit of an imperative.

2. Edēre, to eat. — PRES. ede or ēs — edite or este. FUT. 2. edito or esto — editōte or estōte; 3. edito or esto — edunto.

So the compounds adēde, ambēde, comēde, &c.

3. Ferre, to bear. — ACT. PRES. fēr — ferite. FUT. 2. ferto — fertōte; 3. ferto — ferunto. — PASS. PRES. ferre — ferimini. FUT. 2. fertor — feriminor; 3. fertor — feruntor.

So also affer, confer, perfer, &c.

4. Nolle, to be unwilling. PRES. nōli — nolite. FUT. 2. nolito — nolitōte; 3. nolito — nolunto.

5. Ire, to go. — PRES. i — ite. FUT. 2. ito — itōte; 3. ito — eunto.

So the compounds abi, exi, peri, prodi, redi, &c.

6. Inquam, I say. — PRES. inque — inquitte. FUT. inquito. — The rest is wanting. That of aio, I say, is ai, but obsolete.

7. Memini, I remember, has only the forms memento — memento!, remember thou, ye.

8. A few verbs occur in the imperative alone. They are apage, away, begone! ave, hail! salve, hail (good morning, &c.); vale, farewell; and cedo, say, tell me, let see. The remaining forms of these are avēte, avēto; salvēte, salvēto; valēte, valēto.

REMARKS.

1. The verbs dicō, dūcō, faciō, and fēro drop the final e of the imperative present singular, and have dic, duc, fac, fer. So also the compounds of those verbs; as, educ, calesfac, effe, perfer, &c. The only exceptions are the compounds of faciō, which change the radical a into i; as, confice, perfice, &c. — Of the verb sci, it is customary to say scito — scitote instead of sci — scite.

2. In an imperative clause, the English "not" is always ne instead of non, and the English "nor" neve instead of neque. E. g. Ne crucia te, Do not torment yourself. Ne saevi tantopere, Do not be so fierce. Ne audēto accedēre neve loquitor, Let him not venture to approach nor speak.

3. Instead of the simple imperative, it is not uncommon to employ the formulas cura (or curāto) ut, fac ut (or fac without ut), with the present subjunctive. E. g. Cura, ut quam primum venias, Try to come as soon as you can. Fac (ut) animo forti magnōque sis, Be brave (strive to be brave) and magnanimous. So also in prohibitions, fac ne, cave ne (or cave without ne), with the subjunctive, and nōli with the infinitive. E. g. Fac ne venire praetermittas, Do not fail to come. Cave (ne) putes, Do not suppose (Beware of supposing). Nōli existimāre, Do not think. Nōlitote dubitāre, Be unwilling to doubt.

4. Instead of the imperative, the Romans frequently employ certain tenses of the indicative and subjunctive. They are, —

a) The first future indicative; as, Facies (= facito), ut sciam, Let me know. Sed valēbis (= vale), meaque negotia vidēbis (= vide), But farewell, and attend to my interests. Tu non cessabis (= ne cessa) nosque diliges (= dilige), Do you not cease from your efforts, and preserve your regard for us.

b) The second person of the present subjunctive. E. g. Quum te bene confirmāris, ad nos venias (= venito), When you shall have properly established your health again, you must come to see us. Tuā quod nihil refert, ne cures (= ne cura), Do not meddle with things that do not concern you. Quod boni datur, frūare (= frūere), dum licet, Enjoy the proffered good while it is lawful.

c) The third person of the present subjunctive. E. g. Audiat, Let him hear. Videat, Let him see. Desinant furere, Let them cease to rage. Donis impii ne placare audeant deos, The impious shall not dare to appease the gods with presents.*

* The subjunctive for this person is even more common than the imperative proper. Compare Lesson LXXXVII. B. Rem.

d) The second person of the perfect subjunctive, chiefly in negative commands with ne. E. g. Hoc ne feceris (= ne facto), You shall not do this. Nihil ignovēris (= ignoscito), Do not pardon anything. Misericordiā commōtus ne sis, Do not be moved with compassion.

F. OF THE USE OF THE IMPERATIVE.

I. The imperative present and its equivalents (cf. E. Rem. 3, 4) are used in direct commands or prohibitions, addressed by the speaker himself, and on his own authority. E. g.

Serva, obsecro, hæc nobis bona. Preserve these blessings unto us, I pray thee.

Iustitiam cole et pietatem. Cultivate justice and piety.

Subvenite misero; ite obviam injuriæ. Come ye to the rescue of an unhappy man; face the injustice.

Procul, o procul este, totòque abssistite lūco! Away! away! Keep off from the entire grove!

Nimium ne crede colōri. Do not trust beauty too much.

Quæso, animum ne desponde. Do not, I pray you, give up your courage.

Cura, ut valeas. Farewell!

Magnam fuc animum habes et spem bonam. Keep up your courage and hope.

Fac, ne quid aliud cures, nisi ut quam commodissime convalescas. See that you attend to nothing else, except the most suitable recovery of your health.

Cave, si me amas, existimes, me abjecisse curam reipublicæ. Beware, I beseech you, of supposing that I have thrown aside the cares of public life.

Noli te oblivisci Ciceronem esse. Do not forget that you are Cicero.

Nolite id velle, quod fieri non potest. Do not desire that which is impossible.

Tu nihil invitâ dices faciêsv Minervâ. Say or do nothing but what you are fit for.

Si certum est facere, facias: verum ne post culpam conferas in me. If you are determined to do it, do so; but do not afterwards cast the blame on me.

Ne quæras; efferant, quæ secum huc attulerunt. Do not ask me; let them take away what they have brought here with them.

Quod dubitas, ne feceris. Do not perform what you are in doubt about.

II. The imperative future is used in indirect commands or prohibitions, especially in contracts, laws, and wills, but also as the form of a request, demand, advice, or moral precept. E. g.

Amicitia his legibus esto: — Excedito urbibus, agris, vicis, ca- There shall be peace on these conditions: let him evacuate the

EXERCISE 167.

Have you executed my commission? — I have executed it. — Has your brother executed the commission which I gave him? — He has executed it. — Would you execute a commission for me? — I am under so many obligations to you, that I will always execute your commissions when it shall please you to give me any. — Ask the horse-dealer (mango, ōnis) whether he can let me have the horse at the price which I have offered him. — I am sure that he would be satisfied, if you would add a few florins more. — I will not add anything. If he can let me have it at that price, let him do so; if not, let him keep it. — Good morning, my children! Have you done your task? — You well know that we always do it; for we must be ill not to do it. — What do you give us to do to-day? — I give you the ninety-third lesson to study, and the exercises belonging to it to do, — that is to say, the 168th and 169th. Endeavor to commit no errors. — Is this bread sufficient for you? — It would be sufficient for me, if I was not very hungry. — When did your brother embark for America? — He sailed on the thirtieth of last month. — Do you promise me to speak to your brother? — I do promise you, you may depend upon it. — I rely upon you. — Will you work harder for next lesson than you have done for this? — I will work harder. — May I (licēne mihi) rely upon it? — You may. — Have patience, my dear friend, and be not sad; for sadness alters nothing (nihil emendat). — Be not afraid of your creditors; be sure that they will do you no harm. — You must have patience: I will pay all that you have advanced me (mutuum dedisti). — Do not believe that I have forgotten it, for I think of it every day (in animo verso quotidie). — Do not believe that I have had your gold watch, or that Miss Wilhelmine has had your silver snuffbox, for I saw both in the hands of your sister when you were at the concert. — What a beautiful inkstand you have there! pray, lend it to me. — What do you wish to do with it? — I wish to show it to my sister. — Take it, but take care of it, and do not break it. — Do not fear. — What do you want of my brother? — I want to borrow some money of him. — Borrow some of somebody else. — If he will not lend me any, I will borrow some of somebody else. — You will do well. — Do not wish (for) what you cannot have, but be contented with what Providence (providentia diutina) has given you, and consider (et repūta) that there are many men who have not what you have. — Life being short, let us endeavor to make it as agreeable as possible. — Have you done your exercises? — I could not do them, because my brother was not at home. — You must not get your exercises done by your brother, but you must do them yourself.

Lesson XCIII. — PENSUM NONAGESIMUM TERTIUM.

ADVERBS.

A. Adverbs are indeclinable particles, which serve to qualify verbs, nouns, adjectives, participles, and other adverbs. E. g.

Bene, recte, egregie dixisti.

You have spoken well, correctly, nobly.

Natura ratioque cavet, ne quid homo indecore effeminatęque faciat.

Nature and reason enjoin that man should do nothing that is unbecoming or effeminate.

C. Flaminius, consul tērum.

C. Flaminius, a second time consul.

Nimis multa. Valde magnus. Maxime idoneus.

Too many things. Very great. Most competent.

In odium adducuntur adversarii, si quod eorum superbe, crudeliter, malitiose factum proferuntur.

Our adversaries will incur odium, if anything haughty, cruel, or malicious shall be alleged of them.

Nimis ferociter legatos nostros increpant.

They are too ferocious in their clamors against our ambassadors.

B. Adverbs are divided into various classes, according to their signification. The principal relations expressed by them are those of space, time, quantity, quality, measure, number, degree, manner, &c.

I. Adverbs expressing determinations of space may be divided into those denoting, —

1. PLACE. E. g. hic, here; ibi, istic, illic, there; ubi, where (for a complete list of these see IV.); — intus, within; subtus, below; alibi, elsewhere; — intro, in, into the house; retro, backwards; porro, farther; protēnus, forward; sursum, upwards; rectā, right on; ultrō citrōque, up and down; — desūper, down, from above; indulēm, from the same place; utrimque, from both sides; — prope, near; longe, procul, far; passim, here and there; praesto, at hand; — usquam, usquam, somewhere; nusquam, nowhere.

2. QUANTITY, DIMENSION, or MEASURE. E. g. multum, much; paulum, little; parum, but little, too little; nimis, nintum, too much; satis, enough; — longe, long; late, wide; alte, high; crasse, thick; arte, tight; — modice, moderately; largiter, abundantly; breviter, shortly.

3. ORDER or RANK. E. g. primo, secundo, tertio, quarto, &c., in the first, second, third, fourth, &c. place; * postrēmo, in the last place; deinceps, one after another.

II. Adverbs expressing determinations of time may be divided into those denoting, —

1. TIME PROPER. E. g. diu, long; paulisper, parumper, for a little while; usque, incessantly; — jam, now; nuper, lately; pridem, long ago; heri, yesterday; cras, to-morrow; olim, once; quondam, at some time, once; nondum, not yet; alias, at another time; ante, antea, before; post, postea, afterwards; interdum, sometimes; interim, interea, meanwhile; duclum, long since; unquam, ever; nunquam, never, &c. To these add the correlatives of IV.

2. MULTITUDE or NUMBER. E. g. saepe, often; quotidie, daily; identidem, repeatedly; deinde, after that; subinde, directly after that; denique, finally, briefly; — semel, once; bis, twice; ter, quater, quinques, sexies, &c., three, four, five, six, &c. times. (On these numeral adverbs see Lesson XXI. E.)

3. ORDER or DIVISION. E. g. primum, ūterum, tertium, quartum, postrimum, for the first, second, third, fourth, last time; * — dupliciter, doubly; bifariam, in two parts, on two sides; trifariam, threefold, on three sides; quadrifariam, fourfold, on four sides; multifariam, plurifariam, omnifariam, on many, on several, on all sides; — bipartito, tripartito, quadripartito, in two, three, four parts, twofold, &c., &c.

III. Adverbs of quality may be subdivided into those denoting, —

1. QUALITY PROPER. E. g. bene, well; male, badly; perperam, incorrectly; frustra, in vain; gratis, for nothing; sedūlo, busily; subito, suddenly; tuto, safely; certo, certainly; raro, seldom; crebro, frequently; vulgo, generally; plerumque, for the most part, &c.

2. MANNER. E. g. facile, easily; docte, learnedly; elegantē, elegantly; gregatim, in flocks; feliciter, happily; prudenter, prudently, &c.

3. LIMITATION or DEGREE. E. g. prope, propemodum, nearly; paene, almost; fere, ferme, almost, about; praesertim, particularly; precipue, especially; saltem, at least; dumtaxat, only; vix, scarcely; quidem, indeed, at least; ne — quidem, not even; prorsus, entirely; omnino, altogether, wholly.

4. COMPARISON or SIMILITUDE. E. g. sicut, as, just as; perinde, just as if; aliter, secus, otherwise; aeque, equally; — divinitus, from God, divinely; humanitus, after the manner of men (and others in itus); — simul, undē, together.

5. ASSENT, AFFIRMATION, or NEGATION. E. g. ita, etiam, yes;

* And so on from all the ordinals.

non, no; haud, not at all; nae, surely; sane, profecto (= pro facto), really, indeed; utique, undoubtedly; vero, truly, really; nimirum, scilicet, videlicet, nempe, of course, certainly, forsooth, namely; quippe, indeed, to wit; aliōquin, otherwise, if not; imo (inmo), nay, rather; nequāquam, haudquāquam, by no means; neutiquam, minime, not at all.

6. INTERROGATION. E. g. num, whether? an, perhaps? -ne, then? cur, why? quidni, why not?

7. POSSIBILITY, REALITY, NECESSITY. E. g. forte, by chance, perchance; forsan, fortan, forsitan, fortassis, fortasse, perhaps; utinam, would that! certo, certainly; necesse, necessarily.

IV. A number of adverbs are correlative, i. e. they have a certain mutual relation and correspondence of form and signification.

Correlatives correspond with each other as demonstratives, relatives, interrogatives, indefinites, and generals, and denote either a place, time, quality, or degree. The following is a list of the most important of them:—

DEMONST.	RELAT.	INTERR.	INDEF.	GENERAL
hic , ibi , istic , illic	{	ubi ubi ?	sicubi , necubi , ali- cubi	{ ubicunque , ubiubi
huc , eo , istuc , illuc			siquo , nequo , ali- quo
hac , eā , istac , illac	{	quā quā ?	siquā , nequā , ali- quā	{ quacunque , quāquā .
hinc , inde , istinc , illinc			sicunde , necunde , alicunde
tum , tunc , dum , etiam- nunc , nunc	{	quum quando ?	siquando , nequan- do , aliquando	{ quandoque , quandocun- que
toties		quoties quoties ?	aliquoties
tam (dam , nam) ita , sic	quam ut , uti	quam ? ut ?	aliquam —	quamquam utecunque , utut .

REMARKS.

1. The relation denoted by adverbs may frequently be expressed by cases with or without prepositions. E. g. cum curā = diligenter, carefully, with care; cum fide = fideliter, faithfully; cum voluptate = libenter, with pleasure; eo tempore = tum, at that time, then; hoc loco = hic, in this place, here, &c.

2. Adverbs of quality ending in e or ter (vide C. 1), and many of those in o (C. 6), are susceptible of comparison like adjectives. E. g. docte, doctius, doctissime; fortiter, fortius, fortissime; tuto, tutius, tutissime. (See Lesson XLII.) Among comparatives may be included a few diminutives; as, longe — longūle, somewhat far off; saepe — saepticūle, saepiuscūle, somewhat often, oftener; melius — meliuscūle, a little better; primum — primūle, first, firstly.

DERIVATION OF ADVERBS.

C. Adverbs are either primitive or derivative, simple or compound.

Primitive adverbs are irregular in form, and have consequently no definite terminations. E. g. jam, nunc, tum, his, semel, vix, sic, non, &c.

Derivative adverbs, on the other hand, assume regular terminations, such as ē, ter, um, ē, itus, tim, sim, &c.

Derivatives are formed either from nouns, adjectives, pronouns, or participles. They are as follows:—

1. Adverbs in ē denote a quality, and are formed from adjectives and participles of the first and second declensions. Those in ter denote manner, and are formed from adjectives and participles of the third declension. E. g. altē, high; latē, wide; longē, long, far; liberē, freely; doctē, learnedly; libenter, willingly; elegantē, elegantly; fideliter, faithfully; prudenter, prudently, &c. Hence redundant adjectives give rise to adverbs of both these terminations. E. g. hilarē and hilariter, from hilarus and hilaris;—luculente, opulente, turbulente, and luculenter, opulenter, turbulenter, from luculentus and luculens, &c. So also humānē and humaniter, firmē and firmiter,* &c.

Irregular are benē, malē (with short e), and omnino, from bonus, malus, and omnis.

2. Adverbs in um and ē are derived from neuter adjectives of the second and third declensions, without any change of form. E. g. multum, paulum, parvum (from parrus), primum, secundum, &c.;—impunē, sublimē, facilē, difficilē (instead of the more common faciliter, difficiliter), &c. So those in ā from neuters plural; as, crebrā, frequently; acerbā, fiercely.

3. Adverbs in itus convey the notion of origin, source, or manner, and are derived from nouns and adjectives. E. g. funditus, radicibus, stirpibus, from the foundation, by the root, root and branch; divinitus, from God, divinely; humanitus, after the manner of men, human; antiquitus, of old, anciently; penitus, from or in the inmost part, inwardly.†

4. Adverbs in tim and sim denote the manner of a condition or state distributively, and are derived from supines, adjectives, and nouns. E. g. conjunctim, incisim, ordinatim, separatim, strictim, conjunctim, in short clauses, in regular order, separately, closely (briefly);—gregatim, in flocks; acervatim, in heaps; furtim, stealthily; virum,

* Only a few adjectives in us, a, um have thus a double adverb, like those which are redundant.

† So, after the analogy of these, continus, close at hand; eminus, from a distance; intus, within; subtus, below, from below; to which add extrinsecus, intrinsecus, and mordicus.

man by man; singulatim, singly; paulatim, by degrees; privatim, privately. So also statim, at once; raptim, rapidly; cautim, cautiously; carpim, by parts or bits; caesim, with the edge (opposed to punctim, with the point); divisim, separately; sensim, gradually, &c.

5. An extensive class of adverbs are accusatives (singular or plural) of nouns, pronouns, adjectives, and participles. E. g. bifuriam, omnifariam (sc. partem), in two parts, on all sides; partim (= partem), partly, in part; examussim, exactly; affatim, abundantly; — foras, (= fores), out of doors (motion); alias, elsewhere; — versum (or -us), towards, in that direction; versum (or -us), again.* Pronominals are hinc, istinc, illinc, hence, thence; huc, istuc, illuc, hither, thither; utrinque, on both sides; intèrim, meanwhile; quam, how, how much; quin, quidni, why not? nequidquam, in vain, to no purpose.

6. Others again are ablatives (singular or plural) of nouns, pronouns, &c. E. g. forte (from fors), perchance, perhaps; pridie (from pris — dies), postrulie, perendie, on the day before, the day after, the day after to-morrow; heri, yesterday; luci, by day; temperi, in time; rite (= ritu), properly; frustrâ, in vain; dextrâ (sc. manû), on the right hand; laevâ, sinistrâ, on the left; certo, with certainty; crebro, repeatedly; oppido, very, exceedingly; merito, deservedly, &c. Pronominal ablatives are hic, istic, illic, here, there; ibi, there; alibi, elsewhere; ubi, where; ubique, everywhere; utroque, on both sides; qui, how? †

7. Adverbs derived from verbs are dumtaxat (= dum + taxat), merely, at least; scilicet (= scire + licet), it is plain, verily; and videlicet (= videre + licet), you can see, plainly. To these add mordicus, with the teeth, tooth and nail (from mordeo).

8. Many adverbs of the Latin language are compounds. These are formed, —

a) By the union of two adverbs, or of an adverb and another part of speech. E. g. sicut, velut, tamquam, as if; quousque, how far? jamdudum, long ago; — alicubi, elsewhere; nequidquam, by no means; — undelibet, from any place you please; ubique, wherever you please; adhuc, thus far; deinde, thence, then; necubi, lest anywhere.

b) By the union of other parts of speech. E. g. hodie, to-day; postrulie, the day after; quomodo, how; denuo (= de novo), again; scilicet, forsooth; postea, afterwards; alioqui, otherwise, &c.

Sweet.

{ Dulcis, e : suavis, e. Adv. dulciter, suaviter.

Mild, soft, gentle, placid.

{ Lēnis, mitis, mollis, e; placidus, a, um.

{ Adv. leniter, molliter; placide.

* To these may be added multum, tantum, solum, primum, secundum, and all those enumerated in Case 2.

† Similar to these are the old datives of motion, eo, thither; eodem, to the same place; huc, isto, istuc, illo, hither, thither; quo, whither; aliquo, somewhere; alio, in another direction.

Agreeable, grateful.	{ Grātus, jucundus, a, um; suāvis.
Sweet wine, honey.	{ Adv. jucunde, suaviter.
A sweet song; a sweet voice;	Vinum, mel dulce.
sweet flowers.	Suāvis cantus; suāvis vox; suāvac
A mild air, breeze.	flōres.
A gentle zephyr.	Aër mollis; ventus lēnis; aura, ae, f.

EXERCISE 168.

Do your scholars learn their exercises by heart? — They will rather tear them than learn them by heart. — What does this man ask me for? — He asks you for the money which you owe him. — If he will repair to-morrow morning to my house, I will pay him what I owe him. — He will rather lose his money than repair thither. — Charles the Fifth, who spoke fluently several European languages, said that we should speak Spanish with the gods, Italian with our mistress (amīcūla), French with our friend, German with soldiers, English with geese, Hungarian with horses, and Bohemian with the Devil. — Why does the mother of our old servant shed tears? What has happened to her? — She sheds tears because the old clergyman, her friend, who was so very good to her (qui ei tam multa beneficia tribuērat), died a few days ago. — Of what illness did he die? — He was struck with apoplexy. — Have you helped your father to write his letters? — I have helped him. — Will you help me to work when we go to town? — I will help you to work, if you will help me to get a livelihood. — Have you inquired after the merchant who sells so cheap? — I have inquired after him; but nobody could tell me what has become of him. — Where did he live when you were here three years ago? — He lived then in Charles Street, No. 55. — How do you like this wine? — I like it very well; but it is a little sour. — Have you already received the works of Cæsar and Cicero? — I have received Cæsar's only; as for those of Cicero, I expect to receive them next week. — How does your sister like those apples? — She likes them very well; but she says that they are a little too sweet. — Will you have the goodness to pass that plate to me? — With much pleasure. — Do you wish me to pass these fishes to you? — I will thank you to pass them to me. — Shall I pass the bread to your sister? — You will oblige me by passing it to her. — How does your mother like our food? — She likes it very well; but she says that she has eaten enough. — What dost thou ask me for? — Will you be kind enough to give me a little bit of that mutton? — Will you pass me the bottle, if you please? — Have you not drunk enough? — Not yet; for I am still thirsty. — Shall I pour out some wine for you? — No, I like cider better. — Why do you not eat? — I do not know what to eat. — Who knocks at the door? — It is a foreigner. — Why does he cry? — He cries because a great misfortune has happened to him. — What has happened to you? — Nothing has happened to me. — Where will you go to this evening? — I don't know where to go to. — Where will your brothers go to? — I do not know where they will go to; as for me, I shall go to the theatre. — Why do you go to town? — I go thither in order to purchase some books. — Will you go thither with me? — I will go with you; but I do not know what to do there. — Must I sell to that man on credit? — You may sell to him, but not on credit; you must not trust him, for he will not pay you. — Has he already deceived anybody? — He has already deceived several merchants who have trusted him. — Must I trust those ladies? — You may trust them; but as for me, I shall not trust them; for I have often been deceived by the women, and that is the reason why I say, we must not trust everybody. — Do those merchants trust you? — They do trust me, and I trust them. — Why do those people laugh at us? — They laugh at us because we speak badly. — What are you laughing at? — I am laughing at your hat.

Lesson XCIV. — PENSUM NONAGESIMUM QUARTUM.

PREPOSITIONS.

A. Prepositions are particles, placed before certain cases of nouns or pronouns, in order to point out their relation to some other word of the sentence.

Prepositions primarily express either motion or a certain direction towards or from a place or object, in answer to the questions whither? whence? or else rest or motion in a place or object, in answer to the question where?

These purely local determinations are, however, frequently transferred to other ideas, and prepositions also express relations of time and causal relations.

B. Some Latin prepositions govern the accusative, others the ablative. Several are followed by either, according to the sense to be conveyed.

I. The prepositions which govern the accusative are, — ad, to, towards; at, near.

adversus, adversum, towards,
against.
ante, before.
apud, at, with, in, near.
circa, circum, around, about.
circiter, about, towards.

cis, citra, on this side.
contra, against, opposite.
erga, towards, in respect to.
extra, without, beyond.
infra, below.
intra, within.
inter, between, among.

juxta, near, close by.
ob, for, on account of.
penes, with, in the power of.
per, through, by, during.
pone, behind.
post, after, behind.
praeter, beyond, by, before, except.

prope, near, close by.
propter, near; on account of.
secundum, along, next to; according to.
supra, above, over, upon trans, beyond, over.
ultra, beyond.

II. The prepositions which govern the ablative are, — a, ab, abs, from, from the part of.

absque, without.
coram, before, in the presence of.
cum, with, together with, beside.
de, from, down from, concerning.
e, ex, out of, from, after, since.

prae, before, for, on account of.
pro, before, for; in the place of; in consideration of, according to.
sine, without.
tenus, as far as, up to (after its case).

III. The prepositions, which sometimes govern the accusative, and sometimes the ablative, are, — in, in, into, towards, upon.

sub, under, near, towards.

subter, under, beneath.
super, upon, above.

REMARKS.

1. Prepositions generally precede the cases governed by them, except tenus, which is placed after them.*

2. A is put before consonants only, ab before vowels and sometimes also before consonants. The same rule applies to e and ex. — Atq is seldom used except in composition and before words beginning with c, t, q. E. g. abscindo, abstrāho, absque.

3. Compound prepositions either retain the case of the second component, or are converted into adverbs. E. g. in ante diem, until the day before; ex ante diem, from the day before; ex adversum Athenas, opposite to Athens. But adverbs are circum circa, all around; desuper, from above; insuper, above, besides; praeter propter, about, more or less; proflinus, onward, further on.

4. Prope is the only preposition compared, and retains its case after the comparative and superlative. E. g. propius urbem, nearer the city; proxime Italiam, nearest to Italy. But the adverb prope is followed by the dative; as, propius Tiberi, nearer to the Tiber.

5. A number of the above prepositions are originally adverbs, and still used as such without a case. Such are ante, before, in front; circum or circa, around; citra, on this side; contra, on the opposite side; extra, on the outside; intra, within; infra, below; juxta, close by; post or pone, behind; prope, near. E. g. Ante et post moveri, To be moved forward and backward. Ingrēdi ante, non retro, To enter forward, and not backward. Prope, propius accēdere, To approach near, nearer. Ut supra, infra scripsi, As I have shown above (i. e. before), below. Juxta consistere, To stand near.

* On the exceptions to this rule, see Lesson XCVII. B. VII.

6. Poets and later prose-writers employ also the adverbs clam, palam, simul, and procul as prepositions with the ablative. E. g. Clam vobis, Without your knowledge. Palam populo, Before the eyes of the people. Simul his, Together with these. Procul urbe, Far from the city. Procul dubio, Without any doubt.

PREPOSITIONS IN COMPOSITION.

C. Prepositions are frequently compounded with other parts of speech, especially with verbs.

The regular prepositions thus employed are called separable, in contradistinction to others which occur in composition only, and are hence called inseparable. In composition, the final consonant of prepositions frequently is assimilated or otherwise modified. (Cf. Lesson XXVII. A. Rem. 2.)

Prepositions generally add their proper signification to that of the word to which they are prefixed. Not unfrequently, however, they impart other shades, and sometimes even a different sense, to the original word.

I. The separable prepositions used in composition are, —

1. The following, which also occur either as adverbs or with cases: ad, to, towards, at, near, by; ante, before; circum, around, about, all around; post, after, behind; prae, before, very (with adjectives); praeter, past, by, beyond, besides; super, above, over, left, remaining; subter, beneath, under, privately. E. g. advenio, I arrive; adduco, I fetch, adduce; antepōno, I prefer; circumduco, I lead around; posthabeo, I esteem less; praecēdo, I go before; praeclārus, very celebrated; praetervēhor, I ride by; praeterquam, besides; superjacio, I throw over or upon; subterjacio, I throw beneath. (Cf. Lessons LIX. A. and LXII. B.)

2. The following, which also occur separately, but with cases only: a, ab, abs, away, from, down, un-; de, away, from, off, down, entirely; e, ex, out, forth, upward, very, completely; in, in, on, at, into, against; inter, between, among; ob, towards, against, before, around; per, through, much, very, thoroughly; pro, before, forth, for; sub, under, from below, secretly, somewhat, rather; trans, beyond, over, across. E. g. abeo, I go away; abjungo, I unyoke; absctō, I cut off; depello, I drive down, away; descendo, I descend; defungor, I discharge, get rid of; edormio, I sleep away or out; effero, I carry forth or out; exhaurio, I draw out, exhaust; ineo, I go in (into); inspicio, I look into, inspect; intercādo, I interpose, insert between; intersto, I stand between or among; oblando, I spread before or against; obtūro, I stop or close up; occumbo, I sink down, fall into; perfero, I carry through; perficio, I accomplish, carry to an end; procēdo, I go forth; prodico, I foretell; proconsul, a proconsul; subeo, I undergo; surgō (or surgō), I lift or raise up; subrūfus, somewhat red, reddish; transcendo, I pass over, I cross; transversim, across, crosswise; and many others,

3. The following, which are compounded with adjectives only : cis, on this side ; extra, outside, beyond ; intra, within, on the inside ; ultra, beyond, on the other side. E. g. cisalpinus, on this side of the Alps, Cisalpine ; extraordinarius, extraordinary ; intramurus, within the walls ; ultramundanus, ultramundane.

II. The inseparable prepositions, employed in composition only, are, —

1. Ambi (amb, an), around, about, on both sides. E. g. ambifariam, double ; ambigo, I drive about ; amplector, I embrace ; anquiro, I send after ; anfractus, a bend (in a road).

2. Dis (or dī), asunder. E. g. discēdo, I leave ; dissipo, I scatter, disperse ; dimitto, I dismiss ; dirimo, I part, separate.

3. Re (red), re-, again, back. E. g. redeo, revertor, I return ; reclūdo, I unlock, unbolt ; reicio, I reject ; remitto, I send back again.

4. Se (for sine), aside, apart. E. g. secēdo, I step aside, retire ; sedūco, I lead aside, astray ; sepōno, I lay aside or apart ; secūrus, secure, without care.

5. Sus, upward. E. g. suscipio, I undertake ; suscito, I raise up, I rouse ; suspendo, I hang up ; sustineo, I hold up, sustain.

6. To these may be added ve, which denotes a faulty excess or deficiency (= male). E. g. vegrandis, ill-grown, diminutive ; vecors, heartless ; vesānus, insane, frantic. So also the negative prefixes ne and in, in compounds like nefas, not right, wrong ; inhumanus, inhuman, ill-bred.

EXERCISE 169.

Where have you become acquainted with that lady? — I have become acquainted with her at the house of one of my relations. — Is it thou, Charles, who hast soiled my book? — It is not I, it is your little sister who has soiled it. — Who has broken my fine inkstand? — It is I who have broken it. — Is it you who have spoken of me? — It is we who have spoken of you, but we have said of you nothing but good (nihil nisi bonum). — Why does your cousin ask me for money and books? — Because he is a fool; of me, who am his nearest relation and best friend, he asks nothing. — Why did you not come to dinner? — I have been hindered, but you have been able to dine without me. — Do you think that we shall not dine, if you cannot come? — How long did you wait for me? — We waited for you till a quarter past seven, and as you did not come, we dined without you. — Have you drunk my health? — We have drunk yours and that of your parents. — A certain man was very fond of wine, but he found in it two bad qualities (qualitates). “If I put water to it,” said he, “I spoil it, and if I do not put any to it, it spoils me.” — How does your uncle look? — He looks very gay; for he is much pleased with his children. — Do his friends look as gay as he? — They, on the contrary, look sad, because they are discontented. — My uncle has no money, and is very contented, and his friends, who have a great deal of it, are scarcely ever so. — Do you like your sister? — I like her much, and as she is very complaisant towards me, I am so towards her; but how do you like yours? — We love each other, because we are pleased with each other. — Does your cousin resemble you? — He does resemble me. — Do your sisters resemble each other? — They do not resemble each other; for the eldest is idle and naughty, and the youngest assiduous and complaisant towards everybody. — Who knocks at the door? — It is I; will you open it? — What do you want? — I come to ask you for the money which you owe me, and the books which I lent you. — If you will have the goodness to come to-morrow, I will return both to you. — Do you perceive yonder house? — I do perceive it, what house is it? — It is an inn (deversorium); if you like, we will go into it to drink a glass of wine; for I am very thirsty. — You are always thirsty when you see an inn. — If we enter it, I shall drink your health. — Rather than go into an inn, I will not drink. — When will you pay what you owe me? — When I have money; it is useless to ask me for some to-day, for you know very well that there is nothing to be had of him who has nothing. — When do you think you will have money? — I think I shall have some next year. — Will you do what I shall tell you? — I will do it, if it is not too difficult. — Why do you laugh at me? — I do not laugh at you, but at your coat. — Does it not look like yours? — It does not look like it; for mine is short and yours is too long, mine is black and yours is green.

Lesson XCV.—PENSUM NONAGESIMUM QUINTUM.

CONJUNCTIONS.

A. Conjunctions are particles, which serve to designate the relation between one predicate and another, and to effect the connection of sentences.

The relation of one predicate to another may be either equal or unequal. Hence there are two kinds of conjunctions, of which one connects similar sentences, or, when the repetition of the predicate is unnecessary, similar parts of a sentence, and the other dissimilar sentences.

The connection of dissimilar sentences is either a possible, real, or necessary one.

I. The following classes of conjunctions connect similar sentences or parts of them :—

1. COPULATIVES, or those which join or unite :—et, ac, atque, -que (enclitic), and ; et, etiam, quodque, also ; nec, neque, and not, nor.

2. DISJUNCTIVES, or those which separate or disjoin :—aut, vel, -re (enclitic), sive, seu, or ; aut — aut, either — or ; neve — neve, neu — neu, neither — nor.

3. ADVERSATIVES, or those which indicate opposition :—at, ast, vērūm, vērō, enimvērō, autem, sed, but, however ; atqui, but yet.

II. The conjunctions connecting dissimilar sentences are as follows :—

1. CONDITIONALS, or those which express a condition :—si, if ; sin, but if ; ni, nisi, if not, unless ; modo, dummōdo, provided, so that ; dumne, dummōdo ne, provided that not.

2. CAUSALS, or those which indicate a cause, ground, or reason :—nam, namque, enim, etēnim, for ; quia, because ; quod, that, because ; quando, quandoquidem, quoniam, quum or cum, quidē, since.

3. FINALS, or those denoting an object, end, or purpose :—ut, utī, that, in order that ; quo, that, that the (with comparatives) ; ne, that not, lest ; neve, neu, and that not, nor that ; quominus, that not.

4. CONSECUTIVES, or those which denote a consequence :—ut, that, so that ; ut non, that not, so that not ; quā, that not, but what.

5. CONCESSIVES, or those which denote a concession :—etsi, tametsi, etiamsi, even though, although ; quanquam, quamvis, although, however ; and their corresponding adversatives, tūmen, yet, still ; atūmen, veruntūmen, yet, nevertheless.

6. ILLATIVES, or those which denote an inference or conclusion :—ergo, igītūr, itaque, therefore ; ideo, idcirco, proinde, propterēa, therefore, on that account ; quāre, quōcirca, quapropter, wherefore, on which account.

7. Among conjunctions may also be included a number of particles denoting a relation of time, and others used in questions or comparisons. Such are,—

a) The temporal conjunctions quum, ut, ubi, when; quum primum, ut primum, simulac, simulatque (or simply simul), as soon as; postquam, after; antequam and priusquam, before; quando, when, at what time; dum, usque dum, donec, and quoad, until.

b) The interrogative conjunctions num, utrum, an, and the enclitic ne. To these may be added ec and en in words like ecquid, ecquando, and en unquam, and also numquid, when it stands for num.

c) The comparative conjunctions ut or uti, sicut, velut, prout, præut, the poetical ceu, quam, tamquam (with or without si), quasi, ut si, ac si, ac, and atque, all of which are rendered by the English as, just as, as if.

OF THE USE OF CONJUNCTIONS.

B. Copulative, di-junctive, and adversative conjunctions generally connect the same cases of nouns, pronouns, and adjectives, the same moods of verbs, and particles belonging to the same word. E. g.

Mâter tua et sôror a mē diligitur. Your mother and sister are loved by me.

Cur tibi fâsces ac secûres, et tantam vim impérii tantæque ornâmentâ datâ cénse? Why do you suppose the fasces and the axes,* and such great power of office, with so many marks of honor, were given you?

Ea esse dico, quæ cerni tângive pôssunt. I maintain the existence of those things, which can be seen or touched.

Vive diu ac feliciter. Live long and happily.

Nôn módo princeps, sed et sôlus bellum indixit. He was not only the principal man that declared the war, but even the only one.

Pétêres vel pôtius rogâres, stupôrem hómînis vel dicam pecûdis vidète. You might ask or rather entreat us; look at the stupidity of the man, or I should rather say of the brute.

REMARKS.

1. This rule extends also to comparative conjunctions, and to all such as introduce clauses which are not subordinate or dependent on the preceding sentence, but co-ordinate or in the same construction with it.

2. The words connected with these conjunctions need not always be in the same case or mood, provided they sustain the same relation to the general construction of the sentence. E. g. Mcā et patris causā. — Tuā non magis quam reipublicae refert. — Veniēbat quotidie, et frequentius etiam venisset, nisi, &c.

* These were the emblems of office of the Roman consuls, &c.

3. The conjunction is often emphatically omitted. E. g. Velim nolim, Willing or unwilling. Ire redire, To go backward and forward. Qui indicabantur, eos vocāri, custodiri, ad senātum addūci jussi, Those who were indicated I ordered to be summoned, put into custody, (and) brought before the senate.

4. On the construction of the remaining conjunctions, which introduce subordinate or dependent clauses, compare Lessons LXXXVI — LXXXIX.

DOUBLE CONJUNCTIONS.

C. Copulative and disjunctive conjunctions are frequently doubled, i. e. expressed in both members of the sentence, so as to connect them more emphatically. Such combinations are, — et — et (ac, atque),	}	both — and, as well — as, at once — and. et — -que,

-que — et,
-que — -que.*
nec — nec,	}	neither — nor.
neque — neque,
neque — nec,
nec — neque.†
et — nec (neque).	}	both — and not. neque (nec) — et,
nec (neque) — -que.
aut — aut,
vel — vel.	}	either — or.
sive — sive,
seu — seu.

EXAMPLES.

Tē et mōneo et hōrto.	I (both) admonish and exhort you.
Et māri et terrā.	Both by sea and by land.
Officia et servāta praetermissaque.	Duties both observed and omitted.
Militiaēque domique.	Both abroad and at home.
Nōn pōssum reliqua nec cogitare nec scribere.	The rest I can neither think of nor write.
Et rēm agnōscit, nec hōminem ignōrat.	He not only knows the thing, but is besides not ignorant of the man.
Nec miror et gaūdeo.	I not only do not wonder, but rejoice.
Nec tū interfuisti, et ego id ēgi.	Nor had you anything to do with the affair, but I did it.

* In poetry only.

† Rarely used.

Aut discere aut discède.

Either learn or leave (one of the two).

Vel imperatōre vel mīlīte mē utīmini.

Use me either as your commander or as a soldier (as you please).

Sive cāsū sive consilio deōrum.

Either by chance or by divine appointment (I know not which).*

D. Adverbs are sometimes doubled in the same way, and used to connect words or clauses like conjunctions. Such are,—

mōdo — mōdo ,	{	now — now , now — then again, at one time —
nunc — nunc .		at another.
partim — partim .	{	partly — partly .
simul — simul ,		both — and , as well — as .
quā — quā .	{	both — and ; at one time — at another.
tum — tum .		as — so especially ; not only — but especially .
quum — tum .

EXAMPLES.

Mōdo hōc, mōdo illud dicit.

He at one moment says one thing, and then again another.

Mōdo hūc, mōdo illuc volat.

He now flies hither, now thither.

Nūc singulos provocat, nūc omnes incēpat.

He sometimes challenges them individually, and sometimes provokes them as a mass.

Simul sui purgandi causā, simul ut, si quid possent, de induciis impetrarent.

Both in order to excuse themselves, and that they might, if possible, obtain some concessions respecting an armistice.

Partim mē amici deseruerunt, partim prodiderunt.

My friends have partly deserted and partly betrayed me.

Quā dōminus, quā advocatī sibi-lis conscīsi.

Both the master and the advocates were put down with hisses.

Tum Græce tum Latīne.

Both Greek and Latin.

Fortūna quum in reliquis rebus, tum præcipue in bello, plurimum potest.

The power of fortune is supreme, as in other things, so more especially in war.

E. Two conjunctions of different classes are sometimes placed in correlation with each other, or a conjunction with an adverb. E. g.

etsi, tametsi, etiametsi, ut, quamquam, quamvis — tamen, attamen, veruntamen, nihilominus.	{	although — yet, nevertheless.
non mōdo, non solum, non tantum — sed etiam, verum etiam.		not only — but also.
non dicam (or dico) — sed.		I will not say — but only.

* The student will notice here the distinction between the words aut, vel, and sive. Cf. page 388.

non mōdo (non) — sed ne	} not only not — but not even.
— quidem.
non mōdo — sed vix.
non minus — quam.
non magis — quam.	no less — than ; as much — as.
	no more — than ; as much — as.

EXAMPLES.

Tamēsi vicisse debeo, tamen de meo jure decēdam.	Although I ought to have conquered, I will nevertheless surrender part of my right.
Ut dēint vīres, tamen est laudanda volūntas.	Though the ability be wanting, yet the will is to be commended.
Tullus Hostilius nōn solum proximo régi dissimilis, sed ferocior etiam Rōmulo fuit.	Tullus Hostilius was not only unlike the preceding king, but even more warlike than Romulus.
Ego nōn mōdo tibi nōn irāscor, sed ne reprehēdo quidem factum tuum.	I am not only not angry with you, but I do not even reprehend what you have done.
Vērūm haec gēnera virtūtum nōn solum* in mōribus nōstris, sed vix jam in libris reperiuntur.	But virtues of this description are not only not found in our practice, but scarcely now in books.
Quid est enim minus nōn dico oratōris, sed hōminis ?	For what is less becoming, I will not say to an orator, but to a man ?
Alexāder nōn dūcis magis quam militis mūnia exequebātur.	Alexander was wont to perform the duties of a soldier, no less than those of a commander.

To omit.	Omittēre, praetermittēre, praeterire (ALIQUID).
You have neglected your promise.	Promissa tua neglexisti.
You have neglected to come to your lesson.	In scholam venire neglexisti (praetermisisti).
He never neglects or omits anything.	Nihil unquam negligit, nec praetermittit.
Did he neglect the opportunity of defending himself?	Nūquid occasionem sui defendendi praetermisit?
So far from neglecting it, he has seized it eagerly.	Tantum abest, ut praetermisserit, ut avidissime amplexus sit.
To yield.	Cēdo, ēre, cessi, cessum (ALICUI DE RE).
To yield to any one.	Cēdere, mōrem gerere, obscuri alicui (aliquā re).
To yield, give up one's place.	Cēdere loco or ex loco.
To yield to something; to acquiesce in it.	Cēdere rei; se accommodare rei; acquiescere (ēvi, ētum) re, in re.
To yield to necessity.	{ Necessitati parere (cēdere). { Veniam dare necessitati.
To make a virtue of necessity.	Errōres in consilium vertere.
We must yield to necessity.	Cedendum est necessitati.
Did his brother acquiesce in his fate?	Nūm frater ejus fortunā suā acquievit?
He did not acquiesce; but he has resolved to yield to necessity.	Nōn acquievit; nihilominus veniam necessitati dare statuit.
Did the copyist omit anything?	Omisitne scriptor aliquid?
He has omitted only a few words.	Pauca tantum verba omisit (praeteriit).

EXERCISE 170.

Is it right to laugh thus at everybody? — If I laugh at your coat, I do not laugh at everybody. — Does your son resemble any one? — He resembles no one. — Why do you not drink? — I do not know what to drink; for I like good wine, and yours looks like vinegar. — If you wish to have some other, I shall go down into the cellar (doliarium) to fetch you some. — You are too polite, sir; I shall drink no more to-day. — Have you known my father long? — I have known him long, for I made his acquaintance when I was yet at school (quum scholam adhuc frequentābam). — We often worked for one another, and we loved each other like brothers. — I believe it, for you rescue each other. — When I had not done my exercises, he did them for me, and when he had not done his, I did them for him. — Why does your father send for the physician? — He is ill, and as the physician does not come, he sends for him. — Is that man angry with you?

— I think he is angry with me, because I do not go to see him; but I do not like to go to his house: for when I go to him, instead of receiving me with pleasure, he looks displeased. — You must not believe that he is angry with you, for he is not so bad as he looks. He is the best man in the world (homo omnium praestantissimus); but one must know him in order to appreciate him (diligere carumque habere). — There is a great difference between you and him; you look pleased with all those who come to see you, and he looks cross at them. — Why do you associate (utēris) with those people? — I associate with them because they are useful to me. — If you continue to associate with them you will get into bad scrapes, for they have many enemies. — How does your cousin conduct himself? — He does not conduct himself very well; for he is always getting into some bad scrape. — Do you not sometimes get into bad scrapes? — It is true that I sometimes get into them, but I always get out of them again. — Do you see those men who seem desirous of approaching us? — I do see them, but I do not fear them; for they hurt nobody. — We must go away, for I do not like to mix with people whom I do not know. — I beg of you not to be afraid of them, for I perceive my uncle among them. — Do you know a good place to swim in? — I do know one. — Where is it? — On that side of the river, behind the wood, near the high-road (via publica). — When shall we go to swim? — This evening, if you like. — Will you wait for me before the city-gate? — I shall wait for you there; but I beg of you not to forget it. — You know that I never forget my promises. — Have you reminded your brother not to write to-day? — I have both reminded and exhorted him. — Who has conquered (pervicit)? — Caesar has conquered both by sea and by land. — He has not only conquered, but even triumphed (trumphare). — Does he speak Latin? — He speaks both Greek and Latin. — Can he write a letter? — He not only cannot write a letter, but he can scarcely read one.

Lesson XCVI. — PENSUM NONAGESIMUM SEX- TUM.

INTERJECTIONS.

A. Interjections are particles denoting natural sounds, expressive of certain emotions of the mind.

The nature of these emotions, and their degree of intensity, are indicated by the tone or force with which this natural utterance is effected. Interjections thus take the place of an entire sentence, in which the verb would express the emotion, and an adverb its degree of intensity.

B. Interjections are classified according to the character of the emotion expressed by them. They denote,—

1. DELIGHT; as, io, tu, oh! ah! evax or evaz, euoe or evoe, hurrah! huzzah!
2. LAUGHTER; as, ha ha, ha ha he, ha! ha!
3. GRIEF, PAIN; as, ah, ah! alas! au, hold! stop! hei, heu, cheu, hoi, vae, alas! woe! o, oh, proh, oh! alas!
4. SURPRISE; as, aha, aha! atat, attate, strange! ha! hem, ehem, ho! lo! how? there! hui, ha! ho! away! papae, strange! indeed! tatae, strange! wonderful! vah, hah! zounds!
5. DERISION; as, hem, ha! there! bravo! vah, vaha, iohia, ha! bravo!
6. PRAISE, APPLAUSE; as, euge, eugepae, heia, well done!
7. ENCOURAGEMENT; as, eia, up! come! on! and the imperatives age, agēdum, pl. agite, come on! come now!
8. CALLING; as, heus, eho, ehodum, ho! soho! bark you (ye)!
9. ANSWERING; as, hem, ehem*, well! very well!
10. IMPRECATION; as, vae, woe!
11. DIRECTING ATTENTION; as, en, ecce, lo! behold!
12. AVERSION; as, apāge (an imperative), begone! away! fie! tush!
13. SILENCING; as, 'st, hush!

REMARKS.

1. A number of substantives, adjectives, adverbs, and verbs are sometimes used like interjections. Such are: Pax, peace! be still! Malum, indignum, nefas, infandum, misērum, miserabile! as expressions of disgust or impatient astonishment. Macte, pl. macti, bravely! prosper! Nae profecto, surely! certainly! So apage, begone! cedo, give here! fetch hither (and also, pray tell me!); sis (= si vis), hear! do you hear? agesis, agēdum, agiledum, come on! well! sūles (= si audies), do you hear? hark you! To these add quaeso, precor, obsecro (sc. te or vos), I pray, I beg, prithee! pray! and amabo (sc. te and = si me amas), I pray you! pray do!

2. Among interjections may also be included the invocations of the deities, which frequently appear intercalated between the regular parts of a sentence. Such are mehercule, hercūle, mehercle, hercle, mehercules, hercules, by Hercules! so help me Hercules! pro Juppiter, per Jovem, by Jupiter! pol, edepol, by Pollux! ecastor, mecastor, by Castor! medius fidius, by my faith! so help me God! pro deum fidem, per fidem, by my faith! faith! † &c.

* Some interjections, like hem! vah! &c., are used to express several different emotions.

† The expressions mecastor and mehercules may be resolved into, Ita me Castor or Hercules juvet, So help me Castor or Hercules! and mehercule into, Ita me Hercule (vocative) juves, So help thou me, Hercules!

C. Interjections either stand alone, or are followed by the nominative, genitive, dative, accusative, or vocative.

With the nominative, en, ecce, o (cf. page 344).

With the accusative, o, ah, heu, en, hem, pro, bene (cf. page 343.)

With the dative, vae, hei, heu, ecce (cf. page 369).

With the genitive, o, heu, proh, &c. (cf. page 383, Rem. 8).

With the vocative, see D.

Sed ecce nuntii, ecce litterae!	Behold the messengers! See the letter!
En dextra fidésque!	There is our right hand and our plighted faith!
O fortunata mors, quae pro patria est potissimum reddita!	Happy the death incurred especially for one's fatherland!
En miserum hominem!	Lo there a wretched man!
Eheu me miserum!	Wretch that I am!
O hominem fortunatum, qui ejusmodi nuntios habeat!	O lucky man, to have messengers like those!
Sed bene Messalam! sua quisque ad pocula dicat.	The health of Messala! Let each one say so to his cup!
Hei (or vae) misero mihi!	Woe is me!
Vae victis esse!	Woe to the conquered!
O mihi nuntii beati (gen.)!	O blessed harbinger to me!
O paterni generis oblite (voc.)!	O thou forgetful of thy ancestry!

OF THE USE OF THE VOCATIVE CASE.

D. The vocative case is the special form for calling or invoking the person or object addressed.

The vocative constitutes in itself an entire sentence, like an interjection, and frequently occurs in connection with one. But if the sentence in which the vocative occurs contains a finite verb or an imperative, these must agree with it in number and person. E. g.

O dii boni! quid est in hominis vita diu?	Good gods! What can be said to last in human life?
Quae res unquam, pro sancte Juppiter! non modo in hac urbe, sed in omnibus terris est gesta major?	What greater exploit, O holy Jupiter! was ever achieved, not only in this city, but in any land?
Vincere scis, Hannibal; victoria uti nescis!	You know how to conquer, Hannibal, but not to use your victory!
Equo ne credite, Troici!	Do not trust the horse, Trojans!
Quinctili Vare, legiones redde!	Return the legions, Quinctilius Varus.
Urbem, urbem, mi Rufe, cõle et in ista luce vive!	Keep to the city, my Rufus, to the city, and live in that sun of yours!
Rufe, mihi frustra ac nequidquam credite amice!	O Rufus, in vain and to no purpose called my friend!

Primus nāte méo nómine dícte púer!	O son, the first boy, called by my name!
Salve primus ómnium párens pá- triæ appellāte ; primus in tógā triúmphum linguæque laúre- am méríte !	Hail first of all called parent of thy country; the first, who in the toga earned a triumph and the wreath of eloquence!

REMARKS.

1. Participles sometimes occur alone in the vocative, but only in poetry. E. g. Primā dicte mihi, summā dicende Camenā, (O thou) sung in my first ode, to be sung in my last! And the two last of the above examples.

2. Poets, in imitation of the Greeks, thus frequently put the vocative of participles and adjectives where we might expect the nominative. E. g. Quo moritūre mis? Whither art thou hastening so precipitately, ready to perish? Sic venias hodiernæ! Thus may you come to-day! So the common expression: Macte virtute esto! Success to you! Go on and prosper!

3. The nominative, on the other hand, sometimes occurs instead of the vocative, especially in poetry. E. g. Degēner o populus! O degenerate people! Salve, urbis genius! Hail, genius of the city! Jane, veni; novus anne, veni! Come Janus, come new year, come!

What a grief! What a joy!	Quī dōlor! Quōd gāñdium!
What a man!	Quī vir! Quāntus (quālis) vīr!
How well you have done!	Quam bēne fecisti!
How wretched the man is!	Quam miser ēst hōmo!

E. Obs. In exclamations, the Latin qui, quæ, quod, or quid corresponds to the English "what a!" or "what!" Quomodo, ut or quam (with verbs and adjectives), to the English "how!" Sentences of this kind may also be introduced by quantus, qualis, quoties, &c.

What men!	Quī hōmines!
How many men!	Quid hōminum!
What a fine book!	Quam pulcher liber!
What fine weather!
What good people they are!	Quam illi sūnt benévōli!

EXERCISE 171.

Ah, it is all over with me ! — But, bless me ! (pro Juppiter !) why do you cry thus ? — I have been robbed of my gold rings, my best clothes, and all my money : that is the reason why I cry. — Do not make so much noise, for it is we who have taken them all in order to teach you to take better care of your things (tua), and to shut the door of your room when you go out. — Why do you look so sad ? — I have experienced great misfortunes : after having lost all my money, I was beaten by bad-looking men ; and to my still greater ill-luck I hear that my good uncle, whom I love so much, has been struck with apoplexy. — You must not afflict yourself so much, for we must yield to necessity ; and you know well the proverb : “ It is too late to consult to-day about what was done yesterday.” — Can you not get rid of that man ? — I cannot get rid of him, for he will absolutely (ultique) follow me. — He must have lost his wits. — What does he ask you for ? — He wishes to sell me a horse, which I do not want. — Whose houses are these ? — They are mine. — Do those pens belong to you ? — No, they belong to my sister. — Are those the pens with which she writes so well ? — They are the same. — Which is the man of whom you complain ? — It is he who wears a red coat. — “ What is the difference between a watch and me ? ” inquired a lady (of) a young officer. — “ My lady,” replied he, “ a watch marks the hours, and near you one forgets them.” — A Russian peasant, who had never seen asses, seeing several in Germany, said : “ Lord (mehercule), what large hares there are in this country ! ” — How many obligations I am under to you, my dear friend ! you have saved my life ! without you I had been lost. — Have those miserable men hurt you ? — They have beaten and robbed me; and when you ran to my assistance they were about to strip (exuere) and kill me.—I am happy to have delivered you from the hands of those robbers.—How good you are!—Will you go to your friend's to-night?—I shall perhaps go.—And will your sisters go?—They will perhaps.—Was you pleased at the concert yesterday?—I was not pleased there, for there was such a multitude of people there that one could hardly get in.—I bring you a pretty present with which you will be much pleased.—What is it?—It is a silk cravat.—Where is it?—I have it in my pocket.—Does it please you?—It pleases me much, and I thank you for it with all my heart.—I hope that you will at last accept something of me.—What do you intend to give me?—I will not tell you yet, for if I do tell you, you will find no pleasure when I give it to you.—Why do those men quarrel?—They quarrel because they do not know what to do.—Have they succeeded in extinguishing the fire?—They have at last succeeded in it; but it is said that several houses have been burnt.—Have they not been able to save anything?—They have not been able to save anything; for, instead of extinguishing the fire, the wretches who had come up set themselves to plundering.—Why did our friend set out without me?—They waited for you till twelve o'clock, and seeing that you did not come, they left without you.

Lesson XCVII.—PENSUM NONAGESIMUM SEPTIMUM.

OF THE ORDER OF WORDS IN SENTENCES.

A. The order or succession of words in Latin sentences is determined by their degree of relative importance, which depends upon the intention of the speaker. The general principle of this order is, that the most important word should occupy the first place, and that those modifying, expanding, or defining it should follow each other in regular succession, according to their relative weight in the construction. This is called the natural order.

B. In unconnected sentences, the word which the speaker intends to make prominent is placed at the beginning. But words limiting or defining others are placed after them. E. g.

Rátio præest, appetitus obtémperat. Reason commands, desire obeys.

Hábet rēs pública adolescentes nobilísimos, parátos defensóres. The republic has noble young men, ready for its defence.

Sémper oratórum eloquéntiæ moderátrix fúit auditórum prudéntia. The intelligence of the audience has always been the regulator of the eloquence of orators.

Lacedæmone fuit honestissimum domicilium senectutis.

Bellum sociæle. Senatus popu-lusque Românus.

D. Brutus Imperator, Consul designatus, S. D.* Ciceroni.

Jus gentium. Lex naturæ. Peritus rei militaris. Paratus ad periculum.

Divina natura dedit agros, ars humana ædificavit urbes.

At Lacedæmon there was the most honorable home for old age.

The social war. The senate and people of Rome.

D. Brutus commander, consul elect, to Cicero greeting.

The law of nations. The law of nature. Skilled in military affairs. Ready for danger.

Divine nature gave us our lands, and human art has built our cities.

I. According to the natural order, the subject precedes the predicate. The oblique cases, and other words serving to expand the predicate, are commonly put before the verb, which then occupies the last place in the sentence. E. g.

Cónsules núnquam fuerant; ré-gibus exactis creati sunt.

There had never been any consuls; they were created after the expulsion of the kings.

Vidi Catónem in bibliothecâ se-dentem.

I saw Cato sitting in the library.

Hábent opiniónem, Apóllinem
*mórbos depélle*re, Jóvem im-périum coeléstium tenere,
Mártem bélla regere.

They believe that Apollo cures diseases, that Jupiter is the ruler of the gods, that Mars presides over battles.

Hóminem natura nón solum celeritate mentis ornávit, sed etiam sensus tánquam satéllites attribuit ac núntios, figu-rámque cóporis hábilem et aptam ingénio humáno dedit.

Nature has not only endowed man with quickness of intellect, but has also furnished him with the senses as its satellites and messengers, and given him a suitable bodily form, adapted to the human mind.

REMARK. — The copula sum is put either at the end or between the subject and the predicate. E. g. Haec vita mors est. — Numa Pompilius rex creatus est. — Patres fuere auctores. — Claudius erat sonni brevissimi. — Facta dictis sunt exaequanda.

II. An adjective denoting a quality is commonly put after its noun; but when that quality is represented as the leading or distinctive characteristic, it precedes it.

The same applies to the genitive, which may either follow the word limited by it, or, as the emphatic word, precede it. E. g.

* I. e. Salutem dicit, Sends greeting. In superscriptions to letters, the name of the writer usually comes first. The abbreviation S. D. then either precedes or follows the person addressed, which is always in the dative. Thus equally correct: Cicero Trebatio S. D. Among the later writers, however, the order is reversed, and the person addressed is put first.

Vir optimus. Civis bonus. Poëna merita. Dii immortales.
Juppiter Optimus Maximus.

A most excellent man. A good citizen. Merited punishment.
The immortal gods. Jupiter the Supreme.

Magister equitum.

The master of cavalry.

Curatores viarum.*

The inspectors of roads.

Ornamentum civilatis.

The ornament of the state.

Auditor Platonis.

A hearer of Plato.

Bonus vir or civis. Summa res
publica. Tuum consilium.

A good man, citizen.† The whole state. Your advice. The Athenian Demosthenes.

Atheniensis Demosthenes.

Senatus consultum. Persarum
rex Darius. Eudoxus, Plato- nis auditor. Miltiades, Cimo- nis filius.

A decree of the senate. The king of the Persians, Darius. Eudoxus, the hearer of Plato. Miltiades, the son of Cimon.

REMARKS.

1. An adjective or noun limiting the meaning of two or more nouns is placed either before or after them. E. g. Nostro incommundo detrimentoque dolemus, Let us lament over our misfortune and loss. Zeno non tam rerum inventor fuit, quam verborum novorum, Zeno was not so much an inventor of new things, as of new words.

2. When an adjective is limited by other words, it is put first, and separated from its noun by the words thus limiting it. E. g. Tua erga me benignitas, Your kindness towards me. Maxima post hominum memoriam classis, The largest fleet since the memory of man. Brevissimus in Britanniam trajectus, The shortest crossing into Britannia.

III. A demonstrative pronoun before its noun directs the attention to the latter; but when placed after it, it merely points out its relation to the predicate. E. g.

Hic vir. Haec mensa. Hoc baculum. Illā principia et hī recētes rerum exitus.

This man. This table. This staff.
Those beginnings and this recent issue of things.

Haec est mea et hujus fratris mei germana patria.

This is my proper country and that of this brother of mine.

Virginem ego hanc sum ducturus.

I am going to marry this virgin.

Caedem hanc ipsam contra rem publicam senatus factam esse decrevit.

The senate has declared, that this very carnage was made against the republic.

Tivulus is ipse, in quo condita urbs est.

The very hill on which the city was built.

IV. Quisque is commonly put after sibi, suus, superlatives, or ordinals. E. g.

* In titles the genitive is thus commonly put last.

† I. e. one whose leading trait is goodness. Vir bonus is only in general opposed to malus.

Sua cuique virtuti laus propria debetur.	Every virtue is entitled to its proper praise.
Sua cuiusque animantis natura est.	Every animal has its peculiar nature.
Minime sibi quisque notus est, et difficillime de se quisque sentit.	Every one knows least of himself, and every one experiences the greatest difficulty in observing himself.
Epicureos doctissimus quisque contemnit.	The wisest men all despise the Epicureans.
Decimus quisque fusti necatur.	Every tenth man was beaten to death.
Optimi quisque expetebant a me doctrinam.	The best men have all sought instruction from me.

REMARK. — Sibi and suus before quisque thus acquire a distributive signification. When the distribution is already contained in other words of the sentence, quisque precedes the reflexive. E. g. Quantum quisque se ipse facit, tanti fiat ab amicis. — Gallos Hannibal . . . in civitates quemque suas dimisit. — The same order is observed in alius ullus; e. g. Neque alia ulla fuit causa.

V. Adverbs before the words qualified by them denote that which is distinctive or characteristic; after them they merely limit or restrict their signification.

Bene facta male locata male facta arbitror.	I consider ill-bestowed acts of kindness injuries.
Accidit, ut reliquae (sc. naves) fere omnes rejicerentur.	It happened that nearly all the rest of the ships were driven back.
Flumen Dubis paene totum oppidum cingit.	The river Dubis surrounds nearly the entire town.
Historia exiguo tempore absolvi non potest.	History cannot be despatched in a short time.
Laelius semper fere cum Scipione solebat rusticari.	Laelius generally was accustomed to rusticate with Scipio.
Legem eisdem prope verbis in decimam tabulam coniecerunt.	They have expressed the law in nearly the same words in the twelfth table.
Quodsi Cneus Italiam relinquet, faciet omnino male.	But if Cneus will leave Italy, he will act very unwisely.

VI. The same applies to the oblique cases determining the predicate; before the verb they indicate the sense in which it is to be taken, after it they only specify or limit it (cf. I.). E. g.

Medici ex quibusdam rebus et advenientes et crescentes morbos intelligunt.	Physicians understand both approaching and growing diseases from certain symptoms.
Epedorix et Viridomarus, insi-	Epedorix and Viridomarus, having cuique levándam culpam nímio plús facinda.

been accused of treason, were killed by the Romans without any trial.

Men are naturally too eloquent in palliating every one his own guilt.

VII. Prepositions, as their name implies, are generally placed before the cases governed by them. Ténus and versus alone follow them. So also cum in mécum, técum, sécum, nobiscum, vobiscum, quócum, quibuscum. E. g.

Ab hóste ótium fúit.

Mánus de tábulā!

Germáni státim e sómno lavántur.

There was rest from the enemy.

Hands off from the picture!

The Germans bathe immediately after sleep.

REMARKS.

1. An adjective or relative pronoun is often emphatically put before the preposition, so that the latter stands between it and its noun. E. g. Magno cum metu. — Quā in urbe. — Hanc ob causam. — Quem ad modum. — Nullā in re.

2. Relatives, and sometimes also the demonstrative hic, are frequently put before their preposition, although no substantive follows. E. g. Socii putandi, quos inter (= inter quos) res communicata est. — Res, causa, quā de (= de quā) agitur. So also: Hunc adversus; hunc circum; hunc juxta; quem penes; quam super; quem ultra, &c.*

3. Prepositions are sometimes separated from their cases, generally by an attributive genitive or an adverb, sometimes also by some other word. E. g. Post vero Sullae victoriam. — Post autem Alexandri Magni mortem. — Propter vel gratiam, vel dignitatem. — Honore digni cum ignominia dignis non sunt comparandi. — In suum cuique tribuendo.†

* Poets and later prose-writers extend this transposition to personal pronouns and to substantives. E. g. Se erga; te propter; me penes; te ante; Scythas inter; Misēnum apud et Ravennam; thalamo sub fluminis.

† Poets extend this liberty much further. E. g. Per ego te deos oro. — Vis animi pervicit et extra processit longe flammanitia moenia mundi, &c.

VIII. When two terms are opposed to or contrasted with each other, they are placed as near together as possible.

A word may thus be opposed to itself in a different form, or to one of kindred signification; as, Manus manum lavat. — *Aliis aliunde est periculum. Or else two different terms may form an antithesis to each other; as, Fragile corpus animus sempiternus movet.

REMARK.—This rule includes formulas like Dii deaeque. — Dies noctesque. — Die ac nocte. — Domi bellicue. — Domi militiaeque. — Terra marique. — Utro citroque, &c.

C. I. In sentences containing two or more connected clauses, the connecting word generally occupies the first place in the clause introduced by it.

The connecting word may be either a relative, a demonstrative pronoun or adverb, or a conjunction. Sometimes also another word, and always the one which bears the closest relation to what has gone before.

If the connective refers to a particular word of the preceding clause (e. g. a relative to its antecedent), the latter stands as near to it as possible.

Correlatives (e. g. tantus — quantus, &c.) occupy the same relative position in their respective clauses.

* I. e. "To some there is danger from one quarter, to others from another."

The conjunctions usually put at the beginning of their clause are : et, ac, atque; sed, at, verum; vel, aut; nam, namque, and etenim. Generally also itaque. E. g.

Lóquimur de his amicis, quos nóvit vita commúnis.

Cónsul, qui únus supérerat, mórítur.

*Hánnibal trēs exércitus máximos comparávit. Ex his únun in

No orator has written as much as my writings amount to.

The philosopher is susceptible of rage, but not of madness. But that is another question.

The republic is not in the walls of our homes, but upon our hearths and altars.

Alcibiades was fit for every kind of business, and full of sagacity; for he was the commander-in-chief by sea and land.

I ask of you not to be too rash about sailing. It is the custom of seafaring men to hurry for the sake of gain.

Pausanias changed not only the established customs of his country, but also his entire mode of life. He kept up the state of a king and wore a Persian dress. Medes and Egyptians constituted his retinue; he dined after the fashion of the Persians; his replies were haughty; his commands cruel. He was unwilling to return to Sparta.

II. The conjunctions quoque, autem, vero, enim, quidem, and the enclitics que, ne, and ve, always follow the emphatic word of the sentence. So frequently etiam, igitur, tamen, ergo, deinde, and praeterea; sometimes also itaque and idcirco.

These words then generally occupy the second or third place in the clause. When the copula est or a verb is the emphatic word, then autem, enim, igitur, and ergo often stand in the third, fourth, or fifth place. E. g.

Gyges a nullo videbatur; ipse autem omnia vidēbat.

Quid est enim libertas? Potestas vivendi, ut velis.

Sensit in se iri Brutus. Avide utaque se certāmini offert.

Nulli est igitur naturae obediens aut subiectus Deus.

Nostra corpora vertuntur, nec quod fuimusve, sumusve, cras erimus.

Gyges was not visible to any one. But he himself saw everything.

For what is liberty? The power of living as you please.

Brutus perceived, that he was assailed. Hence he at once offered to engage in the contest.

God is therefore obedient or subject to no nature.

Will you then spare this man, O judges, whose crimes are so great?

We know that, according to our manners, music is incompatible with the character of our prince, and that dancing is considered a vice in him.

I should like to know what your plans are, and what you think of the entire business.

What can be superior to the philosopher, when he enjoys so many and such a variety of virtues?

Our bodies undergo perpetual change, nor will we be to-morrow what we have been or are at present.

III. In quotations, the formulas inquam, aio, dico, nego, quaeso, obsecro, censeo, credo, spero, opinor, existimor, and arbitror are placed after the emphatic words. So also the vocative.

E. g.

Caesar, prolapsus in egressu navis, Teneo te, inquit, Africa!

Virtus, virtus, inquam, Caii Fannii, et conciliat amicitias, et conservat.

Vide, quaeso, satisne rectum sit, nos in istis locis esse.

Attica mea, obsecro te, quid agit?

In eisdem solitudines tu ipse, arbutor, venies, in quibus nos consedissee audies.

Caesar, advancing from the ship, exclaimed: Africa, I have you!

Virtue, virtue, I say, Caius Fannius, is at once the conciliator and the preserver of friendships.

Pray see whether it is exactly right, that we should be in places like these.

Pray tell me, what is my Attica doing?

You will, I think, get into the same retirement, in which you will hear that we have settled down.

IV. Conjunctions, relatives, interrogatives, and interjections, which commonly occupy the first place of a clause, are sometimes supplanted by the emphatic word. E. g.

Nemo est, tibi qui suadere, sapientius possit te ipso.

Non quoe, cetera illa populi Romani gaudia quanta fuerint, iudicare.

Quid? liberalitas gratuita est, an mercenaria?

Sic profecto res se habet, nullum ut sit vitae tempus, in quo non deceat leporem humanitatemque versari.

Tu quum ipse tantum librorum habeas, quos hic tandem requiris? — Commentarios quosdam, inquam, Aristotelios, quos hic sciebam esse, veni ut auferrem, quos legerem, dum essem otiosus.

REMARK. — So frequently quod si, quod etsi, quod nisi, quod quoniam, quod quia, quod quum, &c. E. g. Sunt qui dicant, a me in exsilium ejectionem esse Catilinam. Quod ego si verbo assequi possem, istos ipsos ejicerem qui haec loquuntur.

V. Words properly belonging together according to the natural arrangement, are frequently separated by others, to which the speaker attaches greater importance.

Words thus crowded out of the first place in the sentence are often emphatically put at the end. E. g.

Justitia est una omnium domina et regina virtutum.

Aedui equites ad Caesarem omnes revertuntur.

In hac sunt insulae domicilia Aegyptiorum.

Recepto Caesar Orico, nulla interposita mora, Apolloniam proficiscitur.

Cimon barbarorum uno concursu maximam vim prostravit.

Insula est Melita satis lato ab Sicilia mari, periculosoque disjuncta.

Sit hoc a principio persuasum civibus, dominos esse omnium rerum ac moderatores deos.

Quis potione uti aut cibo dulci diutius potest?

Hanc perfectam philosophiam

There is no one that can give you better advice than you yourself.

I am unable to judge how great those former pleasures of the Roman people were.

What? Is liberality gratuitous or mercenary?

It is really so, that there can be no time of life, in which pleasantries and urbanity cannot be indulged in.

As you yourself have so many books, which, pray, are you searching for here? — I came to take off certain commentaries of Aristotle, which I knew were here, in order that I might read them while I am at leisure.

Justice is pre-eminently the queen and mistress of all the virtues.

The cavalry of the Aedui all return to Caesar.

This island contains abodes of Egyptians.

After retaking Oricum, Caesar, without any delay, advances into Apollonia.

Cimon defeated in one engagement a very large force of Barbarians.

The island of Malta is separated from Sicily by a tolerably deep and dangerous sea.

Let the citizens first of all be persuaded of this, that the gods are the masters and governors of all things.

Who can use drink or sweet food any longer?

I have always considered that to

- semper iudicavi, quae de maximis quaestionibus copiose posset, ornateque dicere.* be perfect philosophy which can discourse with copiousness and elegance on questions of the highest interest.
- Hoc melius, quam tu, facere potest nemo.* No one could do this better than you can:
- Hoc tempore data est Eumeni Cappadocia.* At this time Cappadocia was given to Eumenes.
- Propterea quod aliud iter haberent nullum.* Because they had no other road.
- Omnes mundi partes undique medium locum capessentes nituntur aequiliter.* All parts of the world tend from every direction towards the central spot with equal force.

ARRANGEMENT OF SENTENCES AND CLAUSES.

D. Clauses which mutually determine each other follow an arrangement similar to that of the words composing them.

I. Periphrastic clauses, or such as represent a noun, adjective, or adverb, occupy precisely the place in which the word for which they stand would be.

Clauses of this kind generally commence with a relative. But they include also those containing an infinitive with a case, and participial clauses.

- Homines imperiti facilius, quod stulte dixeris, reprehendere, quam, quod sapienter tacueris, laudare possunt.* Ignorant men can more easily find fault with a foolish remark of yours, than they can praise the wisdom of your silence.
- Laudare eloquentiam, et, quanta vis sit ejus, exprimere, quantumque sis, qui sint eam consecuti, dignitatem afferat, neque propositum nobis est hoc loco, neque necessarium.* To praise eloquence, and to show the greatness of its force, and the dignity it bestows on those who have followed it, is neither our purpose in this place, nor is it necessary.
- Profecto studia nihil prosunt perveniendi aliquo, nisi illud, quod eo, quod intendas, ferat deductique, cognoris.* Your studies are of no avail in arriving at any result, unless you have become acquainted with that which carries and guides where you intend to go.

II. Relative clauses precede those of their antecedents when they contain the leading idea of the proposition; but when they merely expand or explain, they follow them. The same applies to clauses containing a comparison or an indirect question.

E. g.

- Non fecissem hominis paene infimi mentionem, nisi iudicarem, qui suspiciosus aut crimin-* I should not even mention the well-nigh lowest man, unless I thought that I had never heard nósius diceret, audivisse mē nēmīnem.

Tēpus est hujúsmodi, ut, ubi quisque est, ibi esse mínime vélit.

Frāter túus quánti mē faciāt sempérque fécerit, esse hóminem, qui ignórat, árbítror nēmīnem.

Quemúlmódum córam quí ad nós íntempestive ádeunt, molesti saepe sūnt, sic epístolae offéndunt, nōn lóco réddítæ.

Quó mājor est in ánimis præstántia et divínior, eo mājore índigent díligentia.

Véres ita se gessit in his rébus, quási réus núnquam esset futúrus.

any one that spoke more suspiciously and criminally.

The times are such now, that every one wishes to be least where he happens to be.

I believe there is no one who does not know how much your brother thinks of me, and has always thought of me!

As those who come into our presence at improper seasons are often troublesome, so letters are offensive to us, that are not delivered at the proper time.

The greater and diviner the superiority of intellect, the greater diligence it stands in need of.

Véres has conducted himself in this business, as if he never were going to be impeached.

III. Clauses containing a determination of time or place, and those denoting a cause, condition, or concession, occupy the first place, when they contain the conditions necessary to produce the given result; but if they merely limit or explain, they are put last. E. g.

Alexánder, quum ínteremísset Clítum, familiārem súum, víx a se mánuis abstínuit.

Cogítare debébas, ubicúnque esses, tē fóre in ejus ipsíus, quém fúgis, potestáte.

Ut consuetúdinem dicéndi mutárem, ea cáusa míhi in Ásiam proficiscéndi fúit.

Fábula étiam nonnúnquam, etsi est incredíbilis, támen hómines cómunovet.

Conténdi cum Clódio, quum ego públicam cáusam, ille súam défenderet.

Scipióni erat mágna glória própósita, si Hannibálem in Africam retraxísset.*

When Alexander had killed Clitus, his friend, he could scarcely refrain from violence to himself.

You should have considered, that, wherever you might be, you would be in the power of the very man from whom you endeavor to escape.

The cause of my going into Asia was, that I might change my manner of speaking.

A fiction even sometimes affects men, although it be an incredible one.

I fought with Clodius when I defended the cause of the public and his own.

Scipio would have had great glory before him, if he could have drawn Hannibal back into Africa.

* On this erat proposita, compare Lesson LXXXIV. A. III.

IV. The union of several clauses, harmoniously joined together, so as to express a complete thought, is called a period.

Periods are divided into several kinds, according to the style of composition to which they belong. The principal are the historical, the didactic, the epistolary, and the oratorical. Of these the epistolary is characterized by the greatest ease, freedom from restraint, and naturalness, while the oratorical aims at the severest symmetry, euphony, and harmony of all its members. E. g.

De meâ in tã voluntâte sic vélím júdices, mē, quibuscúnque rēbus ópus ésse intélligam, quán-quam vídeam, qui sim hóc

EXERCISE 172.— (LETTERS.)

1. MARCUS TULLIUS CICERO TO * * * GREETING.*

I am deprived of an important witness of my high regard (amoris summi) for you, — of your father, of distinguished memory (clarissimo viro), who with his honors (laudibus), and especially with a son like you (tum vero te filio), would have overcome the destiny of (us) all (superasset omnium fortunam), if he had been so fortunate as to see you before he departed this life. But I hope that our friendship does not stand in need of any witnesses. May the gods prosper (fortunare) your patrimony! You will at any rate (certe) have me (as one), to whom you may be as dear and agreeable (jucundus) as you were to your father. Adieu.

2. M. T. CICERO TO * * * GREETING.

I hope you are very well (si vales, bene est); I am well. We have thus far no reliable information (quidquam certi) either (neque) concerning Cæsar's arrival or (neque) concerning the letter, which Philotinus is said to have. If there is anything certain (si quid erit certi), I shall let you know (certiorem facere) immediately. See that you take good care of your health. Adieu.

3. M. T. CICERO TO * * * GREETING.

I think that we shall come to Tusculanum either by the Nones (Nōnis),† or on the day after (postrulie). Let everything be (ut sint) ready (for us) there. Perhaps there will be several with us, and we shall, I think, remain there for some length of time (diutius). If the tub is not in the bath, let it be (put) there (ut sit). So also whatever else may be (Item cetera, quæ sunt) necessary for life (ad vitam) and health. Adieu.

4. M. T. CICERO TO * * * GREETING.

I earnestly recommend to you Hippias, the son of Philoxenus, of Calacta (Calactinus), my guest and intimate friend. His property (bona), as (quemadmodum) the matter has been reported to me, is publicly held under another name, contrary to the laws of the Calactini. If this is so, the case itself (res ipsa) ought to prevail on your sense of justice (ab æquitate tuâ . . . impetrare debet), that you should help (subvenire) him. But however that may be, I ask of you to relieve him (expedire) out of respect for me, and to render him such assistance (tantumque ei commodes), both in this matter and in other respects (et in ceteris), as (quantum) your honor (fides) and dignity will admit (patietur). You will do me a very great favor.

* For greeting put either S. D., i. e. Salutem dicit, or S. P. D., Salutem plurimam dicit. The name of the person addressed in the dative. E. g. Planco, Trebatio, Metello, Curioni, Terentiae suæ.

† The Romans called the fifth day of the month Nōnæ, diem. In March, May, July, and October, this was the seventh day. Consult Lexicon.

5. M. T. CICERO TO * * * GREETING.

I think you are aware how greatly I esteemed Caius Avianus Flaccus; and I had learned from himself (ex ipso audieram), (who was) a most excellent and agreeable (gratus) man, how generously he had been treated by you. The sons of this (man), worthy in every respect (dignissimos) of that father, and my intimate friends, whom I greatly cherish (unice diligo), I recommend to you as earnestly (sic) as I can recommend any one (ut majore studio nullos commendare posim). Caius Avianus is in Sicily. Marcus is with us. My desire is (te rogo), that you should honor (ornare) the merit (dignitas) of the one present with you (illius praesentis), and defend the interest (rem) of both (of them). You can do nothing in that province (that will be) more agreeable to me. I most earnestly request you to do so.

6. M. T. CICERO TO * * * GREETING.

I hope you are very well; I am well. If I had anything to write to you, I should do (so) in more words and more frequently. You see how matters stand at present (nunc quae sint negotia). As to how I am personally (ego aulem quomodo) affected, you will be able to ascertain (cognoscere) from Leptas and Trebatius. See that you take proper care of (Tu fac ut . . . cures) your health and that of Tullia. Adieu.

7. M. T. CICERO TO * * * GREETING.

I have read your letter; from which I understand that Cæsar considers you very learned in the law. You have reason to rejoice, that you have come to those places where you might have the appearance (ubi viderere) of knowing something (aliquid sapere). But if (quodsi) you had also gone into Britannia, there certainly would have been no one in that great island more experienced (peritior) than you. And yet (verum tamen) I envy you somewhat (subinvideo), for having been called, of his own accord (ultro), by one to whom others cannot even aspire (aspirare), not on account of his pride, but on account of his occupation. But in that letter of yours you have written me nothing about your affairs, which, I assure you (mehercule), are no less an object of concern to me (mihi non minori curae sunt) than my own. I am very much afraid of your feeling cold in your winter-quarters (in hibernis); on which account I advise you to keep up (utendum censeo) a good fire (camino luculento). Mucius and Manilius are of the same opinion (idem placebat with the dat.), especially as you are but sparingly supplied with military cloaks (qui sagis non abundares). I hear however (quamquam audio) that you feel warm enough where you are (istic); on account of which intelligence (quo quidem nuntio) I was, I assure you, very much concerned about you (de te timueram). But you are more cautious in military affairs than in the law (in ad-vocationibus), since you desired neither to swim in the ocean, (though) extremely fond (studiosissimus homo) of swimming, nor to see the esseclarii,* (though the man), whom before we could not even cheat blindfolded (quem antea ne andabatam quidem† defraudare poteramus). But jesting aside (jam satis jocati sumus), you yourself know how earnestly (diligenter) I have written to Cæsar about you; how often (I have done so), I (myself know). But I had already ceased to do so (jam intermiseram), lest I might seem to distrust the disposition (voluntas) of a man most generous and affectionate towards me. And yet (sed tamen) I thought that it was necessary to remind the man (esse hominem commonendum) in the letter (dat.) which I sent him last. I accordingly did so (Id feci). I wish you to inform me of the result (quid profecerim); and, at the same time, of your entire condition (de toto statu tuo) and of all your plans. For I am anxious (cupio) to know what you are doing, what you expect, (and) how long you suppose this absence of yours from us (istum tuum discessum a nobis) will be (i. e. last). For I assure you, that it is one consolation to me, which enables me to bear more easily (quare facilius possim pati) your absentment from us (te esse sine nobis), if it is an advantage to you (to be so); but if it is none, (then) nothing can exceed the folly of both of us (nihil duobus nobis est stultius); of me, for not drawing you to Rome; of you, for not flying hither (at once). . . . Let me know therefore (quare at the beginning of the sentence) about all (these) matters, as soon as you can. I shall certainly help you (juro), either with my sympathy (consolando), or with advice, or with substantial assistance (re).

* An essedarius was either a soldier or a gladiator, that fought from a war-chariot or essedum.

† An andabata was a sort of gladiator, who wore a helmet without visors, and thus fought like a blind man.

But all these have generally ii instead of ivi in the perfect; as, abiī, exiī, periī, prodiī, &c. To these add veneo (= venum + eo), I am sold. Ambio, I go around, is the only compound regularly conjugated like audio, and has consequently ambiēbam, ambiens, ambiendū, &c.

The only passive forms of eo are the impersonal itur and itum est. But the compounds of eo which have acquired a transitive sense have a regular passive voice; as, adeo, inco, praetereo.

A future in eam, iea, iei, ient (instead of ibo, ibis, &c.), occurs only in later authors, and is confined to the compounds.

These verbs are both conjugated like eo. Many of the forms, however, are seldom used, except those of the present. Nepos and Cæsar never employ any of them. Instead of nequeo Cicero frequently puts non queo.

Passive forms are quitur, nequitur, quita est, nequitum est, but these are rarely used, and only in connection with an infinitive passive. E. g. Forma nosci non quita est, The form could not be distinguished.

C. DEFECTIVE VERBS.

Defective verbs are those which occur only in certain forms and connections.

The principal verbs of this class are aio and inquam, I say; fūri, to speak; the præteritives coepi, I have begun; memini, I remember; nōvi, I know; odi, I hate; the imperatives apāge, āve, salve, and vāle. So also cēdo, quaeso, and fōrem.

1. Aio, I say.

INDIC. PRES. āio, āis, āit; P. — — āiunt.

SUBJ. PRES. — aias, aiat; P. — — aiant.

IMPER. ai (obsolete).

PART. aiens (only as adjective).

Instead of the interrogative aiens the contracted ain' frequently occurs.

2. Inquam, I say.

INDIC. PRES. inquam, inquis, inquit; P. inquimus, inquitis, inquunt.

" IMPERF. inquēbam, &c. P. inquēbāmus, &c.

SUBJ. PRES. — inquias, inquiat; P. — inquitis, inquiant.

IMPERAT. S. inque, inquitto; P. inquitte.

The present inquam sometimes supplies the place of the first person perfect, which is wanting.

3. Fāri, to speak, say.

IMPERAT. fāre.

PART. fātus, a, um.

GER. fando.

So the compound forms affamur, affamini, affābar, effābor, effāberis. This verb rarely occurs except in poetry. The first person fer, and the subj. fer, fatur, are never used.

4. Coepi, coepisse, coeptūrus, I have begun.

PARTICIPLES.

PERF. PASS. coeptus.	—	—	perūsus, exūsus (active).
FUT. ACT. coeptūrus.	—	—	osūrus.

Of the above verbs memini, nōri, and ōdi have a present signification. Hence the pluperfect has the sense of the imperfect, and the second future that of the first.

Instead of coepi the passive coeptus est is also used, especially in connection with the infinitive passive. E. g. Oppugnāri coeptum est oppidum, The town began to be besieged.

8. Apāge, away! Ave, Salve, hail. Vale, farewell.

Apāge has sometimes an accusative after it ; as, Apāge il, Away with you ! Salve also occurs in the present indic., salveo. Vale and ave are regular imperatives of the verbs valeo, I am well, and aveo, I am desirous, and are defective only in consequence of the change of signification.

All of these imperatives have also a plural and a future form ; as,

S. ave.	F. avēto.	P. avēte.
S. salve.	F. salvēto.	P. salvēte.
S. vale.	F. valēto.	P. valēte.

FUTURE forms with the imperative force are salcēbis, valēbis.

INFINITIVES are salvère, valère.

9. Cēdo, give me, or say, tell.

This verb may stand either as the singular or plural. Special plural forms are cedite and cette. Its sense is similar to that of the French tenez.

10. Quaeso, I pray, pray.

This verb is most commonly interjected in the sentence, like the English "pray," "please." Its plural is quaesimus.

11. Fōrem, I might be.

From the obsolete root fāo, and contracted for fuērem. It is otherwise regular, and the infinitive is fōre, "to be about to be." (Cf. page 666.)

D. VERBS WHICH ARE IRREGULAR IN THE FORMATION OF THE PERFECT AND SUPINE.

Many Latin verbs are irregular in the formation of the second and third roots, which frequently assume the characteristics of another conjugation. These will be enumerated and examined in the following lists, according to their respective conjugations.

L. FIRST CONJUGATION.

Regular verbs of the first conjugation end in o, āre, āvi, ātum. E. g.

Ambūlo, ambulāre, ambulāvi, ambulātum, to walk.

Celo, celāre, celāvi, celātum, to conceal.

Impēro, imperāre, imperāvi, imperātum, to command.

Vulnēro, vulnerāre, vulnerāvi, vulnerātum, to wound.

Several verbs of the first conjugation follow the analogy of the second, and form their perfect in ūi and the supine in ūtum. A few more are otherwise irregular in these parts. They are:—

Crēpo, āre, crepūi, crepītum, to ring, clatter, resound.

Compounds are concrepāre, discrepāre, and increpāre.

Cūbo, āre, cubūi, cubītum, to lie, recline.

So the compounds accūbo, excūbo, incūbo, secūbo, and others. But the compos. of cūbo which take an m before b are of the third conjugation (c. g. discumbēre). — The regular perfects cubāvi and incubāvi also occur.

Dō, dāre, dēdi, dātum, to give.

So circumdāre, pessundāre, satisdāre, and vensundāre. But the remaining compos. belong to the third conjugation; as, addēre, condēre, reddēre, &c. — Obsolete forms of the pres. subj. are duim, duis, duit, from the secondary duo.

Dōmo, āre, domūi, domītum, to tame, curb.

So the compos. edōmāre and perdōmāre.

Frīco, āre, fricūi, fricātum or frictum, to rub.

So the compos. defricāre, infricāre, perfricāre, and refricāre.

Jūvo, āre, jūvi, jūtum, juvatūrus, to assist, help.

So also adjuvāre, adjūvi, adjūtum, adjutūrus or adjuvatūrus.

Lāvo, āre, lāvī, lavātum, lautum, and lōtum, to wash.

An infinitive lavēre occurs in the older Latinity and in poetry.

Mīco, āre, micūi, —, to glitter, shine.

So emīco, āre, emicūi, emicātum. But dimīco, I contend, fight, has the regular perfect dimicāvi.

Nēco, āre, āvi, ātum, to kill, is regular, but the Compos. enēcāre has āvi, ātum and enecūi, enectum. The participle is commonly enectus; internēcāre has internecātus.

Plico, āre, āvi and ūi, ātum and itum, to fold.

So the compos. applicāre, complicāre, explicāre, and implicāre. But duplico, multiplico, and supplico, which are derived from adjectives in plex, have regularly āvi, ātum.

Pōto, āre, āvi, potātum and more commonly pōtum, to drink.

The participle is pōtus, which is both passive, "drunk," and active, "having drunk." The compos. appōtus is active, "having drunk sufficiently"; and epōtus, passive, "emptied by drinking."

Sēco, āre, sēcui, sectum, secatūrus, to cut.

Compos. desecāre, dissecāre, persecāre. But praesecāre and resecāre have cātum or ctum in the supine.

Sōno, āre, sonūi, sonitum, sonatūrus, to sound.

So consonāre, dissonāre, personāre, resonāre.

Stō, stāre, stēti, stātum, to stand.

So antestāre, circumstāre, interstāre, and superstāre. But the remaining compounds have ŭi in the perfect; as, adstāre, constāre, perf. adstūi, constūi; so existāre, instāre, obstāre, perstāre, praestāre, and restāre. Some of these compounds want the supine. Distāre has neither perf. nor supine. Praestāre has (in later authors only) sup. praestitum, but very frequently praestatūrus.

Tōno, āre, tonūi, (tonitum,) to thunder.

So attonāre (part. attonitus), intonāre (part. intonitus); but circumtonāre wants the third root.

Vēto, āre, vetūi, vetitum, to prohibit, forbid.

Among the irregularities of the first conjugation may be included the perfect participles of the verbs coenāre and jurāre, which are used in an active sense; — coenātus, "having dined"; jurātus, "having sworn." So the compounds conjurātus, "having conspired," and injurātus, "one who has not sworn." Among later authors conspirātus is used actively like conjurātus, and in the same sense.

II. SECOND CONJUGATION.

Regular verbs of the second conjugation end in ēo, ēre, ūi, itum. E. g.

Dēbēo, debēre, debūi, debitum, to owe.

Habēo, habēre, habūi, habitum, to have.

Mērēo, merēre, merūi, meritum, to earn.

Tacēo, tacēre, tacūi, tacitum, to be silent.

The verbs of the second conjugation, which deviate from the forms exhibited in these examples, may be divided into, —

1. Those which are irregular or defective in the formation of the perfect or supine roots, but yet remain within the limits of the conjugation.

2. Those which follow the analogy of the third conjugation in the formation of those parts.

3. Those which want the second and third roots entirely.

4. Semideponentia.

1. The verbs of the second conjugation which are irregular or defective in the second or third root, but still do not transcend the limits of the conjugation, are, —

a) Those which have vi instead of vūi, or ēvi instead of ūi, in the perfect.

Cāvēo, ēre, cāvi, cautum, to beware.
So praecavēre.

Connīveo, ēre, nīvi and nixi, —, to close the eyes, to wink.

Deleo, ēre, delēvi, delētum, to extinguish, destroy.

Fāveo, ēre, fāvi, fāutum, to favor.

Ferveo, ēre, fervi and ferbui, —, to glow, to be hot.

Obsolete are the forms fervit, fervat, fervēre, according to the third conj. The double perfect (in vi and bui) extends also to the inchoatives deservescere, effervescere, and reservescere. But confervescere has generally conferbui.

Flēo, flēre, flēvi, flētum, to weep.

Fōveo, fōvēre, fōvi, fōtum, to cherish.

Mōveo, ēre, mōvi, mōtum, to move.

So the compos. amovere, admoveire, commovere, permovere, &c.

The root OL, to grow, gives rise to the compos. abolēo, I abolish;

b) Those which have tum or sum instead of itum in the supine.

Censeo, ēre, censui, censum, to suppose, think.

The participle census occurs with an active sense. So also census sum, from a deponent censor. Percenseo wants the supine. Accenseo has accensus; succenseo, successurus; and recenseo, two supines recensum and recensitum.

Dōceo, ēre, docui, doctum, to teach.

So the compos. dedocere, edocere, and perdocere.

Misceo, ēre, miscui, mistum or mixtum, to mix.

c) Those which have ui in the perfect regularly, but no supine.

Arceo, ēre, arcui, to drive away.

But the compos. coercere and exercere have a supine in itum.

Caleo, ēre, callui, to be callous.

Candeo, ēre, candui, to shine, to glow.

Egeo, ēre, egui, to want, need.

Compos. indigere.

Emineo, ēre, eminui, to project, rise aloft.

Floreo, ēre, florui, to bloom, flourish.

Frondeo, ēre, frondui (and effrondui), to have leaves.

abolesco, I cease; adoleo and adulesco, I grow up; exoleo or exolesco and obsoleo or obsolesco, I grow out of use; all of which have ēvi in the perfect.

The supine of aboleo is abolitum. The rest want this part entirely, but have given rise to the adjectives adultus, exolitus, and obsoletus.

Pāveo, ēre, pāvi, —, to fear, tremble.

From this the inchoative expaveo, ēre, expāvi, of which the perfect is especially frequent.

The root PLE, to fill, gives rise to the compos. complēo, explēo, and implēo, I fill, fill up; all of which have ēvi, ētum.

Vōveo, ēre, vōvi, vōtum, to vow.

So the compos. devovēre, to curse.

The supine mixtum is the more common and correct. Compos. are admiscere, commiscere, immiscere, permiscere.

Tēneo, ēre, tenui, (tentum,) to hold.

Compos. abstinere, attinere, continere, delinere, distinere, retinere, and sustinere, all of which have tentum in the supine. Pertinere wants the supine, and the simple tentum rarely occurs.

Torreo, ēre, torrui, tostum, to roast.

Horreo, ēre, horrui, to shiver, shudder.

So abhorreere and a number of inchoatives.

Langueo, ēre, langui, to languish.

Lūteo, ēre, lūtui, to be concealed, to be hid.

Compos. interlatere, perlatere, and sublatere.

Mādeo, ēre, mādui, to be wet.

Nīteo, ēre, nītui, to shine.

Compos. enitere, internitere, and praenitere.

Oleo, ēre, olūi, to smell.

Compos. oblēre, redolēre, and subolēre.

Palleo, ēre, pallūi, to be pale.

Pāteo, ēre, patūi, to stand open.

Rīgeo, ēre, rigūi, to be stiff.

Rūbeo, ēre, rubūi, to be red.

Sileo, ēre, silūi, to be silent.

Sorbeo, ēre, sorbui, to sip.

The perfect sorpsi rarely occurs.

Compos. are absorbēre and exsorbēre.

Sordeo, ēre, sordūi, to be filthy.

Splendeo, ēre, splendūi, to shine.

Stūdeo, ēre, studūi, to strive.

Stūpeo, ēre, stupūi, to be astonished, amazed.

Timeo, ēre, timūi, to be afraid.

Torpeo, ēre, torpūi, to be torpid.

Tūmeo, ēre, tumūi, to be tumid, to swell.

Vigeo, ēre, vigūi, to be lively, strong.

Vīreo, ēre, virūi, to be green.

REMARK. — Besides the verbs here enumerated, there are a number of others, derived from adjectives. But these occur more rarely in the form here presented, and are generally inchoatives. Cf. F.

2. The verbs of the second conjugation which form the perfect and supine after the analogy of the third, are as follows : —

a) Those which have i in the perfect and sum in the supine.

Mordeo, ēre, mornordi, morsum, to bite.

Pendeo, ēre, pependi, pensum, to hang.

The compos. dependeo and impendeo lose the reduplication: dependi, impendi.

Prandeo, ēre, prandi, pransum, to dine.

The participle pransus has an active sense, "having dined."

Sēdeo, ēre, sēdi, sessum, to sit.

So the compos. assidēre, circumse- dēre or circumsidēre, desidēre, insidēre, obsidēre, possidēre, and supersedēre. But dissidēre and praesidēre want the supine.

Strideo, ēre, stridi, —, to hiss.

This verb wants the supine. In poetry the infinitive is often stridere.

Spondeo, ēre, spopondi, sponsum, to vow, promise.

Compounds drop the reduplication; as, despondeo, desponsi; respondeo, responsi.

Tondeo, ēre, totondi, tonsum, to shave.

Compounds without reduplication are attondeo, attondi; detondeo, detondi.

Vīdeo, ēre, vīdi, visum, to see.

So the compos. invidēre, pervidēre, praevīdēre, and providēre.

b) Those which have si in the perfect and sum in the supine.

Ardeo, ēre, arsi, arsum, to be on fire, to burn.

Denseo, ēre, densi, densum (ad- jective), to thicken.

Haereo, ēre, haesi, haesum, to ad- here, stick.

Compos. are adhaerēre, cohaerēre, inhaerēre.

Jubeo, ēre, jussi, jussum, to com- mand, bid.

Maneo, ēre, mansi, mansum, to remain.

Compos. permanēre, remanēre.

Mulceo, ēre, mulsi, mulsum, to soothe, caress.

Compos. demulcēre and permulcēre. The participle permulctus for permul- sus is doubtful.

Mulgeo, ēre, mulsi, mulsum, to milk.

Comp. part. emulsus.

Rideo, ēre, risi, risum, to laugh.

Compos. arridēre, deridēre, irridēre, subridēre.

Suadeo, ēre, suāsi, suāsum, to ad- vise.

Compos. dissuadēre, persuadēre.

Tergeo, ēre, tersi, tersum, to wipe.

This verb is even more frequently of the third conj., tergo, ēre, si, sum. But the compos. abtergēre, detergēre, extergēre, are more commonly of the second.

c) Those which have si or xi in the perfect, and tum in the supine, or supine wanting.

Augeo, ēre, auxi, auctum, to increase.

Frigeo, ēre, frixi, —, to be cold.

Indulgeo, ēre, indulsi, indultum, to indulge.

Lūceo, ēre, luxi, —, to shine.

Lūgeo, ēre, luxi, —, to mourn.

Torqueo, ēre, torsi, tortum, to turn, twist.

Compos. contorquēre, distortquēre, extorquēre.

d) Those which have si in the perfect, but no supine.

Algeo, ēre, alsi, to be cold.

The supine is wanting, but an adjective alsus, a, um, cool, cold, exists.

Fulgeo, ēre (in poetry also fulgēre), fulsi, to glitter.

Turgeo, ēre, tursi (rarely), to swell.

Urgeo (urgueo), ēre, ursi, to urge, impel.

3. Those which have neither perfect nor supine.

Aveo, ēre, to desire. (Cf. p. 672.)

Calveo, ēre, to be bald.

Cāneo, ēre, to be gray.

Cieo, ciēre, to move, rouse.

An obsolete form of this verb is cio, cire. Both have the common perfect civi, supine citum (from ciao) and citum (from cio). Compos. are concio, excicio, incio, percio. Participles in use are concitus, excitus, moved, excited; but excitus, called out. So incitus and percitus in the sense of "to move"; but accire, to call, has only accitus. From citum the frequentative citāre, and the compos. excitāre, incitāre, and suscitāre.

Flāveo, ēre, to be yellow.

Foeteo, ēre, to stink.

Hēbeo, ēre, to be dull.

Hūmeo, ēre, to be moist.

Līveo, ēre, to be livid.

Mīneo, ēre, to hang over.

Compos. imminēre, prominēre.

Moereo, ēre, to mourn, to be sad.

Polleo, ēre, to have power.

Renideo, ēre, to shine; to smile.

Scāteo, ēre (sometimes scatēre), to swarm with.

Squāleo, ēre, to be filthy.

Vēgeo, ēre, to be active.

4. The following semideponentia. (Cf. page 161, Rem. 4.)

Audeo, ēre, ausus sum, to dare, venture.

An obsolete perfect is ausi, from which the future subjunctive ausim, ausis, ausit, ausint. The poets use the participle ausus and inausus in a passive sense.

Gaudeo, ēre, gavisus sum (Part.

Ful. gavisurus), to rejoice.

Soleo, ēre, solitus sum, to be accustomed.

Compos. impera. assōlet.

III. THIRD CONJUGATION.

The verbs of the third conjugation exhibit the greatest diversity in the formation of their perfect and supine. The regular formation of the perfect has already been explained on page 237, Rem. 3, notes † and ‡, and that of the supine on page 246, Rem. 3. For the sake of clearness on this point, we will here enumerate the different classes of regular verbs, arranged according to the termination of their first root, and then add to each class the verbs which deviate from the established rule.

1. Verbs which have a vowel or a v before the final o of the present, form their perfect in i and the supine in tum. E. g.

Acuo, ēre, acūi, acūtum, to sharpen.

Compos. exacuere, peracuere, and praeacuere.

Arguo, ēre, argūi, argūtum, to accuse.

Compos. coarguere, redarguere. The perf. part. is commonly convictus.

Congruo, ēre, congrūi, —, to agree.

Supine wanting. So also ingruere (primitive root not in use).

6. Verbs in so and xo are, —

Depso, ěre, depsi, deustum and depstum, to knead.

Piso, ěre, pinsi or pinsi, pistum or pistum, to pound, grind.

Texo, ěre, texi, textum, to weave.

Compos. are atlexo, conlexo, oblexo, perlexo, praetexo, and relexo.

Viso, ěre, visi, —, to go to see, to visit.

A supine visum is borrowed from videre.

Some of this class follow the analogy of the fourth conjugation : —

Arcesso (or accerso), ěre, arcessi, arcessitum, to send for.

Capesso, ěre, capessi, capestim, to take up, lay hold of.

Facesso, ěre, facessi, facestum, to perform, accomplish.

Incesso, ěre, incessi (or incessi), —, to attack, assail.

Lacesso, ěre, lacessi (or li), lacestum, to provoke.

7. Verbs in sco form their perfect and supine as follows : —

Compesco, ěre, compepsi, to curb, restrain.

Cresco, ěre, crevi, cretum, to grow.

So the compos. concreasco, decreasco, and excreasco. But accreasco, increasco, and sucreasco want the supine.

Disco, ěre, didici, (discitūrus), to learn.

Compos. addisco, addidici. So also ediscere and dediscere.

Dispesco, ěre, dispesci, —, to divide, separate.

Glisco, ěre, —, —, to begin, spread.

Hisco, ěre, —, —, to yawn; to mutter.

Nosco (gnosco), ěre, novi, notum, to become acquainted with.

So ignosco and dignosco. But agnosco, cognosco, and recognosco have supine agnitum, cognitum, and recognitum.

Pasco, ěre, pavi, pastum, to pasture, feed.

Posco, ěre, poposci, —, to demand, ask.

So deposco, exposco, both with poposci, and reposco without perfect.

Quiesco, ěre, quievi, quietum, to rest.

Compos. acquiescere, conquiescere, and requiescere.

Suesco, ěre, suavi, suetum, to accustom one's self.

Part. suavius, accustomed. Compos. consuesco, consuesco, desuesco, and inuesco.

IV. FOURTH CONJUGATION.

Regular verbs of this conjugation form their perfect in ivi or ii, and the supine in itum. E. g.

Audio, audire, audiivi or audii, auditum, to hear.

Erudio, erudire, erudiivi or erudii, eruditum, to instruct.

Munio, munire, munivi or munii, munitum, to fortify.

Vestio, vestire, vestivi or vestii, vestitum, to clothe.

Irregular in one or both of the characteristic parts are the following:—

Amicio, ire, icūi or ixi, ictum, to clothe, put on.

The perf. amicūi, amici, and amicitui scarcely ever occurs.

Aperio, ire, aperūi, apertum, to open.

So operio and cooperio. But comperio and reperio have pēri, pertum.

Cio, ire, civi, citum, to move, excite.

This is the old and regular form for cica, cici, citum, on which see p. 677. 3.

Eo, ire, ivi, itum, to go. (See page 669.)

Farcio, ire, farsi, fartum (fartum), to stuff.

Supine more rarely farsum. Compos. confercio and refercio, fersi, fertum. Others are infercio and effercio.

Ferio, ire, —, —, to strike.

In the perf. active percussi, and in the passive ictus sum, are commonly used.

Ferocio, ire, —, —, to be insolent, wild.

Fulcio, ire, fulsi, fultum, to prop.

The perfect of fulcio has the same form as that of fulgeo.

Haurio, ire, hausi, haustum, to draw.

Supine more rarely hausum; but frequently hausurus.

Punio, ire, ivi or li, itum, to punish.

Regular, except that its passive forms sometimes occur in a deponent sense.

Quœo, quire, quivi or quii, quitum, to be able. (Cf. page 670.)

Raucio, ire, rausi, rausum, to be hoarse.

Compos. irraucio.

Salio, ire, salūi or salti, saltum, to spring, leap.

Compos. desilire, exsilire, insilire, &c., generally perf. silui, rather than sili or silivi. But salire, to salt, is regular.

Sancio, ire, sanxi, sanctum and sancitum, to ordain, appoint.

Sanctus is generally participle, and sanctus adjective.

Sarcio, ire, sarsi, sartum, to patch, mend.

Compos. resarcire.

Sentio, ire, sensi, sensum, to feel, think.

So consentire, dissentire, and præsentire. But instead of assentio, commonly assentior deponent.

Sepelio, ire, ivi, sepultum, to bury.

Sepio, ire, sepsi, septum, to hedge in.

Venio, ire, vēni, ventum, to come.

Compos. advenire, concenire, invenire, obvenire, and pervenire.

Vincio, ire, vinxi, vinctum, to bind.

So compos. devincte.

REMARK. — Desiderative verbs in ūrio generally have neither perfect nor supine; as, dormitūrio, ire, I desire to sleep; coenatūrio, ire, I desire to dine. The only exceptions are esūrio, esurivi, esuritūrus, I am hungry; nuptūrio, nupturivi, I wish to get married, and partūrio, parturivi, I wish to bring forth.

E. DEPONENT VERBS.

I. Deponent verbs of the first conjugation are all regular, and conjugated like hortor (page 173, A). E. g.

Adversor, āri, ātus sum, to oppose, resist.

Arbitror, āri, ātus sum, to suppose, think.

Aspernor, āri, ātus sum, to despise.

Auxilior, āri, ātus sum, to help.

Calumnior, āri, ātus sum, to calumniate.

Criminor, āri, ātus sum, to accuse.

Cunctor, āri, ātus sum, to hesitate.

Domīnor, āri, ātus sum, to rule.

Epūlor, āri, ātus sum, to feast.

Fenōror, āri, ātus sum, to lend on interest.

Glorior, āri, ātus sum, to boast.

Hospitor, āri, ātus sum, to be a guest.

Imitor, āri, ātus sum, to imitate.
 Jacitor, āri, ātus sum, to throw.
 Licitor, āri, ātus sum, to bid.
 Luctor, āri, ātus sum, to struggle.
 Medicor, āri, ātus sum, to heal.
 Moderor, āri, ātus sum, to moderate.
 Negotior, āri, ātus sum, to do business.
 Odoror, āri, ātus sum, to smell.
 Oscilor, āri, ātus sum, to kiss.
 Parasitor, āri, ātus sum, to act the parasite.
 Philosophor, āri, ātus sum, to philosophize.
 Proelior, āri, ātus sum, to fight.

Ratiocinor, āri, ātus sum, to reason, compute.
 Rusticor, āri, ātus sum, to rustic.
 Sciscitor, āri, ātus sum, to inquire into.
 Stipitor, āri, ātus sum, to stipulate.
 Susplicor, āri, ātus sum, to suspect.
 Testificor, āri, ātus sum, to witness, attest.
 Tutor, āri, ātus sum, to protect.
 Urnor, āri, ātus sum, to dice.
 Vagor, āri, ātus sum, to ramble.
 Veneror, āri, ātus sum, to venerate.
 Vociferor, āri, ātus sum, to vociferate.

To the above might be added many others equally regular.

The following occur only in certain authors as deponent, and more commonly as active verbs: communicor, commurmūror, fluctuor, fructuor, lacrimor, luxuriōr, nictor, and relistcor.

Cicero employs adūlor, arbitror, criminor, and dignor both as deponent and as passive verbs.

II. The deponent verbs of the second conjugation are, —

Fateor, ēri, fassus sum, to confess.
 Compos. confiteor, confessus sum; profiteor, professus sum. But diffiteor wants the participle.

Liceor, ēri, licitus sum, to offer a bid.
 So compos. pollicēri.

Medeor, ēri, —, to heal.
 Participle commonly medicātus from medicāri.

Mereor, ēri, meritus sum, to merit, earn.
 Compos. commerēri, demerēri, and promerēri.

Misereor, ēri, miseritus or miseratus sum, to pity.
 Frequently impersonally miseretur or miseret me.

Reor, rēri, ratus sum, to suppose.
 Tueor, ēri, tultus sum, to guard, protect.

An obsolete form of this is tuor of the third conjugation, from which the adjective tulus. Compos. are contuēri and intuēri.

Vereor, ēri, veritus sum, to fear.
 Compos. reverēri and subverēri.

III. The deponent verbs of the third conjugation are, —

Apiscor, apisci, aptus sum, to gain, acquire. (Obsolete.)
 Compos. adapiscor, adeptus sum, and indapiscor, indeptus sum, with the same sense.

Divortor, to turn aside; praevertor, to outstrip; and revertor, to return.

The perfect of these verbs is derived from the active form vertō; hence commonly reverti, reverteram, &c., for reversus sum. The part. reversus, however, has an active sense, "having returned."

Expergiscor, expergisci, experrectus sum, to awake.

From this expergefaccere, part. expergefactus. But the verb expergere, part. expergitus, is obsolete.

Fruor, frui, fructus or fructus sum, to enjoy.
 Compos. perfruo, perfructus sum.

Fungor, fungi, functus sum, to perform.
 Compos. defungi, perfungi.

Grādiōr, grādi, gressus sum, to step, walk.

Compos. aggredior, aggredi, aggressus sum. So also congrēdi, digrēdi, egrēdi, ingrēdi, progrēdi, and regrēdi.

Invēhor, invēhi, invecus sum, to inveigh against.

Irascor, irasci, —, to be angry.
(Inchoative.)

Irātus sum has the sense of the present, "I am angry." For the perf. succensui is used.

Lābor, lābi, lapsus sum, to glide, slip, fall.

Compos. collābi, delābi, dilābi, prolābi, and relābi.

Lōquor, lōqui, locūtus sum, to speak.

Compos. allōqui, collōqui, elōqui, interlōqui, oblōqui.

Miniscor (not used).

From it the compos. comminiscor, comminisci, commentus sum, to devise, imagine; and reminiscor, reminisci, with the perf. recordātus sum, to remember. — The part. commentus has a passive sense, "devised," "invented."

Mōrior, mōri, mortuus sum, fut. part. moritūrus, to die.

Obsolete infinitive moriri. Compos. commori, demori, and emori.

Nanciscor, nāisci, nactus sum, to obtain.

Part. sometimes written nactus.

Nascor, nasci, nātus sum, to be born.

Original form gnascor, which still exists in agnatus and cognatus. Compos. enascor, innascor, and renascor.

Nitor, niti, nīsus or nīxus sum, to strive, to rely upon.

Compos. adniti, conniti, entiti, and obniti.

Obliviscor, oblivisci, oblitus sum, to forget.

Paciscor, pacisci, pactus sum, to bargain, stipulate.

Compos. compacisci or compecisci, depacisci or depecisci, all with pactus sum.

Pascor, pasci, pastus sum, to feed, graze.

Patior, pati, passus sum, to suffer.

Compos. perpetior, perpēti, perpassus sum.

Plecto, plectere, to plait, braid, gives rise to the Compos. amplector and complector, complexus sum, to embrace.

Proficiscor, proficisci, profectus sum, to travel, to depart.

Quēror, quēri, questus sum, to complain.

Compos. conquēri.

Ringor, ringi, —, to show one's teeth; to chafe.

Sēquor, sēqui, secūtus sum, to follow.

Compos. assēqui, consēqui, exsēqui, insēqui, obsēqui, persēqui, prosēqui, and subsēqui.

Ulciscor, ulcisci, ultus sum, to revenge, punish.

Utor, ūti, ūsus sum, to use, enjoy.

Compos. abūti, deūti.

Vescor, vesci, —, to eat, feed upon.

The place of a perfect is supplied by idi.

IV. The deponent verbs of the fourth conjugation are, —

Adsentior, adsentiri, adsensus sum, to assent.

Also active, in the same sense, adsentio, adsensi, adsensus; but more commonly deponent.

Blandior, blandiri, blanditus sum, to flatter.

Experior, experiri, expertus sum, to experience.

But comperior, I learn, am informed, is only used in the present; perf. comperi from comperio.

Largior, largiri, largitus sum, to lavish.

Compos. delargior.

Mentior, mentiri, mentitus sum, to lie, to tell falsehoods.

Metior, metiri, mensus sum, to measure.

Compos. dimetiri, emetiri, and perimetiri.

Molior, moliri, molitus sum, to labor, strive, toil.

Compos. amoliri and demoliri.

Opperior, opperiri, oppertus or opperitus sum, to wait for, expect.

Orlior, orliri, orsus sum, to begin, commence.

Compos. exordiri and redordiri.
 Orior, oriri, ortus sum (ful. part. oritūrus), to rise.

The Pres. Indic. follows the third conjug. orēris, oritur, orimur. But imperfect either orirer or orērer. So the compos. coorior and exorior. But adorior has commonly adoriris and adoritur, instead of adorēris and adori-
tur. — The fut. part. oriundus has the peculiar sense "sprung or descended from."

Partior, partiri, partitus sum, to divide.

Compos. dispartior, dispartitus sum.

So also impartior or impartior. All these also active, partio, dispartio, and impartio.

Potior, potiri, potitus sum, to take possession of.

The Pres. and Imperf. Subj. sometimes follow the third conjugation, po- titer, potimur, poterētur, poterēmur.

Punior, puniri, punitus sum, (in- stead of the active punio), to punish

Sortior, sortiri, sortitus sum, to draw lots.

F. INCHOATIVE VERBS.

Inchoative verbs end in sco, and are formed either from nouns or adjectives, or from other verbs.

The verbs from which inchoatives are formed are commonly of the second conjugation, but the inchoatives themselves are invariably of the third.

The inchoatives derived from verbs generally have the perfect, and sometimes also the supine, of their primitives.

The inchoatives derived from nouns or adjectives either want the perfect entirely, or assume ui, like those derived from verbs.

The following lists exhibit the most important verbs of this class.

1. Inchoatives derived from verbs, with the perfect and su-pine of their primitives: —

Abolesco (oleo), ēre, abolēvi, abolētum, to be annihilated.

Adolesco (oleo), ēre, adolēvi, adul-tum, to grow up.

Conlesco (alo), ēre, coalui, coalitum, to conlesce.

Concupisco (cupio), ēre, concupivi, concupitum, to desire.
